Film Colony Fire Perils Thousands, Razes Homes

Some Dive Into Sea
Resort Hotel Burns
10 Missing in Blaze
Firemen in Danger

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Nov. 23.—Forest fires, the worst in the history of Southern California, blazed out of control on widely separated fronts in three counties tonight, leaving heavy damage and possible death in the Topanga Canyon region north of Santa Monica and in the San Bernardino Mountains.

Palatial homes of prominent motion picture personages were burned in the Topanga Canyon fires, which fingered out before a 45-mile wind on four fronts, threatening heavily populated communities cut off from communication.

More than a thousand fire fighters were in that region alone as the tinder-dry brush and timber carried the flames over hundreds of homes.

$1,000,000 Hotel Burns

A blaze originating on Strawberry Peak, between the Lake Arrowhead and Big Bear resorts, swept down the mountainside to burn the $1,000,000 Arrowhead Springs Hotel.

A Los Angeles County fire crew was completely surrounded by fire, Oka Stewart, an amateur radio operator, reported to authorities.

Life guards were rushed by speedboat to the Malibu district, famous motion picture colony, on a report that refugees from the flames had rushed into the sea.

The homes of Actor Richard Dix and Directors Sam Wood and Frank Lloyd were known to have been destroyed. All were above Los Tunas Canyon.

Thousands Flee Homes

Estimated thousands of refugees fled from their homes as the flames swept without warning to becloud the entire Los Angeles metropolitan district.

With telephone lines burned down, communication with most threatened districts was lacking.

Officers estimated that between 125 and 175 cabins in Lower Topango Canyon had been burned, and that a dozen homes and a store were destroyed at Castle Rock, between the Roosevelt highway and the ocean.

Some four or five cabins were burned in Las Tunas Canyon, further up the coast, and eight homes were swept away by the flames near the mouth of the canyon.

Tonight the fire was burning most heavily in Las Flores Canyon, some 2 miles from the film colony at Malibu Beach. It also was spreading in Temescal Canyon, back of Castellemare, a section of expensive residences.

1,000 Battle Conflagration

Charles L. Dice, Santa Monica police chief, estimated at least 300 homes had been destroyed above Santa Monica, but declared no reports of death from the flames had been received.

The men who remained behind to fight the fire in the Arrowhead Springs Hotel, in the San Bernardino Mountains, were believed to have escaped.

The fire which destroyed the hotel was burning in timber along a one-mile front on the crest of the mountains. Its advance was being contested by about 1,000 men, half of them fighting spot fires on the crest and others seeking to stem its advance in the foothills.

The Fernwood community in the Topango Canyon area escaped the flames, after fears for its fate had been expressed earlier.

Mistrial Denied For Warrings; Scherr Freed

'Protection' Cited
Leese Again Testifies
Government Rests

Justice Laws yesterday cleared one defendant in the Warring conspiracy trial and ruled the Government had made a case against the four others accused of plotting to defraud the Treasury.

"Protection" bribes paid policemen constituted proper evidence against the numbers gang, Justice Laws said and overruled a defense motion for a mistrial.

In disposing of motions that the jury be instructed to acquit all five defendants, the court said that the Government evidence must be so strong that it defeated every hypothesis of innocence.

Freed because the two acts alleged against him fell short of this legal standard was Henry L. Scherr, junior partner in a firm of tag experts, after a long argument by his counsel, Former Assistant District Attorney Goldstein.

Mistrial Refused

Enmeshed in the prima facie case established by District Attorney Pine and Assistant District Attorney Wilson were:

Emmitt Warring, 33, "brains" of the numbers gang, whose books showed a gross business in Washington of nearly $2,000,000 a year.

Leo Paul Warring, 35, who worked "8 or 10 hours a day" in the headquarters of the racket.

Expenses Argued

Attorney William B. O'Connell's demand that the hearing be declared a mistrial was the last blow struck by defense lawyers in an all-day legal battle to free the Warrings. The jury was kept out of court while the lawyers argued.

"I move," said O'Connell, "that all testimony about 'protection' be stricken from the record and that a juror be withdrawn because this evidence was improper. There has not been a shred of evidence that anybody bribed anybody except it has been testified that Emmitt War-

15% of Quota Still Needed In Chest Drive

Deadline Wednesday
It Rests With Public
Final Figures Dec. 2

With 84.49 per cent of the Community Chest goal pledged, the chairmen of six soliciting units last night promised continued efforts by their volunteer workers until the audit deadline next Wednesday.

With the goal of $2,127,000 essential for human needs in Greater Washington still unmet, the final noon meeting reports brought the total pledges to 175,248, amounting to $1,807,177.

Although this percentage is slightly less than the 85.85 per cent achieved at the final night meeting last year for last year's smaller goal, the money total is about $110,000 greater.

Final Figures December 2

Final campaign figures, which will include the added results from added efforts, are promised for publication on December 2.

"We lack $320,000 of the amount admittedly needed for the vital services and relief which Community Chest agencies must render to Washington residents next year," said Herbert L. Willett, director of the Chest.

"Before the final audit is taken, volunteers have seven days in which to keep plugging away for additional gifts," he said, and begged them to remember that "every additional dollar means that much additional human help."

Flather Praises Volunteers

William J. Flather, campaign chairman, stressed the fact that volunteers have done and will continue to do their part.

"If, when the final figures are in, we are still short of our goal, the responsibility will lie with the giving public of Washington, and not with the loyal and hard-working volunteers who have sacrificed so much in time, effort and money in order to help the underprivileged and unfortunate through the Community Chest," said Flather.

To the volunteers he said, "You know what you still have left to do. You know whether you need to call help to complete the covering in the neighborhood assigned to you. You know whether you have finished your own job and can offer to help someone else. Upon you we depend for the additional amount which we can show in our final audit on November 30."

Needy to Dine As Capital Gives Thanks

Basket Distribution
Pray for Persecuted
Praises for Liberties
Turkey in Prisons

With cool, damp weather in prospect, but deep, warm gratitude in their hearts, Washingtonians today will join the Nation in celebrating their annual Thanksgiving Day.

Prayers for the persecuted in other lands will mingle with those expressing thankfulness for America's blessings, as churches of all faiths lead in the holiday observance.

Jewish congregations will hold joint services at 11 a. m. at Tifereth Israel Synagogue, Fourteenth and Euclid streets northwest. Special services at St. Patrick's Church, with representatives of the Pan-American nations as guests and church dignitaries in attendance, will feature the Catholic rites at 10:30 a. m. At the Washington Cathedral Holy Communion will be observed at 7:30 a. m. and at 9:30 a. m., and Bishop James E. Freeman will lead morning prayer services at 11 a. m.

Baskets for Needy

United religious programs will be presented by numerous Protestant groups and denominations in various parts of the District, beginning with sunrise services at the Waugh Methodist Episcopal Church at Third and A streets northeast, at 6:30 a. m. and continuing through the day.

Harvest-laden baskets and specially prepared feasts will go to the city's needy. Keeping alive a tradition followed for more than 50 years, dinner will be served at the Central Union Mission from noon until "as long as is necessary." A half-hour broadcast from the mission at 1 p. m. will be joined in by various city churches. Two hundred baskets were distributed from the mission yesterday afternoon.

More than 1,000 needy men, women and children will be served Thanksgiving dinners at the relief station of the Volunteers of America, 471 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, beginning at 11 a. m. Family groups will be served together, in an effort to make the feast as "homelike" as possible.

"Lonely Strangers" to Dine

"All who come" will be served a sumptuous meal at the Gospel Mission, 214 John Marshall place northwest, between noon and 2 p. m. More than 400 hungry persons are expected. An "abundance of turkey" will be served to CCC boys in nearby camps to mark that organization's sixth anniversary. At Lorton Reformatory, the turkey meal will be followed by an evening of movies.

The sixth annual dinner for "lonely strangers" will be held at the Shoreham Hotel on a dutch treat basis, with Dr. Grace A. Thompson in charge. Dr. Thompson conceived the idea for the get-together dinner when her family was out of the city six years ago

Nazis Levy 1-5 of Jews' Fortunes

Payment Difficult Foreigners Exempt
Suicides Mount
Reich's Food Short

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Nov. 23.—A Nazi levy of 20 per cent on Jewish fortunes above $2,000 placed a new dilemma before hard-pressed Jews today while reports of Jewish suicides increased.

Many of the wealthier Jews, lacking cash to pay the fine, realized they would have to sell real property at whatever prices they could get, making it financially difficult or impossible for them to emigrate.

Some had to choose whether to remain in Germany until after August 15, 1939, when the last payment of the penalty is due, or to leave immediately and abandon all their property to the Nazis. In that case, they understood, emigration would be impossible without help.

Some Die to Aid Wives

Among the mounting reports of suicides were cases of Jews with Aryan wives who killed themselves to relieve wives of stigma and to enable them to collect life insurance.

The levy is to pay the $400,000,000 fine imposed on Jews for the assassination of Ernst vom Rath, secretary in the German embassy in Paris, by a young Polish Jew.

Foreign Jews are exempted.

Payments are to be made to the state treasury in four equal instalments due December 15; February 15, 1939; May 15 and August 15, without further notice.

Few Assets Liquid

This was considered part of "the last chapter of the Jewish question in Germany," in which Propaganda Minister Goebbels warned there would be no mercy until the Jew is driven from German life.

It is known that relatively few Jews have sufficient liquid assets to pay their 20 per cent in cash. Another difficulty was that of determining what their fortunes were on November 12, set in today's decree as the date for determining the Jews' financial status in connection with the fine.

One aspect cheered some persons—the provision whereby compensation paid by insurance companies for breakage during the November 10 anti-Semitic riots might be applied toward the billion-mark penalty. Title to such claims had passed to the government by a decree of Field Marshal Goering on November 12, but insurance companies were instructed today to pay those claims in the billion-mark fund.

Food Grows Scarce

An increasing shortage of certain foodstuffs was noted today, the United Press said. Apples, oranges and eggs were scarce and there was a shortage of veal, pork and onions.

[Nazi newspapers angrily told the democracies to mind their own business and stop expressing sympathy for Germany's Jews. They cited alleged atrocities against mi-

Secretary of the Interior Ickes took a slight lead last night over Representative Dies, of Texas, in the latest lap of their name-calling contest.

'Cheerleader for the All-un-American'

Dies was away fast at the barrier with a demand that Ickes appear before his committee and try to refute under oath recent testimony critical of the Secretary and his department.

But in midafternoon Ickes pulled abreast of the tall Texan with an outright assertion that Dies is "the world's outstanding zany."

(Webster on "zany:" "a clown, buffoon, or merry-andrew.")

Ickes then put his slightly retrousse nose in front with the remark that the testimony before Dies' committee (investigating un-American activities) is "garbage." At the turn he moved up again with the further remark that the hearings were "the most outrageous

McLeans to Sell 'Party' Home in 2-Million Deal

I St. Block Involved
End of Lavish Mansion
To Give Way to Offices

By Edward T. Folliard

The way was cleared yesterday for one of the greatest private real estate deals in Washington's history—sale of almost an entire block in the city's financial district for $2,000,000 and the erection thereon of a $7,500,000, 12-story office building.

The block is bounded by Fifteenth street, Vermont avenue, H and I streets northwest, and the property encompassed by the imminent transaction includes everything in the block but the Shoreham Building.

Sale Authorized

The McLean mansion at Fifteenth and I streets—famous for its New Year's Eve balls in the '20's and for the fact that economy-loving Calvin Coolidge got a "terrible stomachache" there after seeing the gold service—will come down to make way for a modernistic office building.

In District Court yesterday, Justice Oscar R. Luhring signed an order authorizing the American Security & Trust Co., as executor and trustee of the John R. McLean estate, to sell the property to the Lafayette Building Corp. for $2,000,000. Some details concerning leases and other matters need to be straightened out, but indications are that the deal soon will be consummated.

Put Up to Court

The bank put the matter up to Justice Luhring after Rear Admiral Mark L. Bristol, U. S. N., retired, representing Edward B. McLean, complained that the property was worth more and that no emergency existed to require its sale. McLean is a mental patient at the Sheppard and Enoch Pratt Hospital near Baltimore.

John R. (Jock) McLean 2d, 22-year-old son of Edward B. McLean and grandson of the man who built the mansion, approved the sale, saying through his attorneys that even if the property were worth

Chamberlain in France

Special Cable to The Post.

Paris, Nov. 23.—Several hours before the arrival in Paris today of Prime Minister Chamberlain and his foreign minister, Viscount Halifax, the French government announced the French-German "peace" declaration had been completed and would be published within a few days.

Essentially it resembles the agreement signed by Reichsfuehrer Hitler and Chamberlain in Munich, in that it affirms the willingness of both countries to settle their differences by consultation. It goes further in that it accepts the existing frontier.

German Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop may come to Paris some time next week to put his signature to the declaration.

British to Study Text

Meanwhile the text will be studied by the visiting British statesmen who, with Premier Daladier and Foreign Minister Bonnet, began consultations tonight about the armaments of both countries, the Spanish civil war, the events in the Far East, and relations with Germany and Italy.

Chamberlain and Lord Halifax were greeted at the Gare du Nord by Daladier, Bonnet and other French and British officials. A tremendous crowd was gathered outside, attracted by an almost incredible number of police and mobile gardes, armed with rifles.

As their car swung out of the station toward the British Embassy there were scattered cheers and a great deal of booing.

"Down with Munich," and "Long live Eden," were shouted out. Police held 16 persons on charges of committing a public offense against the head of a foreign state.

The British ministers came to France at a time when the Daladier cabinet was just barely holding itself in power. Its internal recovery

Planes for Hemisphere

By Barry Sullivan.

A mammoth fleet of fighting airplanes for the defense of the Western Hemisphere and the democratic nations is about to be built by United States factories working on a 24-hour basis, it was learned authoritatively at the War Department yesterday.

After consultation with aviation executives here, Army officials were understood to have set a goal of 1,000 planes a month to fill domestic and foreign orders. At the present time domestic factories are turning out about 320 planes each month.

With the tremendous increase in the number of planes produced monthly, military officials hope to create a preponderance of force to compel totalitarian states to deal upon a basis of equality with the great democracies and the nations of the Western Hemisphere.

Hull Opposes Barter

Two-thirds of the expanded production of planes, it was learned, will go to Latin American states and Great Britain and France in return for strategic raw materials, such as rubber, tin and manganese, in which the United States is without domestic resources of importance.

To obtain these needed resources with the least possible delay, officials of the national defense forces are believed to favor a system of barter agreements, but Secretary of State Hull is said to oppose any such policy as in conflict with his trade agreements program. The barter idea is only a proposal and may not be part of the final agreement.

As a result, the planes probably will be sold to other governments on a straight purchase basis and the United States then will buy the raw materials for its war reserves in the countries where American credits have been established. Details for obtaining money for the purchases remain to be worked out and are receiving the closest study at this time, it was said.

Industry Co-operative

Furthering this program, representatives of the War Department have just concluded a conference with officials of the aviation industry in which the removal of "critical bottlenecks in industry to increase its efficiency as a factor in national defense" was the principal question under discussion, Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson announced last night.

"As there is every evidence that there will be a marked increase in the Army's air program," he added, "consultation with leaders in this

Wintry Blasts To Whet Appetites For Turkey Today

Cold weather driving into the District on a northwest wind sent the mercury down from yesterday's high of 60, recorded about 1 p. m., toward an expected low of 28 during the night, and weather officials said light rain or snow would fall this morning.

Cloudy and cold weather through the day will be followed by the season's first hard freeze tonight, with still lower temperatures. Fair weather will return tomorrow, along with rising temperatures.

108-Mile Gale Lashes Britain

Crash Kills 2 Policemen Rushing to Debt Row

New York, Nov. 23 (A.P.).—Two radio car policemen were killed today as they hurried to the home of a woman who was quarreling with a plumber over a bill.

Speeder Pleads Fear of Sniper; Fine Reduced $5

Fear of the sniper prompted him to drive 40 miles an hour in the 6700 block Western avenue northwest, Thomas R. Tate, jr., 22, 2100 block of Yorktown road northwest, told Traffic Court Judge John P. McMahon yesterday.

Because of the plea Judge McMahon reduced Tate's fine from $10 to $5.

The speeding offense was committed last Thursday evening, a few hours later the sniper murdered his second victim, Peter F. Murray, less than a mile from the spot where Tate was stopped.

Deer Elusive, Garner to Eat Duck

Uvalde, Tex., Nov. 23 (A.P.).—Vice President Garner will substitute wild duck for venison on his Thanksgiving table tomorrow.

The Vice President went after deer yesterday for the first time this season and found the bucks wary. So he came home with a few wild ducks.

Passing Car Strikes Hitchhiker—on Thumb

Vigilantes Join Police to Balk New Attack by Crazed Sniper

Fearing that Washington's mad sniper might strike again in the fog last night, police of the District and of Montgomery County kept up a grim watch in Rock Creek Park, helped by civilian volunteers. The sniper had failed to appear up to an early hour this morning.

Assisting police were members of the American Legion, voluntarily enlisted in the hunt for the mysterious man who has killed two men and wounded four other persons in the last two weeks. Suspects arrested in recent days all were released, leaving police with nothing on which to base their search but empty shells and battered bullets remaining from the killer's previous attacks.

Other developments during the day were:

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, District police superintendent, met with his staff of commanding officers to plan details of a widespread search. He again offered every service and co-operation to Maryland authorities.

American Legion members of Chapel Haven Post No. 41, Silver Spring, offered a $100 reward for information leading to capture of the killer and offered to furnish armed men to augment police.

Bethesda police more than doubled their force of searchers, announcing last night that a dozen patrol cars, each manned by three men, would patrol the "sniper's" haunts until daybreak.

Meanwhile, Washington police yesterday released all suspects who in the past several days have been questioned in connection with the "sniper's" activities. The final suspect was released after a young couple who allegedly met the "sniper" face to face earlier in the week failed to make an identification.

Authorities admitted they were "against a blank wall" with release of the last suspect, but determined to "start from scratch" with redoubled efforts to apprehend the terror-spreading maniac.

In all sections of the fashionable Chevy Chase and Bethesda residential communities lights burned on porches last night and a few residents illuminated their property with flood lights.

Toy or Doll Is Admission Price To Benefit for Alley Children

Children of Washington's alleys have something for which to be thankful this morning, too.

Despite a standard of living that does not allow them to celebrate Thanksgiving with the feast that other children will enjoy today, they are happy in the knowledge that Christmas does hold something special in store for them.

For, once again, the Women's Council of the District of Columbia Federation of Churches, RKO-Keith's Theater and The Washington Post are co-operating to make this Christmas a happier one for the underprivileged youngsters of the District's alley areas.

A special children's entertainment has been arranged for Saturday morning, November 26, at which admission to the show will be one new toy or doll. All toys and dolls contributed will be distributed as gifts at the annual Christmas party for D. C. alley children.

Thus boys and girls of Washington, certain of a happy Christmas themselves, can share in the work of making less fortunate youngsters happier—and see a grand show in the bargain.

It is a grand show that has been arranged. The climax is to be kept a deep, dark secret until the very time of the performance. But, leading up to the surprise screen feature of the occasion, the following are programmed: "Edgar and Goliath," an Edgar Kennedy comedy; "White Magic," a Sportscope feature; "Tonneyville Picnic," color cartoon, and "Buckaroo Broadcast," a Ray Whitley Western musical.

The time—Saturday morning, November 26, at 9 o'clock.

The place—RKO-Keith's Theater, Fourteenth and G streets northwest.

The occasion—Benefit of the Annual Christmas Party for the alley children of Washington, under the sponsorship of the Women's Council of the District of Columbia Federation of Churches and The Washington Post.

(P. S.—We're sorry we can't disclose the secret of that surprise feature—but you'll be sorry if you miss it!)

Willkie Asks Curb on TVA To Aid Upturn

Sees Expansion Periled
PWA Also Assailed
Norris Backs Agencies

Wendell L. Willkie, aggressive utility chieftain, demanded an "end" to the "Federal threat" of utilities destruction embodied "in the TVA-PWA combination" during his testimony yesterday before the Congressional committee investigating the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The dark-haired head of the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation asserted his belief that "nothing can bring new capital into this great industry" as long as the TVA and the Public Works Administration are "unrestricted."

TVA'Is Challenged

But down in Chattanooga the venerable "Father of the TVA," Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, chuckled to reporters:

"The private utilities are bluffing and we have them licked."

The 78-year-old battler for public power ownership told the Associated Press that "TVA's rural electrification program has done more in bringing prosperity, happiness, satisfaction and progress to American agriculture than any other one factor."

On Capitol Hill, Willkie, whose company controls the Tennessee Electric Power Co., was slashing at TVA as "brutal, unfair, cruel and un-American."

Explains Squeeze Play

Willkie asserted that national recovery could be expedited by a $2,000,000,000 expansion in utility investment if the investigating committee would curb TVA and PWA.

Willkie, in the course of his testimony, challenged TVA to let the Securities and Exchange Commission arbitrate the lengthy dispute over the price TVA should pay for distribution properties owned by the Tennessee Electric.

At one point Willkie scowled at Francis Biddle, committee counsel, who was examining him, and said, "It's hard to speak of this thing without indignation."

Biddle snapped: "Will you just answer my questions without making speeches?"

Willkie retorted: "Yes, if you'll just ask me questions and quit making speeches."

Willkie outlined the "squeeze play" as one in which TVA produces and sells power below cost at the taxpayers' expense, while PWA offers cities 45 per cent grants to build distributing systems in competition with the utilities. He said:

"In effect the Government holds a gun to the head of the utility and says 'sell at our price or we'll duplicate.'"

Willkie referred to the recent utility-Government "peace," in which the major companies agreed to participate in the National defense program by spending an estimated $1,000,000,000 a year for two years. Willkie declared that unless the threat of Federal competition is removed, the utilities will spend less than $400,000,000 this year on construction and not more than a half billion yearly thereafter.

Sees Tremendous Lag

He pictured this as a tremendous lag, remarking that the utilities could well spend a billion and a half a year for the next five years in order to meet the Nation's growing power requirements.

Willkie then said that the answer to the natural question: "Why don't you do it then?" lay in the "log-jam" created in the industry by the Federal "threat."

He said that the truth was the private investor is afraid to put his money in utility issues, and will continue to retain this fear until the "threat" is eliminated.

Contentions of Willkie

Willkie's contentions included:

The TVA should go out of the power business and confine its activities to flood control, navigation and soil conservation.

Failing that, it should dispose of its power at the switchboard to existing utilities which would distribute the power under Federal and State regulation.

Failing that, the enormous loss due to duplication of existing facilities should be avoided and the TVA should buy utility properties in their entirety at a fair price.

The Congressional committee is not equipped for such a technical study as valuation, but the Securities and Exchange Commission is. Therefore the reference of the matter to the other Federal agency should be made.

Veiws of Biddle

Biddle held it was impossible, legally, for the TVA to delegate any of its functions to the SEC, as another arm of the Government. Willkie said some of the best lawyers in the United States had told him it could be done.

"But you cannot find authority for it in the act."

"Many things are done by the TVA that are not in the act," Willkie replied heatedly.

The only hurdle that the witness said he would not take was in selling out his properties for less than they were worth "just to make the TVA yardstick work." He said that he was defending, as a trustee, the rights of his common stockholders, in resisting an offer by TVA Director Lilienthal of approximately $66,000,000, which would not quite cover the senior securities.

The witness said he did not care which of the principal methods of determining value — reproduction cost less depreciation, or historical value—was used just so it was arrived at by a fair and unbiased tribunal. He specifically threw out the Federal Power Commission as being biased.

Tax Depreciation Squabble

One of the sorest subjects gone into by the witness and his examiner was that of the income tax depreciation which the company had placed its properties in reporting to the Government. Biddle was trying to make the witness admit that this was a correct figure. The witness insisted that it was common practice in making out income tax returns to use a higher figure than actual and cited a report by Arthur Anderson & Co., accountants, to prove it.

Another utility leader, Bernard F. Weadock, vice president of the Edison Electric Institute, told the committee that any large industry had a right to keep the public "informed of its activities." He made this statement to define, in his view, the institute's activities, described by Biddle as actually concerned wholly with propaganda.

Hopkins Held Roosevelt's Choice for '40

Impression From Farley Build-Up Is Seen
Opposition Pronounced

The Democratic leaders of the 21 Eastern and Southern States who conferred with Postmaster General Farley, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, in New York Tuesday, have come away with the impression that President Roosevelt's current choice as a successor in the White House is Works Progress Administrator Hopkins.

It was learned yesterday from participants that most of these party chieftains went back to their homes also with the set conviction that Hopkins would be nominated as Presidential candidate in 1940 "only over our dead bodies."

It was disclosed by the Democratic leaders that Thomas Corcoran, number one White House braintruster, had been sounding out politicians as to the chances of getting the nomination for Hopkins.

Hopkins' Biography in Offing

It also was said that a well-known newspaperman and author of several books had been approached with the idea of writing a biography of Hopkins. Such a volume would be calculated to appear for distribution at an appropriate interval before the next Democratic national convention.

What was said to be Hopkins' overwhelming drawback was the fact that he was an out-and-out New Dealer who was supposed to have aroused the enmity of many types of businessmen, alienated the farmers because of difficulties over farm labor, and made middle classes distrustful because of his identification with the concept of lavish spending.

There was the further fact, important to organization chiefs, that Hopkins has no history as a Democrat in the sense of being a party worker or elected official and has not "played ball" with many of the local politicians even though he has been accused of using the WPA rolls for political purposes. Also he backed the intended "purge" of party conservatives.

Farley Held Unsympathetic

What role Farley played in this part of the informal talk was not disclosed. It is known, however, that he sympathizes with the local leaders, that he has given political advice to the President directly opposed to that offered by Hopkins, and that he has no sympathy for the movement of the Administration New Dealers to name their own man.

Undaunted by the initial reception to the Hopkins' candidacy, the White House New Dealers are pressing him for a cabinet post "to build him up" and show the range of his executive ability. Already he attends every cabinet meeting. There is special significance in the talk of him for Secretary of the Navy, War, or Commerce. Emphasis is going to be placed on the armament program of the Government and Hopkins' friends believe a cabinet post connected with it will be both important and popular.

These New Dealers believe that the nucleus of local progressive organizations, the prestige of the President and the machine which the WPA itself comprises may be enough to push Hopkins to the nomination.

Camp Ovens Roar All Night With Turkeys for CCC Boys

Ton of Gobblers to Be Eaten in D. C. Area
Fechner to Dine on Virginia Battlefield
'Sniper's Shadow' Happy at Activity

Ovens roared all night in nine Civilian Conservation Corps camps last night as kitchen crews prepared 2,000 pounds of roast turkey for CCC youths' Thanksgiving dinner today.

Working in shifts, a crew of 13 men at Camp No. 14, in Rock Creek Park at Oregon avenue and Military road northwest, set a pace in cookery that was matched in CCC camps throughout the Nation, where 250 tons of turkey were being roasted.

More than 40,000 turkeys weighing 500,000 pounds will be consumed today by CCC enrollees, Robert Fechner, CCC director, said. More than a pound of turkey will be heaped on the plate of each man, he added.

Ton for Washington

A ton of turkey, which arrived here in refrigerator cars from Missouri, will be consumed in the nine camps in the Washington area, while 541 pounds will grace the tables of the three camps situated directly in Washington.

Despite the plentiful supply here, Director Fechner and a party of nine from CCC headquarters in the new Postoffice Department Building will eat turkey at Camp NP 4 at the Wilderness battlefields in Virginia.

Menus at the camps today will match those in the most exclusive restaurants and eating places of the Nation, thanks to a Thanksgiving Day increase in daily allowance for rations of 6 cents per man. Usual allowance is 39 cents per day for each man, but it goes up to 47 cents today.

Officers Buy Birds

Each camp mess officer arranges for purchase of his camp's supply of turkeys and trimmings, but every fowl eaten in the Washington area camps was furnished by a Southeast Washington wholesale grocer at 26½ cents per pound.

The line-up in mess halls in Washington's three camps today will include 175 boys and 196 pounds of turkey at Camp NP 14, 196 boys and 220 pounds of turkey at Camp NP 7, E street and Anacostia road southeast, and 125 pounds of turkey and approximately the same number of enrollees at Camp NA 1, Twenty-eighth and M streets northeast.

Menus at the three camps will be topped by fruit cocktail and followed up by cream of tomato soup, turkey with oyster dressing, mashed potatoes, English peas, stuffed olives, cranberry sauce, pumpkin pie and hot chocolate. In other parts of the Nation there will be slight variations.

"Sniper's Shadow" Happy

The entire Thanksgiving list, Fechner said, included 17½ tons of pumpkin, 1,500 bushels of cranberries, 100,000 eggs, 3,700 gallons of milk, 59 tons of potatoes, 22 tons of bread crumbs, 6 tons of onions, 2½ tons of butter and 8½ tons of sugar.

There was little sleeping at the local camps last night as crews seasoned and prodded browning birds. For one youth, Lewis M. Burgess, at Camp NP 14 in Rock Creek Park, the activity was especially welcome.

The camp is located in the area in which the mad sniper has stalked and killed two persons and injured two more, and Burgess has the lonely job of roaming the camp all night keeping fires burning. In recent weeks he has armed himself with a crowbar. The other enrollees call him the "sniper's shadow."

'Bumping Off' of Congressmen Is Confined to Office Suites

Several Representatives were "bumped off" yesterday and more will be "bumped off" tomorrow, but all are still healthy, despite the general meaning of that slang expression.

What it all adds up to is just this: Ever since election day House members and members-elect have been filing their preferences for space in the two office buildings. Assignments are governed by seniority in service. When an applicant gets "bumped off" that means someone who has served longer than he wants the same suite.

The applications are handled by Edward Brown, superintendent of the House Office Buildings, and his assistant, Frank Clarkson. When Congressman Fudd, we'll say, has been beaten out by one of his colleagues, they inform Mr. F. he has been "filed over." But among themselves and other Capitol employes it's "bumped off."

Here, though, is a real case in point. Driver (Democrat), of Arkansas, won't be back next January, and Luther A. Johnson (Democrat), of Texas, has applied for the office to be vacated. In turn, Burch (Democrat), of Virginia, wants Johnson's office; Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, is after Burch's; Arnold (Democrat), of Illinois, has applied for the Hoffman's, and Michael J. Kennedy (Democrat), of New York, would like Arnold's office.

All are present members except Kennedy, who was elected this month.

The wishes of all will be fulfilled—unless somebody "bumps off" somebody along the line. Johnson is an eight-term man, about to embark upon his ninth, and therefore a formidable applicant.

However, suppose a 9 or 10-termer puts in a bid for Driver's seat. That would gum up not only Johnson but Burch, Hoffman and all the rest.

This particular interlocking chain is, short, compared to some. There have been as many as 20 Congressmen figuring in such a series and the bumpoffs have been numerous, indeed.

Suites in greatest demand are those facing the Capitol; at least, those facing courts or located on the ground floors. Some House members are extremely finicky as to where they are placed, others wouldn't care if their offices were in the basement or attic.

Squabbles over office locations became so numerous that Congress passed a law 30 years ago to settle the issue once and for all. It provides that seniority shall be the deciding factor, when two or more ask for the same suite. Seniority being equal, the earliest bird gets the room.

Service must be continuous in the reckoning of seniority. A person who served 10 consecutive terms, was out a term and then is returned to the House is as much a freshman as the neophyte being sent to Washington for the first time.

Mrs. Roosevelt Joins Husband for Holiday; He Takes Swim, Rides Around Warm Springs

By the Associated Press.

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 23.—Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt arrived this afternoon from Birmingham, Ala., to join the President at Thanksgiving dinner tomorrow. They will be hosts to the infantile paralysis patients and their families at the annual Founders Day banquet. The President will make a five-minute talk about the Warm Springs Foundation's work, which will be broadcast over a national hookup at 7 p. m., C. S. T.

Before lunch today, the President went for a swim in the warmed waters of the foundation pool. In the afternoon he and Mrs. Roosevelt took a long ride, taking in the Roosevelt farm.

Earlier the President announced the recess appointment of Otto Kerner, present attorney general of Illinois, as Federal circuit judge of the Seventh Circuit; Michael L. Igoe, now United States attorney at Chicago, to be Federal district judge for the Northern District of Illinois, and William J. Campbell, youth administrator for Illinois, to Igoe's place as district attorney.

Rivers Heeds Roosevelt

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 23 (AP).—Heeding criticisms from President Roosevelt, Gov. E. D. Rivers placed upon Georgia legislators today responsibility for enacting laws which would enable the State to go into debt to match Federal public works project funds.

A 60-year-old constitutional clause restricts borrowing by the State.

"We have already worked out a program of legislation to this end," Rivers said. "From the reception thus far, I feel there will be every co-operation from the Assembly (meeting in January) to accomplish this desired status."

The President's declaration that Georgia, his "other home," was the only State in the Union which had failed to co-operate on public works was made unexpectedly late yesterday at Warm Springs, his Thanksgiving vacation site. He said Georgia would not receive another red cent until it had set up enabling acts.

Through various devices, Georgia received allotments of $9,809,127 under the 1938 PWA program. Its "equitable share of total funds, computed on the basis of population and employment need," had been estimated by PWA executives at $14,118,000.

Wage and Hour Unit Set up by Justice Chief

Brill Is Named Head
Former Dewey Aide
Plan War on Chiselers

By the Associated Press.

Attorney General Cummings established a sepcial investigative unit in the Justice Department yesterday to check on violators of the wages and hours act.

Earlier, Elmer F. Andrews, the wage-hour administrator, had declared that the Government would not let "chislers get away with their practices any longer."

Joseph E. Brill, who recently resigned as aide to District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, in New York, was named key man in the new unit. He will be assisted by ten attorneys who were ordered transferred yesterday from Thurman W. Arnold's antitrust division.

Helped Fight Rackets

Brill, who will be in charge of all litigation involving alleged violations of the labor standards act, has had experience in investigating and trying bankruptcy, customs and racketeering cases.

Andrews voiced belief that interstate industry had enjoyed ample opportunity to adjust itself to the 25-cents-an-hour minimum wage and 44-hour maximum work week prescribed by the new law.

Meanwhile the National Labor Relations Board ordered an election held as soon as possible to determine collective bargaining wishes of employes of the Postal Telegraph Co. and 35 affiliated corporations.

The workers may choose as their representative the Commercial Telegraphers Union (A. F. of L.), the American Communications Association (C. I. O.), or neither.

The elections will be conducted by Mrs. Elinore Herrick, New York labor board regional director.

All employes of Postal's "land line system" will be eligible to vote except managers, wire chiefs, executives, and general supervisory employes. Also excluded are workers in Washington, Oregon, Northern Idaho and Montana and certain workers on the Illinois Central Railroad system south of the Ohio River.

Urge Yielding to Unions

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—The only barrier to industrial peace, in the belief of two members of President Rosevelt's commission on industrial relations, is the failure of industry to recognize that it must not resist unionization.

The members—Mrs. Anna M. Rosenberg, regional director of the social security board, and William H. Davis, former deputy NRA administrator, told a trade and commerce bar association dinner here that elimination of American industry's fight against unions would probably establish workable industrial relations here, such as now exist in Great Britain and Sweden.

Miss Perkins Plans Conference on State Labor Laws

Secretary of Labor Perkins last night announced she would call a conference of employer representatives soon to discuss improvements in State labor legislation, including proposals for a model State wage-hour law covering intrastate business.

In a letter to Donald D. Keim, manager of the Colorado State Chamber of Commerce, she said she had "found that progressive employers have a genuine interest in good labor laws, soundly administered."

Her letter appeared to limit the conference to State labor legislation plans, heading off discussion of employer demands for major amendments to the Wagner act or the wage-hour law.

Keim had suggested that businessmen be consulted on labor legislation after he attended the recent national conference on State labor legislation here.

WPA Fraud Trial To Begin Jan. 23

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Nov. 23 (AP). Forty-six of 73 defendants charged with WPA fraud and conspiracy today were ordered to trial in Albuquerque January 23 by Federal Judge Colin Neblett.

Judge Neblett dismissed charges against A. C. Holzworth, former WPA zone employe, who was among 47 persons named on the one blanket indictment by the Federal grand jury October 20. They were dismissed on motion of U. S. Attorney Everett Grantham on unspecified grounds.

Among those who will go to trial are Stanley W. P. Miller, suspended assistant United States district attorney; Fred C. Healy, former State WPA administrator; Joe Martinez, secretary to Senator Dennis Chavez, and Mrs. Anita Tafoya, sister of Senator Chavez.

Ex-Senator Berry Buys Part of Newspaper

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 23 (AP).—Wallace Edwards, publisher of the Nashville Times, announced today ex-Senator George L. Berry had acquired a "substantial interest" in the Times and had been elected chairman of the board of directors.

Berry was defeated for renomination in the August Democratic primary.

Huge Slum Project Proposed for New York

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—A tremendous slum clearance program for New York City to be financed in part by a new one-cent cigarette tax was proposed today by Park Commissioner Robert Moses. He suggested a $200,000,000 loan from the State, and said 10 projects providing low-rent apartments for 120,000 persons could be built.

The Political Arena

Landon Suggests Lehman for 1940
LaGuardia Glum About Presidency

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—Alf M. Landon tonight joined the old political game of "cross-nomination," offering New York's Gov. Lehman as the 1940 Democratic Presidential candidate, but not advocating his election. Landon said:

LEHMAN

The woods are full of Republicans, but I think there is one outstanding Democrat, and that is the man who has just been elected for the fourth term as the Governor of New York State."

Vacationing in California, Lehman declined comment.

Asked whether he had any one in mind for the Republican nomination, Landon replied:

"You haven't heard Jim Farley nominating any Democrats, have you?" Farley recently said Senator Vandenburg (Republican), Michigan, was the man the Democrats probably would face as a presidential nominee.

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—Mayor LaGuardia replied thus today to a woman who wrote that if he advocated the New Deal he never could be President of the United States:

"Thank you for your note. I could not get even a gallery seat to a convention of either of the parties, much less a nomination. I have no illusions about it."

Secretary Ickes twitted his brother Cabinet officer, Secretary Wallace, yesterday over the latter's implied rebuke to Ickes for having sent up a Roosevelt third-term "trial balloon."

Asked at his press conference whether he believed Paul McNutt, Philippine commissioner, was a "middle of the road" presidential candidate, Ickes replied:

"If I should make a comment about the possible candidate in 1940, my colleague in the Cabinet, the Secretary of Agriculture, might take me severely to task. I haven't asked his permission to express myself, so I won't do it."

Ickes told a previous press conference that the recent election indicated the Democratic Party might be forced to draft President Roosevelt for a third term. Wallace, at his press conference a few hours later, said he did not believe a Cabinet officer should discuss at this time the possibility of the President running again.

Ickes was asked yesterday:

"Are you starting a Wallace boom (for President)?"

Ickes replied:

Mead to Ask Merit Plan for All U. S. Jobs

Would Include WPA
Favors Reorganization
Expects Its Approval

Predicting passage of "at least part" of the Administration's reorganization program at the coming session of Congress, Senator-elect James M. Mead (Democrat), of New York, said yesterday his first act in the Senate would be to introduce a civil service extension bill.

Mead, who was a member of the House Reorganization Committee, and sponsored civil service features of the reorganization bill recommitted by the House, said he would recommend breaking down of the program into specific measures and efforts to pass them separately.

This strategy was initiated in the House last session, but after the Senate approved an omnibus bill House leaders pooled all their measures in a single bill, which failed of enactment.

"I do not see why a somewhat modified program should not get through, if the bills are handled separately," said the newly elected Senator, who succeeds the late Senator Copeland, of New York. "We must, of course, give Congress the right to veto by a majority vote of both Houses any reorganization orders issued by the President.

"As soon as Congress convenes, I intend to introduce a bill that will extend civil service to every employe of the Government. If it is carefully drawn, I think it will pass."

Mead said he would work for passage of a bill creating a new Department of Welfare, into which WPA and other emergency agencies would be merged; for a bill revamping the General Accounting Office setup, and for a separate measure giving the President new secretarial aid. Each of these items was included in the President's reorganization program.

AFL Opposes Profit-Sharing Incentive Tax

Green States Policy Manufacturers Cool Sheaffer Is Witness

By Robert C. Allright.

A Senate committee proposal to grant special tax relief to companies sharing profits and "regularizing" employment yesterday met emphatic opposition from the American Federation of Labor and a cool reception from the National Association of Manufacturers.

William Green, president of the A. F. of L., said labor was not opposed to the principle of profit-sharing, but was "unalterably opposed to using the tax power of the Government to promote profit-sharing plans." He proposed that collective bargaining be extended to the field of profit-sharing.

H. Boardman Spalding, finance committee chairman of the manufacturers' organization, likewise condemned incentive taxation as a means of regularizing employment, but said his association had reached "no conclusion" on tax relief for companies having profit-sharing plans. He said the association felt if it conceded the principle of incentive taxation "it would have to concede the other side—punitive taxation."

Sheaffer Testifies

It was the third day of Senate hearings on profit-sharing plans in industry, and means to promote them. Hearings were adjourned until next Monday after C. R. Sheaffer, of the Sheaffer Pen Co., of Fort Madison, Iowa, described his company's profit distributions to employes, which he said "almost equals those to stockholders."

Green told the committee that labor, while favoring the principle of profit sharing, must be given a voice in determining what constitutes profit and their distribution, as well as bargaining rights in establishing wages.

Used Against Unions

"So-called profit-sharing plans were mainly developed by corporations that attempted to substitute for real collective bargaining an arrangement termed employe representation, which, for the most part, was the form without the substance," Green testified. "This background militated against developing profit-sharing on a sound basis."

The A. F. of L. chief said that, nevertheless, the profit motive had been a powerful force in developing benefits from resourcefulness and efficiency and "we do not wish to limit the scope of its operation.

"We therefore propose that collective bargaining be extended to the field of profit-sharing as rapidly as possible," he said. He told the committee that "recognition of real partnership and frank aceptance of the privileges and rights derived therefrom would be the greatest incentive to sustained efficiency in work that industry could devise."

Asks Voice for Labor

If management and labor are to consider profit-sharing, Green said, production and cost records must be equally available to union and management, and sales policies and records must be mutually considered. He said salaries of executives and officers and returns to investors must be subject to the same conditions, and financial policies must be subjected to review. As a partner, he said, "labor would have a voice in determining rates of profit-sharing" after wages were fixed by collective bargaining.

Green particularly condemned proposed amendments to the social security act to provide tax credits for company funds alloted to profit-sharing.

As Spalding, of the National Association of Manufacturers, went on record against tax incentives for regularizing employment, Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, declared he was "amazed" at his stand. He said it was in conflict with views of "thousands of employers."

Resolution Approved

Spalding said the association's executive committee approved the following resolution:

"We are opposed to the proposal that any special tax relief or incentive be granted to companies having regularized, except as they may exist under State unemployment compensation law. Any such tax treatment in the general tax laws would tend to subsidize employers who find it economically feasible to regularize production and employment at the expense of those who are unable to do so."

Explaining that this association was still studying tax concessions in connection with profit-sharing plans, Spalding obtained permission from the committee to appear again when the N. A. M. determines its position on this point.

Vandenberg Poses Query

When Spalding said his committee felt that if incentive taxation were approved, it would imply an indorsement of the contrary principle of punitive taxation, Vandenberg said "they'll get that anyway."

"If the association is in favor of the merit-rating system in State laws, why is it not in favor of Federal incentive taxation?" the Michigan Senator said. "It seems to me they applaud the only concrete example of incentive taxation and then condemn the principle."

Sheaffer said his firm every six months paid each employe 5 per cent additional on his wages, for every dollar of dividends distributed to stockholders. He said these wage distributions amounted to 10 per cent last year, and would reach at least 7½ per cent this year.

"Manufacturing at a profit depends on the wholehearted co-operation of employes," said Shaeffer. "A little letting down by the workers would turn profits into a loss."

norities in the democratic countries, including a story entitled "The Shameful State of the Indians in the United States."

[The desire of foreign Jews to see Hitler and his aides assassinated was the subject of a bitter blast by the newspaper Boersen Zeitung, which cited a letter appearing in a New York newspaper, suggesting American convicts be released from prison and sent to Germany to assassinate the Fuehrer.—Editor's note.]

Danzig Goes "Aryan"

German Jews' despondency increased on learning that the Free City of Danzig, former German territory on the Baltic, put into effect a decree applying the Nazi principle of "purity of blood."

The decree eliminates Jews from public office, permits the retention of citizenship, but bars them from voting on matters of state administration and forbids Jews to display either the Danzig state flag or the Nazi swastika.

Only a relatively small number of Jews was affected—5,774 of the 8,270 residing in Danzig.

N. Y. Publisher "Traitor"

Berlin, Nov. 23 (AP).—The newspaper Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung applied the phrase, "a traitor to German-Americandom," today to Victor F. Ridder, New York publisher, in connection with an account of an address in New York November 21 in which he appealed for racial tolerance.

Ridder, publisher of the German-language daily, New York Staats-Zeitung und Herold, visited Germany in April, 1933, not long after Reichsfuehrer Hitler came to power, and warned Nazis their anti-Semitism was losing them many friends in the United States.

'Trial of Nazis' Seen in Case Of Grynszpan

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

Paris, Nov. 23.—The murder trial of Herschel Grynszpan, 17-year-old Polish Jew who said he "obeyed an irresistible impulse" when he assassinated Ernst vom Rath of the German Embassy here, May be turned into an "international trial" of Nazi methods against the Jews, taking its place with such court dramas as the Reichstag fire trial, the Dreyfus case and the more recent "purge" trials in Moscow.

This became apparent tonight when it was reported that the father of the slain 29-year-old diplomat, Rath, might become a civil party to to the charges against Grynszpan and send a prominent German lawyer to aid in the prosecution.

The German lawyer would be arrayed against France's two most famous criminal lawyers, Vincente Moro-Giafferi and Henri Torres, who have undertaken the defense of the youthful Grynszpan.

They were brought into the case largely through a defense fund being raised in the United States under direction of Dorothy Thompson, newspaper commentator.

Moro-Giafferi and Torres are expected to base their defense on Grynszpan's sufferings and the sufferings of his parents in Germany under naziism, on his extreme youth and—foremost of all—on a general indictment of the Nazi regime.

Under French law, which permits the sale of guns to minors, any killer over 16 can be condemned to death, but it appears doubtful whether the state prosecutor will ask the guillotine.

[The question of whether the trial would be open or secret hung on a decree law held up by a cabinet disagreement, the Associated Press reported.

[Said in informed quarters to have been Germany's price for a formal declaration of friendship with France, the decree provided for secret trial of cases likely to have "international repercussions."—Editor's note.]

Grynszpan sat remorseful and despondent today in the Fresnes Juvenile Prison writing the story of his life.

The youth knows little of the consequences of his crime in Germany but he has announced that he will fast each Monday—the day of the shooting—in atonement "for the innocent man I killed."

Deporting of Jew Refused as 'Cruel'

Chicago, Nov. 23 (AP).—Federal Judge Philip L. Sullivan refused today to order deportation of a Jew to his native Czecho-Slovakia because "under conditions as they now exist in central Europe" it would be "cruel and inhuman punishment."

Judge Sullivan granted the petition of Solomon Weinberg, 31, a produce handler, charged with illegally entering the United States 11 years ago, for a write of habeas corpus freeing him.

program had the country in an uproar. The trade unions were preparing for a one-day general strike.

[Police and mobile guards started clearing 40 North France factories of 26,000 sit-down strikers who oppose the government's lengthening the 40-hour week, the Associated Press said.

Accord's Text Brief

[Informed sources said the text of the German-French accord would be brief, following this line:

[A simple declaration of non-aggression;

[A statement that neither country has any specific controversy with the other and an agreement to submit all future disputes to consultation rather than to threaten each other with war.

[The second section would embody mutual recognition of the existing French-German frontier. Germany would thus promise in writing to lay no further claim to Alsace-Lorraine, provinces returned to France by Germany after the World War and the cause of disputes many times in history. Reichsfuehrer Hitler made such assurances in addresses during the Czech-Slovak crisis.

British Pledge Expected

[The French-British military understanding last April 29 was expected to be broadened to pledge Great Britain to unconditional and instant military aid to France. The present agreement gives Britain the right to decide what to do in case of a German attack on France.—Editor's note.]

The cabinet hoped that by announcing the declaration with Germany internal war might be softened down.

The text was drawn up some weeks ago, but withheld for the right moment. At first the Germans delayed it, demanding first that the French press attacks on the Reich be curbed. Bonnet submitted such a decree to the cabinet two weeks ago, but it was thrown out.

When it looked as if the accord would be held up indefinitely, the German government decided it would be wise to make it public, despite the failure to curb the French press in an effort to soften public opinion abroad against the persecution of the Jews.

The French government is reported tonight to be still preparing to hold out for full acceptance of the provisions of the London non-intervention agreement, before granting belligerent rights to Gen. Franco, Spanish insurgent army leader.

The executive committee of Daladier's Radical Socialist party passed a resolution to this effect.

Rome-Berlin Axis Agrees to Revamp Culture, History

Special Cable to The Post.

Rome, Nov. 23.—A vast scheme for co-ordinating Fascist and Nazi intellectual and artistic activities in what is called a "cultural Rome-Berlin axis," was adopted today with the signing of an Italo-German cultural agreement. Professors, teachers and students are to be exchanged and school text books revised "with regard to historical truths and to the spirit of Italo-German understanding."

In addition, provision is made for "repressive measures to be used against the politically mendacious literature of political exiles directed against the institutions and regimes of the two countries."

Flag Association Begins Campaign For Americanism

By the Associated Press.

A patriotic revival campaign intended "to give a hearing to Americanism" began last night under auspices of the United States Flag Association.

Col. James A. Moss, president general of the organization, said in a Nation-wide broadcast that the campaign would continue until flag week next June.

He explained that the program called for a "minimum of two hours of patriotic service per month for each of the 130,000,000 of the country's population."

Patrick J. Hurley, former Secretary of War, who is executive chairman of the sponsoring committee, asserted the campaign was designed to mobilize public service "to support tolerance, liberty and Americanism."

Mrs. Stephen H. Pell, chairman of the National Women's Party, speaking from New York, pledged co-operation by the women of the country. With Henry L. Stimson, former Secretary of State, she is co-chairman of the sponsoring committee.

250 Are Missing In New Landslide

Castries, St. Lucia, British West Indies, Nov. 23 (AP). — Continuing rains today caused a new 400-foot avalanche at the deserted scene of landslides of the past two days which have taken a heavy toll of life.

Rescue workers listed 250 persons as missing and said the exact death toll probably never would be known. Bodies of 56 dead have been recovered. Scores were injured, and more than 500 refugees were being cared for.

Dies came up fast, however, with the announcement that on Saturday he would reveal his selections for this year's "all-un-American" team, and that the cheerleader for the "class hatred," or "first team," will be none other than Secretary Ickes.

But in the evening Ickes whirled into the stretch in a surprise move that sent him several lengths ahead as he released a new statement alleging that Dies had been giving "aid and comfort to a propaganda campaign of a foreign dictatorship," since he was "not content with besmirching citizens of his own country."

Resents Indian Blast

The doughty little salt-tongued Secretary said that the Dies "inquisition" in its testimony Tuesday denouncing the Interior Department's administration of Indian affairs had been picked up by the foreign press, and added:

"I have said before that Mr. Dies' sideshow has gone far beyond the bounds of propriety and decency, but when it comes to feeding falsifications to inimical foreign forces, I believe the American pepole should take heed.

"The use by Mr. Dies of his committee as a sounding board for spreading anti-American propaganda is a dastardly assault against democracy, in addition to violating every accepted standard of patriotism."

At press-time the Secretary was far ahead in the heat of the nip-and-tuck battle of invectives that has lasted since August. So far he has not dropped a heat to the House prober of the subversive, but veteran observers maintained that Dies is a threat and may overtake the flying Cabinet member yet.

Dies, in announcing that he will release Saturday his complete selections for the all-un-American teams, said that one aggregation will be titled the "class hatred" team and another the "race-and-religious hatred" team. For cheerleaders he said he had a "wealth of material," but that Ickes, WPA Adminstrator Harry Hopkins and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins seemed certain choices.

Dies added that to make the "all-un-American" a permanent organization, he was preparing to have struck a pile of lead medals, engraved with a suitable quotation and depicting a coiled rattlesnake.

These, he said, he would send with a suitable letter of award to any public official or group leader who made a speech or remark that Dies deems subversive enough to warrant consideration of the man for the year's "all-un-American" team.

One problem, he said, was the filling of the post of "left end," as numerous persons, according to the committee's testimony, are vying for that "honor." He was seriously considering last night a proposal to have a left end, a lefter end, and a leftist end, with no right end.

Hull Declares Isolation Is 'An 'Illusion'

Lima-Bound Tomorrow To See Wilson on Ship U. S. Prestige Rising

Secretary of State Hull, hastening preparations to sail tomorrow at the head of the United States delegation to the Lima, Peru, conference of American States, declared last night that "isolation and self-sufficiency are illusions."

Only by breaking down barriers and diversifying the points of friendly contact between nations, he said in a radio address, "can disaster be avoided and our civilization endure."

The Secretary made arrangements for a between-ship conference at New York tomorrow with Ambassador Hugh R. Wilson, recently ordered home by President Roosevelt for report and consultation on the German persecution of minority groups. The ambassador is to reach quarantine aboard the Manhattan at 3 p. m. tomorrow, 2 hours before Hull and the other United States delegates to Lima sail on the Santa Clara. Wilson will be taken by cutter from the Manhattan to the Santa Clara for a discussion of the German situation before the latter ship sails.

To See Roosevelt Next

The ambassador then will proceed to Warm Springs, Ga., to report to President Roosevelt on conditions in the Reich.

Secretary Hull said at his predeparture press conference yesterday that the Lima gathering will mean a wider exchange of ideas and information, much fuller understanding of other countries' conditions and problems, and closer friendship with them, together with more effective economic, social, moral and political co-operation along mutually desirable and beneficial lines.

Growing indications that Lima will see determined efforts to bring about a united American continent against political or economic encroachment from the dictator countries add significance to each succeeding development along the lines of inter-American co-operation, President Roosevelt's recently enunciated doctrine of continental defense, as contrasted with national defense, has attracted wide attention, with both praise and some criticism in this country.

Prestige Held Growing

Findley Howard, Minister to Paraguay, on a visit home, was quoted yesterday as saying the United States campaign for better relations with South American republics is making headway. President Roosevelt's help in settling the Bolivia-Paraguay Chaco dispute has heightened this country's prestige, Howard told the Associated Press at Columbus, Nebr.

The State Department announced yesterday an agreement had been signed with Brazil for continuance of the United States military mission there for two more years, and addition of an ordnance officer to the four army officers already on the mission.

The purpose of the mission, the department said, is "to co-operate with the general staff of the Brazilian army and to superintend and assist in courses given at the Brazilian coast artillery instruction center."

"Isolation An Illusion"

In his Nation-wide N. B. C. broadcast last night, Secretary Hull said that "the rapidity and completeness with which events and reactions to events become known is one of the outstanding characteristics of our age."

"Even if we should wish to do so," he added, "we are not allowed to forget the outside world or to ignore our neighbors. The development of our modern system of communications brings nearer and nearer home to us the fact that isolation and self-sufficiency are illusions; and that interdependence and the need for co-operation are fundamental."

Chile "Sympathetic"

Santiago, Chile, Nov. 23 (AP).—An official statement of the foreign office tonight said the Chilean delegation to the Pan-American conference at Lima December 9 would carry instructions to make "more effective the system of reciprocal consultations" in any case endangering peace in America.

"The system of consultations should work and we expect to see it perfected at Lima," the statement added, referring to the inter-American conference at Buenos Aires in 1936 which adopted a collective security convention pledging consultations should American peace be menaced from any source.

The statement said President Roosevelt's statements proposing solidarity among nations of this hemisphere had been received with "greatest sympathy," and added:

"It may be said until the concrete proposal is known that it is not intended to recognize doctrines or practices already obsolete nor the establishment of a pattern of continental isolation, but to crystallize the solidarity of American nations."

U. S. News Film Suppresed, Simon Praises Kennedy

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 23.—United States Ambassador Kennedy was praised by a Government spokesman today in connection with suppression of an American newsreel which the British government felt would hamper peace negotiations during the recent Czecho-Slovak crisis.

Kennedy's name was mentioned in the House of Commons by Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer, who spoke for Prime Minister Chamberlain in a heated debate on opposition charges of censorship.

Kennedy's own version was that he merely passed along the British request to the office of Will Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers-Distributors of America.

Kennedy said it was "inaccurate to give the impression" that he "personally took any action which caused the newsreel to be changed."

Premier Resigns

BELA IMREDI

Failure to Get Ruthenia Fells Imredi Cabinet

By the Associated Press.

Budapest, Nov. 23.—Premier Imredi's failure to obtain the eastern part of Czechoslovakia for Hungary—an aim that was opposed by Germany—brought about his resignation today.

The test vote followed desertion of 61 of the 160 members in Parliament of Imredi's National Unity Party who were dissatisfied with the premier's weakening on the question of annexation of Carpatho-Ukraine (Ruthenia) and the establishing of a common frontier with Poland.

It has been widely reported here, without confirmation, that the government's attitude changed after Germany had delivered fiat representations opposing Hungarian ambitions.

Admiral Horthy, the regent, deferred appointment of a new premier until tomorrow.

Italy was reported to have switched to opposition to Hungary's aims in Ruthenia after having supported them.

Speculation concerning possible premiers brought up the names of the former premier, Koloman Daranyi, who is counted as distinctly friendly to Germany; Count Paul Teleki and Franz Keresztes-Fischer.

Some leaders of his party hoped Imredi would be renamed after being given a chance to compose his differences with recalcitrant parliamentarians.

Sudeten Assails Peace of Munich

The Munich pact was called an instrument of war rather than peace yesterday by Karl Deutsch, Sudeten German, in a luncheon address before the American League for Peace and Democracy at the Cosmos Club.

Declaring that Germany was already over-industrialized, Deutsch said that further aggression, probably in the Balkans, was made essential by the Reich acquisition of additional industrial areas from Czecho-Slovakia.

Franco Bombs Barceloha

Hendaye, Nov. 23 (AP).—Three devasting bombings of Barcelona and a continuing insurgent push on the front west of that city gave evidence tonight of a mounting campaign against Catalonia, northeastern section of government Spain.

Some government advices said the raids by eight insurgent war planes killed at least 50 and wounded 120 persons.

After pushing government armies across the Ebro River in northeastern Spain to the east bank, the insurgent command asserted its forces were reducing rapidly the government salient on the west bank of the Segre River.

The insurgent command summoned 31-year-old reserves to the colors. The move was taken to indicate the severe battles beginning in the Ebro sector last July had depleted insurgent Gen. Franco's manpower.

Sun Never to Set On the Iron Lung

London, Nov. 23 (AP).—Viscount Nuffield, motor maker and philanthropist, announced today he intended to provide every hospital in the British Empire with an "iron lung."

He said that he would donate about 5,000 respirators costing $2,500,000. Lord Nuffield has given away nearly $65,000,000 in the last two years.

Manila Reports Japanese Attack on Filipino Officials

Manila, Nov. 23.—The Island of Coron today said 200 Japanese made a mass attack on Filipino officials, and constabulary headquarters at Manila prepared to rush troops there. One Japanese fisherman was killed and two wounded in the skirmish. The incident occurred Saturday, but the news was delayed in arriving here.

Jitaro Kihara, acting Japanese consul, said he was not investigating the matter.

Tugwell Wed To Girl Once His Employe

Ceremony Is Secret Divorced Last August LaGuardia Officiates

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, Nov. 23.—Rexford Guy Tugwell, chairman of the city planning commission, and Miss Grace Falke, director of art projects for the National Youth Administration, were married this afternoon at City Hall by Mayor F. H. LaGuardia. The ceremony proceeded with the greatest of secrecy.

Several hours later reporters received the following note from Tugwell:

"Mr. Tugwell was married this afternoon by Mayor LaGuardia to Miss Grace Falke, director of art projects for the National Youth Administration. They left the city for a brief trip."

Witnesses at the ceremony were Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Bartlett, not further identified.

Divorced Last August

Tugwell's first marriage to the former Florence Arnold ended in divorce in Yerington, Nev., on August 25. The couple was married in Buffalo on June 7, 1914.

Tugwell was one of the President Roosevelt's original brain trusters. He was appointed Assistant Secretary of Agriculture in 1933 and became Undersecretary of that department in 1934. Later he became director of the Resettlement Administration, a post which he resigned in November, 1936, to become an executive of the American Molasses Co. He is a former professor of economics at Columbia University. Tugwell has two daughters, Tanis, 21, and Marcia, 14.

Once His Employe

Mrs. Tugwell, who was employed in Washington in charge of developing handicrafts and fine arts under the National Youth Administration, is a small young woman with chestnut hair and gray eyes.

She went to Washington four years ago from Buffalo, N. Y., as administrative assistant in the Resettlement Administration. Tugwell then was head of that organization.

McLeans to Sell 'Party' Home in 2-Million Deal

McLean

$300,000 or $500,000 more it would be wise to sell for cash, because nobody could tell how deeply the new tax laws would cut into the profit from a higher price. He contended that a slackening of demand for Government offices would impair the value of such buildings.

Edward B. McLean, jr., and Evalyn Washington McLean, younger children, agreed to abide by the court's decision.

Negotiations for the sale of the property and the construction of the office building have been handled by Weaver Bros. Inc. Preliminary plans for the building call for a structure of roughly triangular shape, with facades on the four streets. It would have 10 stories, with a set-back of two more stories. The modernistic style of architecture would be followed and the entire building air-conditioned.

Mansion for Parties

In her best-seller autobiography, "Father Struck It Rich," Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean relates that her father-in-law had the late John Russell Pope design the I street mansion "for entertaining—nothing else." The elder McLean, she said, lived there alone in "princely magnificence," but later on she and her husband preferred to live at Friendship, using the downtown house almost entirely for the purpose for which it was designed—entertaining.

The New Year's Eve balls given there in the Harding and Coolidge years were world famous. Cabinet officers, diplomats, Senators and Representatives, admirals and generals mingled with cave dwellers in the magnificent ballroom and danced till dawn to the music of two famous orchestras. Invitations were keenly sought, and men and women who were overlooked were known to go out of town merely to have an "alibi."

There was one occasion, according to Mrs. McLean, when the I street house served as a sanctuary for the Hardings. They had been receiving threatening letters at the White House, and were told that something would happen to them on Christmas Day. Mrs. Harding asked Mrs. McLean to let them spend that day at the I street house, and a small party was arranged. President Harding, "Ned" McLean, Harry Daugherty and Senator Charles Curtis played bridge and poker, while Mrs. Harding and Mrs. McLean went to the little theater downstairs and watched a movie—Mary Pickford in "Little Lord Fauntleroy."

Beneficent Assassins

Secret Service men were in and around the house. Nevertheless, according to Mrs. McLean, the sudden slamming of a door caused Mrs. Harding to scream and slide from her chair. The President, however, seemed amused, and when he left at 2 a. m. for the White House, he said:

"I am very grateful to my assassins for a very pleasant Christmas Day."

Vice President and Mrs. Coolidge paid their first visit to the I street mansion on March 4, 1921, the occasion being an Inauguration Day banquet. Mrs. McLean noticed that Coolidge was very nervous and stared at her glittering jewels and at the gold service. He couldn't eat, and in the end confessed that he had a "terrible stomachache." Mrs. McLean dosed him with baking soda, and they became friends.

Once WPA Office

Later on Coolidge was invited out to Friendship to play golf, and astonished Harding and the others in their plus-fours by appearing in long pants and suspenders.

The I street mansion, with its brocade walls, its mahogany staircases and its great pipe organ, is now the headquarters of a Government agency, the National Bituminous Coal Commission, which pays $25,000 a year rent. Previously it was occupied by WPA.

The Walsh mansion at Twenty-first street and Massachusetts avenue, built by Mrs. McLean's father, was once occupied by the Rural Resettlement Administration, but is now vacant.

Capital Dines Needy for Thanksgiving

Thanks

and she faced the prospect of eating a "festive" dinner alone. The idea has been taken up by others in other cities.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt, in accordance with their usual Thanksgiving custom, will spend the day in Warm Springs, Ga., where turkey and cranberries will be served to youngsters at the health center for infantile paralysis treatment.

Passover food for 275 needy families and aid in providing for 150 children at the Hebrew Education School here will be provided from proceeds of a dance sponsored tonight by the Kolker Progressive Society.

Collections for Charity

A proposed social and recreational center, Casa Italiana, will benefit from a concert sponsored at 8:30 p. m. by the Washington Chapter of Dante Alighieri.

Collections in many of the churches will go toward special charitable enterprises.

An an expression of thanks for "the liberties and blessings enjoyed under the Stars and Stripes" the U. S. Flag association has urged that flags be displayed from all American homes throughout the day.

School children in the District, as well as in adjacent Maryland and Virginia, have a holiday until Monday. Attendance at festive family dinners, at choice football games, and at fraternity dances will mark their celebration.

The Iowa State Society and Sigma Nu Phi members staged Thanksgiving dances last night, as did the Washington Lodge of Elks.

LaGuardia Happy; 5 Notables Talk On Dead 'Mike'

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—There was a hint of a chuckle in Mayor LaGuardia's voice when he was told today that Park Commissioner Moses, whose $245,000,000 low-cost housing proposal the mayor doesn't like, was talking into a dead microphone last night when he outlined his plans.

"So they were just playing solitaire," said the mayor, informed that not only Moses but former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, two borough presidents and Councilman Joseph Clark Baldwin as well, were cut off the air by city radio station WNYC.

"No one would pay for the wire charges," said the mayor, "so the program couldn't go on."

The speakers claimed they didn't know the "mikes" were dead. In fact, they said, an announcer and engineer were staging a fine imitation of two men broacasting some speeches.

Express Rate Hike For South Hit by Wallace in Plea

By the Associated Press.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace asked the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday to refuse to permit any increases in express rates on agricultural products.

The Railway Express Agency, Inc., has applied for permission to revise its rate structure in an effort to add $10,000,000 yearly to its revenues.

"The financial situation of the company may be depressed," Wallace said in a brief filed with the ICC, "but it is probably not as depressed as that of the farmer shipping by express . . .

"Further increases in express rates at this time will merely accentuate efforts to divert traffic to other agencies of transportation."

Watchman Foils Leap Off Bridge

Grabbed by a watchman as she allegedly prepared to leap from the Eleventh Street Bridge, Miss Hazel Petrillo, 35, of 635 I street northwest, was in Gallinger Hospital last night.

James Swafford, 47, 241 Eleventh street southeast, watchman, told police he saw the woman remove her coat and walk to the bridge railing. She started to climb the railing when she was stopped by the watchman and an unidentified motorist.

Locked in the watchman's shanty, she was quoted as saying: "I want to die and you can't keep me from it." Swafford said she would not say why she wanted to end her life.

Silver Spring Firm Submits Low Bid

A. W. Vinton & Co., Silver Spring, Md., offered yesterday to reconstruct a bulkhead at the Dahlgren (Va.) Naval Proving Ground, for $19,700.

Other low bids received by the Navy included $21,375 by Brundage & Crandall Co., Sudley, Md., and $21,876 by W. P. Thurston Co., Richmond.

1 Held, 3 Sought In Truck Seizures Caused by Strike

One man was arrested and three were sought last night in connection with a strike of 60 truck drivers at the Griffith-Consumers Co., coal and fuel oil dealers.

The arrest followed the company's complaint that strikers were seizing trucks, taking the keys and dumping coal in the streets. H. Rozier Dulaney, president of the company, said he saw little chance of an amicable settlement, charging union representatives refused to submit their complaints to the National Labor Relations Board.

Police were holding a colored man for investigation after Lonnie Green, colored, 28, told police he was pulled from his truck by four men. He said three held him while the fourth removed the ignition keys.

Captain to Describe Cruise in Small Boat

The log of an 18-month circuit of the world in a small boat will be presented to members of the National Geographic Society in an illustrated lecture tomorrow evening at Constitution Hall, by Capt. Irving Johnson. The crew of Johnson's boat, Yankee, was made up of himself and his wife. The single passenger was their infant son. Among the out-of-the-way places touched during the trip were Bali, Tin Can Island, Samoa and the Galapagos Islands. Motion pictures will illustrate the talk.

$1,700 Stolen By 'Customer'

Nearly $1,700 worth of cash and checks were stolen from the office of Phillips & Canby Realty Co., 1012 Fifteenth street northwest, yesterday afternoon by a colored man.

Report of the theft was made by Norma E. Beckett, office employe, who told police she left the office for a short time and when she returned the man was there.

He inquired about a house for rent, she said, and, afte rhe left, the money and checks were missing. Banks and business places were notified to be on the lookout for the checks.

Mistrial Denied For Warrings; Scherr Freed

Warring

ring said so and who knows whether that is true or not?"

Justice Laws refused.

O'Connell and Harry T. Whelan are defending the Warrings. Former District Attorney Rover is counsel for Sadur. They and the prosecutors entered court yesterday loaded down with law books.

All morning the lawyers argued to have stricken out testimony of the Government's star witness, Internal Revenue Agent H. Watson Leese that he figured the Warrings' living expenses to be at least $10,000 apiece, which must have been income since they admitted they got no money except out of the numbers racket. He also testified that they must have made $4,432 early in 1934—which was not reported for income taxes—because they lost that much on numbers later in the year and paid off promptly.

Justice Laws allowed the living expenses to remain in the record but ruled out the $4,432. He reconsidered his ruling in the lunch recess and in the afternoon reversed it and let all Leese's testimony stand saying he expected more information to come from Leese on cross-examination.

Rover, speaking for all defense counsel, said they did not wish to cross-examine. Laws said he would ask the questions himself. Leese explained again how he figured up a man's living expenses, saying he put the Warring figure at $10,000 on the basis of their general style of expenditure. He pointed out that once in 1936 Emmitt Warring took $1,000 out of the bank and that nobody knew what he did with it.

Defense Objects

Defense counsel objected to the whole procedure. The court will give his ruling on the questions Monday.

"The Government rests," District Attorney Pine announced as Leese left the stand. Justice Laws then excused the jury until Monday and Whelan moved that the Warrings be freed.

Whelan challenged the Government theory that bribes are not a lawful business expense deduction for an illicit business.

Government witnesses have said Emmit Warring spent large sums, greater than the tax returns showed he got out of the numbers racket. The Government claims, that therefore, he failed to report part of his income and so did his brothers who must have drawn as much as he did out of the "three-way split" numbers racket.

Expenditures, Whelan argued, do not of themselves prove income.

He claimed also the Government case has consisted of admissions by the Warrings and of outside evidence that confirmed these admissions.

Case Held Insufficient

Only two acts were charged against Scherr in futherance of the conspiracy. They were that he placed $250 a week the Warrings said they paid in bribes in their "loss" column instead of listing it in the expenses; and that he swore that Sadur made in his own office changes in the tax papers which two Government agents swore were made at the Treasury.

Justice Laws said neither of these acts defeated all the possible hypotheses of innocence. Assuming that Scherr's statement was false, he said, this might be perjury, but it could have been done to help his brother-in-law. In that case, it was not part of the conspiracy and since the Government evidence did not exclude this idea he was constrained to hold that the case against Scherr was not sufficient. He made the same ruling about the hidden protection money, saying there was no proof that Scherr knew the expense was not a lawful deduction from income tax. And since Scherr was on trial not for bribery but for conspiracy to hold out income taxes, the proof was not enough.

As to the other four, Justice Laws rejected their motion without argument.

Forbidden to read the newspapers or discuss the case, the jurors will not learn until Monday that they are going to acquit Scherr. When court reopens after the holiday they will be instructed to bring in a verdict of not guilty.

Great Artists Play At Godowsky Rites

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—Great musicians of the world played his favorite pieces today at funeral services for Leopold Godowsky, pianist and composer.

Mischa Elman, the violinist, played "Larghetto Lamentoso" from Godowsky's piano sonata. Josef Hofmann, the pianist, played the first movement of Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata." The Jacques Gordon String Quartet and Charles Courboin, organist, played other funeral pieces.

Two hundred mourners attended.

Fireman Fined In Auto Death

Changing his plea from not guilty to guilty, Keith L. Bell, 35-year-old District fireman, was fined $250 and given a suspended jail sentence of six months in a negligent homicide case at Police Court yesterday.

Bell was held by a coroner's jury in connection with the death of Stanley Duda, also a fireman, November 17, 1937.

It was testified that Bell had been drinking shortly before his car, in which Duda was a passenger, struck another machine and overturned on Benning road northeast.

Army Sets 1,000 Warplanes A Month as Goal for U. S.

Planes

industry was a necessary factor in War Department planning.

"One result of the three days of informal meetings and discussions was the unanimous agreement and willingness of the manufacturers to co-operate in any Government defense program."

Although 1,000 planes a month, the present German production capacity, is believed to be the immediate goal, the ultimate objective for the United States industry is twice that number of aircraft, high officials state.

With these ends in mind, aviation officials were asked to come to Washington to formulate plans for increasing their present production capacities.

Army May Get 9,280

Their advice and the conclusions reached at the conference, it was indicated, will shape President Roosevelt's forthcoming recommendations to Congress on National defense.

Johnson already has hinted that the President may ask authority for an Army Air Corps of more than 9,280 planes, exclusive of the 3,000 already authorized for the Navy.

Congress also may be asked to lend financial assistance to a plan for creating a large army of civilian fliers to bolster the air rearmament program.

Efforts to build up such a flying reserve, similar to those in Germany and Italy and to a lesser extent in Great Britain, to insure an adequate number of pilots in a national emergency, apparently have been started by the Army Air Corps which has surveyed the possibility of increasing the number of fliers by instituting aeronautical courses at land grant colleges.

The Civil Aeronautics Authority also is understood to be developing a plan to encourage private flying.

250,000 Planes Urged

"We have no mandate to militarize civil aviation," Chairman Edward J. Noble, of the C. A. A., said recently. Turning the aim of the airplane from economic to military use is a matter for military experts. But we can give them the material to be expert with."

He advocated such an increase in private flying that the United States would have 250,000 civilian airplanes in daily use. At present it has about 10,000.

Germany's standing air force a year ago was estimated to contain no fewer than 110,000 men. The number of pilots and technicians in the service remains unrevealed. The United States Army and Navy combined have about 4,400 regular and reserve pilots on active duty.

Consideration of aircraft needs is only part of a general re-examination of the whole sphere of national defense now underway on the order of President Roosevelt.

To further the investigation the Government is co-operating with major industries in the preparation of plans for the mass production of tanks, gas masks, artillery, semi-automatic rifles and other essential war equipment as well as planes.

The series of conferences were initiated after a survey showed the armed services to be lacking in equipment and that the country would be hard pressed in event of an invasion. The Army alone is dependent upon industry for 7,300 defense requisites, high officials said.

Of this total, 55 are critical items—those not manufactured in peacetime because there is no demand.

To fill the gap the Army has devised an "educational and experimental plan" to encourage industries to manufacture critical items. The last Congress voted $2,000,000 for the educational orders, but officials state that the amount is so small in comparison to the needs that it can be spent for only six of the items, chiefly for experimentation with semi-automatic rifles, anti-aircraft guns and certain new types of shells.

Over-Expansion Feared

Although anxious to co-operate with the Government in its national defense program, officials of the aviation industry have pointed out the danger of increasing production capacity without some assurance that there will not be an abrupt drop in orders after the completion of the military building operations.

Over-expansion, it has been suggested, could be avoided by adapting the existing facilities of automobile plants so that plane motors, propellers and other parts could be turned out on an assembly line basis.

The parts then could be assembled without causing excessive enlargement of airplane plants equipped to manufacture aircraft in their entirety.

Plants at Capacity

Manufacturers were asked by the War Department to submit estimates on their capacity to take additional Army orders. With foreign governments already in the market for planes, officials of the industry were compelled to inform the Army high command that their present facilities are already working at top speed and that no immediate letdown could be predicted. War Department officials, therefore, are said to be fully aware of the difficulties to be surmounted before further Army and Navy orders for aircraft can be placed.

The Army is conferring with the Boeing concern for the production of bombers of the "Flying Fortress" type. Negotiations for building fast pursuit planes are under way with Curtiss, it was understood, while the Navy is sounding Consolidated on the possibility of expanding the construction of patrol boats. Building of transport and bombing planes by Douglas also is in contemplation.

Other aviation interests represented at the conference were Glenn Martin, North American, Lockheed, Vultee, Stearman, Chance-Vought, Sikorsky, Bell and Seversky.

High Court to Get Suit Over Elizalde

Porfirio U. Sevilla, president of the Philippine Exporting & Importing Co., said yesterday he would take his litigation against Joaquin M. Elizalde, resident commissioner of the Philippines, to the Supreme Court. Federal District Court Monday dismissed a suit in which Sevilla charged that Elizalde was not entitled to his post here.

The court held it lacked jurisdiction to decide on a political appointment.

Sevilla said there were 21 members of Congress who would challenge before the House Elections Committee Elizalde's right to a seat. He said he could prove Elizalde was not a full-fledged citizen of the Philippines before his appointment.

Cinema Festival Brings Famous Films to Town

'Janosik' Is Slovakian 'Robin Hood'
Kiddies' Xmas Matinee at Keith's Saturday
Amusement Facts and Fancy

MRS. LOUISE NOONAN MILLER and Abe Tolkins, who preside over the destinies of the Little Theater, announce an innovation in motion picture exhibition that should prove of unique interest to every discriminating observer of the world-wide progress of the motion picture.

BELL

Washington's first International Cinema Festival—and only the second of its kind ever celebrated in the United States—will be inaugurated at the Little Theater on Sunday with first Washington presentations of "Janosik," the last film ever to be imported to this country from democratic Czecho-Slovakia. "Janosik," will be but the first of a long list of distinguished films that will be presented at the Little over a period of six weeks.

During the course of the festival, picture-goers of the National Capital will have opportunity to view representative feature pictures of 12 nations, all produced since the introduction of sound to the screen in August, 1926. Nations represented include the United States, England, France, Switzerland, the U. S. S. R., Sweden, Ireland, Mexico, Spain and pre-Hitler Germany and Austria, the latter two being designated by the significant letters "B. H."—Before Hitler.

Many of the pictures never before have been shown in this city; others will be revived because of their recognized merit; still others are listed in response to preferences expressed by Little Theater patrons through the means of a long ballot and popular voting. Some of the pictures have been secured with the greatest of difficulty by the Little management after long negotiations. Owing to the unsettled conditions abroad, a considerable number of films have been obtained for the festival which, later, probably will not be available to any exhibitor anywhere in the world.

Twenty-two features and ten short subjects, of artistic or documentary value, appear on the list of celluloid treats to be made available to local audiences. Every film in the catalogue has been awarded one or more honor merits in this country or abroad.

Because the Little Theater can devote only six weeks to this commendable enterprise, three complete changes of program a week will be necessary. These will occur on Sunday, Wednesday and Friday of each week.

In arranging their programs, Mrs. Miller and Mr. Tolkins have paid particular attention to the vital matter of supplementing each feature with short subjects appropriate to its subject matter and the manner of its presentation. These short subjects have been chosen, regardless of age, with an eye single to building harmonious co-ordinated programs.

It is interesting to note, incidentally, that the only other festival of this nature ever sponsored in this country was arranged by the Fifth Avenue Playhouse, in New York, last July. Originally planned to run two months, New Yorkers demanded an extension of six additional weeks.

Having previewed it yesterday morning at 11:30, in the Rialto Theater, this column is able to vouch for the intrinsic merit of "Janosik," the festival's inaugural attraction, opening at the Little on Sunday. Janosik was the Great Liberator of the Slovakian peasantry, living early in the eighteenth century. Comparable to George Washington, in the early history of these United States; Bolivar, in Venezuela; Kosciuszko, in Poland, and others who have delivered their people from virtual serfdom to some degree of human rights Janosik assumed the role of a sort of Carpathian Robin Hood, who plundered the rich to succor the poor through an admirable and exciting brand of brigandage that was as lawless as it was effective and picturesque. The period of his life treated in the picture begins with the year 1711. There is a handsome giant of a man by name of Palo Bielik playing the title role. He towers to the height of 6 feet 4 inches, and makes all of the "Robin Hoods" we are familiar with on this side appear like a group of kindergartners out for an afternoon of butterfly-chasing. The background of Carpathian Mountains is as rugged as the action participated in by Janosik and his brigands. If the cinema festival can keep up the pace set by this picture, it ought to run for a year.

Through the co-operation of The Washington Post and the Women's Council of the District of Columbia Federation of Churches, steps already are being taken to provide a Merry Christmas for the Capital's underprivileged alley children.

On Saturday morning of this week, November 26, a special "Kiddies' Program" will be presented at RKO-Keith's, with the further helpful co-operation of Manager Hardie Meakin. A special bill has been assembled for this occasion, to be featured by screen subjects peculiarly appropriate to the age of the audience and the purpose of the undertaking.

Children's admission to this splendid entertainment will be one toy per child. More than one, of course, will be doubly welcome and doubly appreciated, but one will get any youngster in to enjoy the time of his, or her, young life. For adults, alone or accompanying children, the admission charge will be 25 cents for any seat in the house.

Considering the character of the entertainment that will be presented and the use to which the toys will be put, this is an exceptional amusement value that should serve to pack RKO-Keith's to the roof—and the homes of the slum children to the same degree with unexpected happiness on Christmas morning.

Speaking of RKO-Keith's, an unusually interesting and timely issue of the "March of Time" will be presented as a third major feature of the bill opening today on Fifteenth street. The "Time" release, augmenting "Peck's Bad Boy With the Circus" and Walt Disney's "Ferdinand, the Bull," is devoted to "Uncle Sam—The Good Neighbor" and reports on the State Department's work to keep this country out of war and in constant pursuance of a "good neighbor" policy toward other nations. More than six months were required to photograph the material for this "March of Time" story. It is the only behind-the-scenes State Department picture ever made.

What is described as "an amazing new personality" is promised in the headline spot of the stage bill beginning tomorrow at Loew's Capitol Theater. This 260-pound entertainer has recently appeared in the following Paramount screen features: "Turn Off the Moon," "This Way, Please" and "Good Night, Ladies." He also has been seen in RKO-Radio's "Music for Madame" and the Columbia feature, "Starf Cheering." Romo Vincent is the name. From the West Coast, where he is better known than in the East, come exciting reports about his being "the finest singing and comedy master of ceremonies in the business." Note that that says "finest"—not merely "biggest." We shall see what we shall see.

Although we caught that 'Janosik" screening in the middle of the night at 11:30 a. m. yesterday, we still had two strikes called on us on the day. An excess of official business delivered swift kicks over the heart to the projected plan to sit in on the preview of "Girls' School" at 1:30 and Miss Bankhead's streamlining of that Baltimore & Ohio train, in Union Station, at 3:30 p. m. So there won't be any "more of this later"—much to my regret. So you have something to be thankful for today, anyhow.

Gentle-Dig-to-the-Ribs Note

Today's Outstanding Contract Stars!

ONE OF THEM, AT LEAST, IS GIVING THANKS

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 23.—Arthur Treacher did a soft shoe dance with Shirley Temple in "The Little Princess" which is a wow. But will it be left on the cutting-room piazza, as so many of those scenes are?

HEDDA HOPPER

We love Shirley and know she's wonderful. She's surrounded by the best casts money can buy. But the last few pictures haven't been so hot, because just as you settle back to enjoy some comic antics by Bert Lahr or Joan Davis, they flash on a huge close-up of Shirley. Which may, or may not, be good for her, but not so hot for us. Everyone wants to know why they buy an expensive cast to back up the child favorite if all they do is offer a series of intimate facial expressions of the little princess?

The Ritz Brothers are lately getting their old vaudeville pals jobs. Barney Dean, Al Kay and Sammy Cantor have all acted as their stand-ins. Now they've graduated—they're turning into gag writers, secretaries, and bits. A new shipment of troupers is on its way from 'round the old Palace Theater in New York. And Two-a-Day," a cavalcade of vaudeville which is playing in a local theater, was sold out two weeks in advance. You can't buy your way in. Vaudeville, it would seem, is not coming back—it's here!

Fay Holden, Mother Hardy of the "Hardy" clan, was surprised this morning when she found a golden pheasant sitting in the front seat of her car. Obviously a pet, the bird never moved when she entered. Attached was a note, "Dear Mrs. Hardy: Your home was pointed out to me. I'm a little girl 12 years old. You remind me so much of my mother who passed away three years ago that I wanted you to have my pheasant which she gave me. Signed, Sara Grindle."

The Chester Morris children had just seen "Robin Hood." So little sister, 7, stood in the center of the library with an apple on her head which Brother Brooks, 11, tried to shoot off with a water pistol filled with ink.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Nov. 23.

THE STATE DEPARTMENT is beginning to send radio transcriptions to South America to combat Nazi and Fascist propaganda there. The recordings are being made at 17 W. Forty-sixth street . . . The two German members of the National Press Club in Washington declined to attend the club's dinner to President Roosevelt on Saturday . . . Mrs. Burleigh Grimes went to the domestic relations court yesterday to secure a summons for nonsupport against her brother—a famous C. B. S. comic. The proceedings were called off when he agreed to pay for her board at the Y. W. C. A. . . . Dorothy Thompson's defense fund for Grynzspan already has passed $30,000.

AT 2 O'CLOCK this morning, Leo Dealys, of the song team Clark and Dealys, tried to enter the Stork Club and was stopped at the door . . . "I'm sorry, but you can't come in," the guardian of the gate informed . . . "But why not?" Dealys asked . . . "Because," was the explanation, "you once worked here. Any entertainers who ever worked here can not enter as guests" . . . Dealys is consulting his attorneys today and will bring a $250,000 action against Sherman Billingsley, owner of the club.

LENI RIEFENSTAHL, Hitler's girl friend, lunched twice last week at the 21 Club—whose Mooey-mooey proprietor is Yonkel Kriendler, the Baron of Rivington street . . . Lupe Velez has arranged for a nose operation, and then recuperation—both from the operation and "You Never Know"—in Honolulu . . . Paul Wendel, whose hoax confession postponed Hauptmann's execution, and who is suing Ellis Parker and the others who kidnaped him, has applied to sue as a poor man. Wendell, whose detention as a material witness was the costliest in the history of N. Y., thereby will save $35 in court fees.

CLIFFORD ODETS, who wrote "Golden Boy," yesterday met Rouben Mamoulian, who will direct the movie version of that play . . . "You should write the screen play, too," Mamoulian urged. "After all, you know the play so well, and I have so much confidence in your knowledge of drama presentation" . . . "I'm glad to hear you say that," Odets laughed. "Because once, when you directed 'Marco's Millions' for the Theater Guild, the best I could get out of you was a part as one of the galley slaves, without a line to speak." . . . "Well," Mamoulian consoled, "another of those galley slaves was Henry Fonda" . . . "Yes," replied Odets, "but he was in the No. 1 company. I was in the No. 2."

FORMER LEGISLATOR Nathanson and Louis Kassman, the bail-bondsman, will receive prison sentences despite their guilty pleas and confessions involving others . . . A Brooklyn magistrate has been named, together with four assistant prosecutors—as having rushed bail proceedings for notorious gangsters, to avoid their being taken to headquarters for a possible third degree and appearance in the line-up . . . Chelly Knickerbocker is threatening suit, because "Cafe Society" is being used as a screen title.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY Dewey now is in Bermuda recuperating from the excitement of the recent gubernatorial campaign . . . On election night a reporter assigned to his headquarters penciled some notes while Dewey was talking . . . "There's nothing for you to write about in here," the district attorney exploded. "Everything here is completely off the record" . . . The reporter nodded and drew pencil lines through the words he just had written—the words: "He is remarkably placid, complacent—almost benign."

Benchley Will Winter in Gotham

Hollywood town will settle down to a normal existence for the next few months, when one of its zanier citizens leaves.

Comedian Robert Benchley is hieing himself back to New York to take up his duties as drama critic for one of Gotham's bigger magazines, for the fall and winter months.

Benchley will finish his latest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer one-reeler, "How to Spend Your Lunch Hour," his third comedy of the new season, and then leave Hollywood.

'Golden Boy' Next Offering At National

Frances Farmer in Cast 'Great Waltz' Opens Other New Bills

"Golden Boy," Clifford Odets' most successful play, will open an engagement of one week in the National Theater next Monday night. The principal feminine role in this Group Theater production is played by Frances Farmer and the title part by Elia Kazan, one of the country's outstanding young actors. The story is of a young musician who became a prize fighter for the sake of the quick money he could earn in that profession, as against the penury of struggling artistry. Included in the supporting cast are Roman Bohnen, Phoebe Brand, Lee J. Cobb, Curt Conway, Will Lee, Harry Bratsburg, John O'Malley and Louis Polan. There will be the usual matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

With the melodies of Johann Strauss II. to form a lavish musical background, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has assembled an equally noteworthy cast for the principal roles in the picturization of "The Great Waltz," opening on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater today. The stellar roles are played by Luise Rainer, Fernand Gravet and Miliza Korjus, a new importation. They are supported by Lionel Atwill, Hugh Herbert, Al Shean, Alma Kruger, Minna Gombell, Bert Roach, Greta Meyer, Herman Bing, Henry Hull, Sig Rumann, Christian Rub and hundreds of others. The story is based on the spirit of Strauss' life and the temper of his time, rather than upon a definite pattern of historical fact. "The Great Waltz" is the most sumptuous film operetta ever produced.

"Angels With Dirty Faces," opening tomorrow on the screen at the Earle Theater, brings James Cagney and Pat O'Brien back to the type of roles they play best. They are supported by a cast exceptionally well equipped to do full justice to a vivid and vicious melodrama of the underworld, which has not been matched in excitement in recent seasons. Also in the cast are George Bancroft, the "Dead End" kids, Humphrey Bogart, Ann Sheridan, and numerous others. Cagney is cast as the toughest of the killers; O'Brien as the slum parish priest. The stage bill for the new week will be headlined by Patricia Norman, recently heard at the Earle as soloist with Jan Garber's Orchestra. Other vaudeville specialties will be presented by Willie, West and McGinty, in "A Billion Building Blunders;" The Keene Twins, Vic and LaMarr, the Four Dudleys and the Earle Roxyettes.

Suggested by the "Peck's Bad Boy" stories, "Peck's Bad Boy With the Circus" will open a week's engagement on the screen at the RKO-Keith's Theater today, with Tommy Kelly in the name part. All of the life and glamour of the big tops is reflected in the background of this amusing drama of juvenile adventure. Also in the cast are Spanky MacFarland, Ann Gillis, Edgar Kennedy, Benita Hume and Leatrice Joy. As an extra added attraction, RKO-Keith's is showing Walt Disney's cartoonization of the famous whimsy of "Ferdinand, the Bull." Added short subjects and a new Pathe News will complete the bill.

Opening today on the screen at Loew's Columbia Theater, "Just Around the Corner," Shirley Temple's latest, and in many respects best, starring vehicle, will renew its downtown popularity after a successful week at the Capitol. Supporting the diminutive star in this subject are Charles Farrell, Claude Gillingwater, Bill Robinson, Joan Davis, Bert Lahr, Cora Witherspoon and scores of others.

Fredric March and Virginia Bruce are the pictured co-stars of "There Goes My Heart," announced as major screen feature of the bill beginning tomorrow at Loew's Capitol Theater. The story was written by Ed Sullivan and enlists the services also of Eugene Pallette, Nancy Carroll, Patsy Kelly, Alan Mowbray and a long cast under the direction of Norman E. McLeod. It is all about a very rich and haughty young woman and a newspaper reporter with some very bizarre ideas. Claude Gillingwater is again prominently assigned in this one. The stage bill will be headlined by a personality new to the East—Romo Vincent, singing comedian, who has been seen in numerous pictures, but never before on a Washington stage. Other acts will embrace the 16 Rhythm Rockets, Ben Yost's Variety Coeds, Lucienne and Ashour, sensational dancers; Charlie Master and funnyman Joe Besser.

Columbia Pictures' production of "Girls' School," comes to the screen at the Metropolitan Theater today for a week's engagement. Anne Shirley, Nan Grey and Ralph Bellamy are cast in the roles of prime importance, supported by Gloria Holden, Margaret Tallichet, Noah Beery, jr., Doris Kenyon and Cecil Cunningham. Based on a story by Tess Slesinger, the drama depicts the joys, heartbreaks and first romances of a group of young girls and is said to be one of the outstanding hits of the year.

In addition to Thanksgiving, today will mark the celebration at the Belasco Theater of the American premiere of the French-made picture, "Orage," costarring Charles Boyer and Michele Morgan, a leading woman new to the American screen. Although it will be presented continuously afternoon and evening, the 8:30 performance will take the form of a gala premiere, to which many distinguished guests have been invited by the Belasco management. The story is of a "storm" in the lives of three people when a strange and unwanted love springs up between two of them. Alexander Brailowsky's piano rendition of "Valse Brillante" will be continued as an extra added offering.

The featured short subjects on the new bill at the Trans-Lux Theater, opening tomorrow, will be "Provincial Quebec," a travelogue; "Aladdin's Lantern," an "Our Gang" comedy; a "Stranger Than Fiction" subject, and Walt Disney's cartoon, "Brave Little Tailor." The program, as usual, will be based on Newsreel coverage of world events.

The Little Theater's "International Cinema Festival" will be inaugurated on next Sunday with first Washington presentations of "Janosik," a Slovakian subject of the first order. This picture will run through Tuesday only. On Wednesday and Thursday of next week, "A Nous la Liberte," Rene Clair's celebrated French production, will be the Little's feature, to be followed on Friday and Saturday by Howard Hughes' production of "Scarface," staring Paul Muni, with Ann Dvorak and a memorable cast. Each bill will be augmented by specially selected short subjects appropriate to the major feature.

The "Hart Breakers" burlesquers, coming to the Gayety Theater for a week's engagement, beginning next Sunday afternoon, are described as the greatest aggregation of beauties and funmakers on tour this season. Margie Hart heads the cast, with Sam Raynor, famous comic. Others of importance are Happy Hyatt, the Falstaf of comedy; Marie Cord, Gypsy Rose Lee's only serious rival; Evelyn Raynor, Charles Harris, Paula and Jane Dobbins and a dancing beauty chorus.

Beginning today and continuing through the remainder of the week, the foremost feature of the screen bill at the Mount Vernon open-air, auto theater, will be "Sinners in Paradise," costarring John Boles and Madge Evans. The story is a romantic one already familiar to Capital theatergoers. Short subjects will augment the bill.

Madame Chairman

—By Suzanne

BOTH the Maryland State Federation of Women's Clubs and the District of Columbia Federation will meet Monday. The Maryland federation will have its semi-annual session at the new clubhouse of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase and will be addressed in the afternoon by Mrs. Eugene Meyer.

The business meeting in the morning will include reports from chairmen of committees and presidents of the affiliated clubs with Mrs. B. Peyton Whelan presiding. At noon, a luncheon will be served by the Chevy Chase club, proceeds to go to the Montgomery County Hospital for the new nurses' home.

About 200 women are expected to attend the meeting—the Woman's Community Club of Kensington, alone, sending in 56 reservations.

THE DISTRICT FEDERATION will be addressed in the afternoon by Senator William H. King, who will talk on international relations. It will meet at the Roosevelt Hotel with the business session in charge of the president, Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, opening at 11 o'clock. This will be followed by music at 12:45, presented by Miss Grace Powell, of the Washington Conservatory of Music, who will play a group of violin solos; Miss Phebe Stine, who will sing, and Miss Elizabeth Tearlls, who will accompany the soloists. Mrs. Hazel Brown Piers is music chairman.

In addition to Senator King's talk, there will be a short discussion of the work of the Red Cross by Mrs. F. W. Pennayer, jr.

MISS EMMA BUECHELE, who is chairman of press relations for the Soroptimist Club, will be hostess at a Thanksgiving dinner today, which will be brought already cooked from Long Island.

Mr. and Mrs. William Purdy, of Flushing, whose son, William, jr., is a law student at George Washington University, have prepared a dinner and will bring it from Flushing this morning, all ready but the warming up. Miss Buechele, who has long been a friend of the Purdy's, is co-operating by providing the table at which it will be served, with a group of Bill, jrs.' friends as guests.

THE SOROPTIMISTS, by the way, had Arthur Godfrey, of the radio, at their luncheon yesterday. The opening song of on their program was broadcast over WJSV. A quiz of some of the members of the club was recorded for a broadcast. The members were Mrs. Agnes Newman, president; Mrs. Edna Knight Gasch, second vice president of the American Federation of Soroptimist Clubs, and Miss Marjorie Webster, Miss Ella Werner and Mrs. Mary Lewis, past presidents. The quiz broadcast will be heard over WJSV Friday morning. L. C. Rosenkrans was honor guest and speaker at the meeting.

MISS LILLIAN CHENOWETH, State regent, Daughters of the American Revolution, is spending Thanksgiving in Berwick, Pa., as the guest of Mrs. Tonnis J. Holzberg, State historian, D. A. R. She will return to Washington, December 4.

PHRONSIE MARSH, non-fiction chairman, League of American Pen Women, has announced that a popular vote will be taken and an award made for the most interesting original article presented at the meeting, Tuesday, at 8 p. m., at the Grafton Hotel.

MRS. EDGAR B. MERITT, president of the Political Study Club, has two or three hobbies in addition to her club work and one of them is keeping scrap books. She has them for every organization in which she has been active since 1924, including the Eastern Star, the P. E. O., the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, the Political Study Club and others. They also cover the past three years during which she was national chairman of radio for the General Federation of Women's Clubs and also chairman of the same department in the District Federation.

THE ANNUAL BENEFIT dance for Montgomery County Hospital, sponsored by the Junior Auxiliary, has been set for December 9.

Miss Clair Hutton, of Silver Spring is chairman of the committee, assisted by Miss Margaret Lansdale, Miss Chandlee Robison, Miss Margaret Nichols and Mrs. Albert Stabler, jr.

THE LEAGUE OF WOMEN SHOPPERS is sponsoring the performance of "Pins and Needles" at the National, December 9, with Mrs. Lawrence M. C. Smith as chairman.

MEN in the Citizens' Military Training Camps who are winners in the essay contests conducted on the value of military training, will receive medals from a fund established at a recent meeting of the Guadalupe Club of 1848. The club also will contribute to a fund to provide scholarships for worthy young men who have not means to complete their own educations.

Feted on Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Mendelson, of 2428 Fourteenth street, were feted at a surprise party on Tuesday evening in celebration of their thirteenth wedding anniversary. Friends and business associates were the hosts.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

PERHAPS the situation might be summarized in one paragraph, in a single sentence, saying: "The Federal Government clings to its policy of keeping secret the personnel folders of its employes." It might be that nothing more is necessary. But still a certain bit of recent correspondence on the issue is so revealing of the official attitude that we lay it on the table for your own judgment.

ITEM 1. On July 11, 1938, E. Claude Babcock, president, Federal Personnel Association, wrote President Roosevelt, in substance, as follows:

"Many administrative agencies maintain that an employe may not be informed of the contents of his personnel folder. This secrecy permits certain supervisors to blacken the records of employes without possibility of defense. . . . This association respectfully petitions that you issue an executive order mandating all administrative agencies to furnish to every employe . . . copies of all documents made of record in any way which might affect the employes' chances for promotion, retention or other change of status."

ITEM 2. On November 19, 1938, Marvin H. McIntyre replied, in substance: "The Civil Service Commission was requested to study your suggestion and to submit a recommendation . . . and the Commission found it appropriate to obtain the reactions and views of all the departments and a large number of other Government establishments . . . The Commission reports a general disapproval of the proposal on the part of the departments and agencies, and that while many of the departments and agencies follow the practice of giving the employes an opportunity to present freely his belief in any case of alleged discrimination, they feel the proposed procedure would not tend to sole such situations, but, on the contrary, would cause misunderstandings, disturbt harmonious relations and result in the disruption of efficient administration. The Commission advises that—

"That giving careful consideration to the proposals and to the objections raised by the Government establishments, the Commission concurs in the conclusion that to adopt the poposal would be unwise and not advantageous either to the employes or to the Federal service. The Commission formally recommends that favorable action be not taken.'

"In consideration of the views of the Civil Service Commission, and of the improved condition with respect to personnel administration precedure contemplated by the establishment of divisions of personnel supervision and management under the executive order of June 24, 1938, the President feels that he would not be justified in taking the action which you suggest."

ITEM 3. Under date of November 21, Babcock wrote to the President: "We have received Mr. McIntyre's letter of November 19 on your unfavorable action on this association's petition . . . Of course this association understands that in these matters you can hardly act with personal knowledge. However, may I not again present the matter in this light:

The Civil Service Commission and particularly the departments to whom the matter was referred have a definitely adverse view as a matter of course. They would naturally oppose any restriction on their right to remove without reference to any higher authority and particularly is this power valuable if they may, as most of them do at present, take actions harmful to employes without even informing employes of the matters being considered against them. We can cite numerous cases in which the real reason for removal is not the one given to the employe but another one concealed within the records . . . civil service employes do not believe that the sole desire of the departments, as reflected by the Civil Service Comission, furnishes sufficient justification for the maintenanee of the present un-American record system.

THE DECENTRALIZATION that has moved hundreds of tax experts from Washington to San Francisco, New York, Chicago and the far Northwest won't be abated. Next, they're going into the deep South, so if any internal revenue technical experts have a hankering for that clime they might begin putting in applications.

And, incidentally, some streamlining is going on in the bureau at the moment: The rules and regulations division and the review division of the income tax unit are being abolished. These will be absorbed into a division to be called the practice and procedure division. All this is effective December 1. No personnel need worry about the streamlining, we were given to understand.

Comdr. Keating Dies on Coast

Commander Robert E. Keating, 42, flag secretary for the Navy Battle Force, died of a heart attack in Long Beach, Calif., it was learned here last night.

Commander Keating was stationed on the U. S. S. West Virginia as flag secretary and aide to Admiral Edward C. Kalbfus, commander of the fleet's battle force.

Appointed to the Naval Academy from Illinois, Commander Keating graduated in 1917. He was well known in naval circles here.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Marguerite Keating, and a son, Robert E. Keating, jr.

Roosevelt Hears Palestine To Raise Quota

For Jewish Refugees Report Unconfirmed Hopes It Is True

By the Associated Press.

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 23.—President Roosevelt said tonight he had heard a report that the number of refugees to be allowed entry into Palestine would be "materially increased" and added he hoped the report was true.

"I have no means of knowing the accuracy of this report," his statement said.

Mr. Roosevelt had interested himself in the Jewish refugee question even before the recent violent outbreaks against Jews in Germany, which brought severe condemnation from him.

As for Palestine, the United States had urged Britain some time ago during the Arab trouble not to restrict immigration to the Jewish national homeland.

U. S. Committee at Work

The President has a committee abroad working with similar groups from other nations trying to find additional refuges for Central European minorities which have felt the effect of extreme measures in Germany and elsewhere. The group is to meet in London December 1.

Only yesterday the President at his press conference declined to comment on the question, particularly Prime Minister Chamberlain's proposal that Jews be given a home in Tanganyika, former colony in East Africa.

Temporary White House officials would not give any explanation of the phrase "it is reported here" at the start of the President's statement.

It was believed by some that the information upon which the statement was based came from Washington by telephone.

London (Thursday), Nov. 24 (AP).—Official indications were lacking here today that Palestine's Jewish immigration quotas would be increased, as reported to President Rosevelt.

Dispatches from Jerusalem today said more than 10,000 applications had been made by Jews in Palestine for immigration permits for near relatives in Germany since outbreak of the current anti-Semitic drive there. No decision on the applications has been announced.

Resettlement Plans Hit

Special Cable to The Post.

London, Nov. 23.—The British government's plans to settle an undetermined number of German Jews in sparsely populated sections of the British empire, were complicated today by an outburst of criticism from Jewish and Christian quarters.

Simultaneously, Poland asked what was to become of 10,000 Polish Jews who have been expelled from the Reich and are now stranded in "no man's land" between the frontiers of Germany and Poland.

Jewish leaders complained that the resettlement scheme would take too much time to put into operation and in addition barred Palestine as a possible haven for a large number of refugees.

"We Wait, They Die"

Rabbi Solomon Goldman, president of the United States Zionists, protested in a speech to the English Zionist Federation tonight that "in these nightmare days of terror the position of German and Austrian Jews grows hourly worse. While we wait, they die."

Dr. Goldman said that one word from the British government, as the mandatory power for Palestine, would save "practically the whole younger generation of German Jewry."

9-Nation Group To Stand Firm On China Trade

Shanghai Bodies Concur Publish Position Today Open Door Is Basis

By Victor Keen.
Special Cable to The Post.

Shanghai, Nov. 23.—The Chambers of Commerce of nine foreign nations in Shanghai will make public tomorrow a joint resolution regarding the trade situation in China under the Japanese-fostered regime. The nations represented are the United States, Great Britain, France, Sweden, Denmark, Norway, Portugal, The Netherlands and Canada.

Text of the resolution is based on the following nine principles recently adopted by the Shanghai American Association, as follows:

Retention of all rights under the land regulations of the Shanghai International Settlement. Prevention of encroachment on or interference with the administration of the International Settlement and other foreign concessions in China. Withdrawal of all encroachments already effected.

Restoration of the Hongkew and Yangtzepoo Western areas of Shanghai to full authority and control of the International Settlement.

Restoration of transportation facilities, including railways, shipping, commercial air lines and motor highways with access to markets and mission centers in the Yangtze River Valley and other areas.

Prevention and abolition of all monopolies set up in contravention to the nine-power treaty and the "open-door" policy.

Restoration of foreign properties to their rightful owners; with full access and use thereof.

Discontinuance of censorship and other interference with mails, telegraph, etc.

Recognition and maintenance of the extraterritorial status of American interests, in accordance with treaties.

Support of all practical measures to limit the scope of hostilities in their effects on civilian communities to prevent their ultimate spread to other quarters of the world, and, further, an early and just peace, based on recognition of China's sovereignty and territorial integrity and the rights of foreign nationals to pursue legitimate interests in China, based on equal opportunity.

Sian Bombed

Shanghai, Nov. 23 (AP).—Japanese air raiders struck today at the Chinese Communist stronghold in Shensi Province and claimed they inflicted "heavy damage" on the Eighth Army headquarters and other military establishments at Siam.

Chinese said they had halted the Japanese drive on Changsha, Hunan Province capital and next Japanese objective on the central front.

In Shanghai, customs figures analyzed by the China Press, English language newspaper, showed American exports to Shanghai had dropped 65 per cent and British and German 50 per cent, while Japanese exports increased 40 per cent. Britain is now second and the United States third.

G. O. P. to Reap Whirlwind, Earle Tells Graft Inquiry

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 23 (AP).—Gov. George H. Earle tonight concluded the Legislature's hearings into political graft charges against his administration with a warning that the Republican Party "riding to power has sowed the wind and it is going to reap a whirlwind."

Earle's statement came after he finished his testimony about political graft accusations against him and 13 other high Democrats. He denied every charge brought by former Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti and District Attorney Carl B. Shelley, of Dauphin County, a Republican. The charges were made in last spring's primary campaign.

Earle told of loans he got from Matthew H. McCloskey, who holds $10,000,000 in general State authority contracts, and asserted there was no ulterior motive and that he never used any influence to help McCloskey get contracts.

Debutantes Watch Miss Bankhead Christen Train

Tallulah Bankhead, actress, christened the Baltimore & Ohio's new streamlined express train—Capitol Limited—at Union Station yesterday while a court of honor of debutantes costumed to represent their great-grandparents looked on.

The train thereafter made its initial run between Washington and Baltimore. At the same time, the eastbound Capital Limited was christened at Chicago. One thousand pigeons were released at the chirstening, one of which carries a message to President Roosevelt from Mayor Edward J. Kelly.

Locomotives of the new all-Pullman trains are driven by Diesel engines. The interior of the trains, which carry a blue, gray and gold color scheme, is modernistic in furnishings and decoration. The trains carry an unusually large number of bedrooms, compartments and drawing rooms.

Delia Dougherty Dies at Home Here

Miss Delia T. Dougherty, 83, lifelong resident of the District, died yesterday at her home, 906 Maryland avenue northeast.

Miss Dougherty was employed for more than 35 years with the old Saks clothing firm at Seventh and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. She retired ten years ago.

Surviving is a sister, Mrs. Jennie Fitzgerald, of Washington.

Funeral services will be held at the home at 8:30 a. m. Saturday, with requiem mass at 9 a. m. in St. Joseph's Church. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Soviet Youth Leader Ousted After 'Orgies'

Kosarev Still 'Comrade' But He Has No Job Editor in Trouble

By Joseph Barnes.

Moscow, Nov. 23.—The new broom promised to the Komsomols (Young Communist League) three days ago swept clean today with the formal removal of Alexander V. Kosarev and four others from the leadership of the Soviet Youth.

N. A. Mikhallov, editor of the Komsomol Pravda, which made the initial public attack on Kosarev Sunday, succeeds him as first secretary of the 5,000,000 organized Young Communists.

A girl, Olga Mishakova, was the chief agent in Kosarev's downfall. She was expelled from the Komsomol central committee and given "severe punishment" after she had struggled vainly to persuade Kosarev to take action against "the enemies of the people" in the Chuvash Republic.

Kosarev and his assistants now are denounced as "politically bankrupt and demoralized people." Besides having tried to demobilize active Komsomols by assurance that their house was now in order, Kosarev organized "orgies" with persons whose enemy activity now has been unmasked, it was charged. He is still called "comrade," but today at least he is a Soviet unemployed.

Another Komsomol named Burkov, editor of the Komsomol newspaper at Ryazan, near Moscow, had his hands full of trouble today. A week ago the Communist Party's central committee issued a powerful decree calling for more and better political propaganda through the newspapers.

Three days later, Comrade Burkow devoted the political propaganda section of his newspaper to an exposition of the law of King Hammurabia of Babylonia, issued 2,000 years before Christ. The newspaper Pravda suggested today to him "propaganda on a more contemporary theme."

Big Statements Bore McNinch, Barred at Quiz

91 Pages Irk Him To Speed Up Hearing First Chain Cited

Because he was tired of listening to "after-dinner" speeches, Chairman Frank R. McNinch of the Federal Communications Commission yesterday banned the reading of prepared statements henceforth during the radio monopoly inquiry.

The action was taken in the midst of the reading of a 91-page statement on engineering phases of network operation by O. B. Hanson, vice president and chief engineer of the National Broadcasting Co.

The ban may speed up the hearings, which were expected to be spread over three months or more, but Phillip J. Hennessey, N. B. C. counsel, said the order will not hamper the presentation of the network's case.

The FCC committee took a recess at 12:30 p. m. until next Tuesday, when William J. Dempsey, FCC general counsel, will cross-examine Hanson.

The N. B. C. chief engineer disclosed during his testimony that the late Col. Edward H. R. Green, son of Hetty Green, had a hand in the launching of the first hook-up of radio stations.

Col. Green installed a transmitter on one of his estates at South Dartmouth, Mass., and then found he had nothing to broadcast. He then made arrangements with the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. to carry programs from New York by wire to his station.

A Well-Timed Holiday

Mother Earth's November moods are due less to temperament than to fatigue. She is a good old dame and normally resilient. But in November she has the let-down feeling that immediately follows relief from tension, the rest that has not yet achieved tranquillity.

Because we are all more or less poets we respond to Nature's harvest-end reactions. This is the pessimistic season. Philosophers warn that we are becoming a Nation of weaklings and that democracies will eventually be swallowed up by totalitarian barbarians. Housewives declare that flies were never more numerous and annoying. Republicans maintain that there won't be any money in the Treasury when the spenders get through. State foresters predict that there won't be any holly for Yuletide. Oystermen bewail a dull season and not even cocktail ice is all it is cracked up to be. In fact, nothing seems flourishing except the November blues.

But now and then the old dame gives a hint that things are not quite as black as black can be. And always, before the month has gone, her children prove that they can take it. There may be truth in all Cassandra cries, but it isn't the whole truth. There'll still be cakes and ale, and ginger will be hot i' the mouth. And, take it all in all, there's still a lot to be thankful for, including the fact that Thanksgiving comes at the time of year when we most need its message.

Cutting Relief Rolls

During the first three months of the current fiscal year, WPA expenditures proceeded on a scale that, if continued, would have exhausted available funds before the end of February—the period covered by the emergency appropriation. With business expanding and private employment increasing, the President, has, therefore, indicated that economies are in order.

On fiscal grounds as well as for economic reasons, reductions in the inflated WPA rolls are unquestionably essential. But the problem of how to cut the rolls with a minimum degree of hardship for those concerned is extremely difficult.

Expansion of private employment does not automatically provide jobs for those on the WPA rolls who constitute only a fraction of the total numbers of unemployed. On the contrary, the first to obtain employment are usually workers who have managed to keep off relief rolls. Moreover, a large proportion of WPA workers are undoubtedly on the border line separating employable from non-employable persons. Under the most favorable conditions, many of them would find it almost impossible to obtain jobs in private employment.

Consequently, when an economy edict is issued from headquarters, subordinate administrative officials have to make some painful decisions. To drop a certain number of WPA workers because of a shortage of funds without discriminating between varying degrees of need would be a most irresponsible method of procedure. In any case, the inevitable hardships resulting from a sudden contraction of work-relief activities is one of the best possible arguments against lavish unregulated outlays that necessitate subsequent economies.

New Jersey's acting WPA administrator plans a gradual reduction of personnel by eliminating workers eligible for pensions or other subsistence income and by not filling positions vacated by persons obtaining private employment. The presence on work relief rolls of aged persons who should be pensioned is difficult to justify under any circumstances. Similarly, those who are able to maintain themselves by other means should give way for employment of those without resources.

The decision not to fill vacated positions is, however, open to criticism, although it is obviously an easy way to deal with a difficult problem of selection. It by no means follows that the withdrawal of workers from WPA jobs provides a reliable index of the decreasing need for aid in a particular locality. In New York City, for example, the WPA turnover is about 5,000 weekly. But the jobs left vacant are filled from lists provided by the Home Relief Bureau.

Certainly, no fixed formula can be devised for dealing with relief problems. Yet under a centralized, federally administered system which takes orders from Washington, it is impossible to make due allowances for local conditions or to apportion relief funds with regard only to the degree of need.

The Saposs Episode

On more than one occasion, The Post has sharply criticized the procedure of the special House Committee "investigating un-American activities." Several times we have pointed out that the evident unreliability of some of its witnesses, and the lavish introduction of lurid but unsubstantiated testimony, cast serious doubt on the advisability of this probe as currently conducted.

It is, therefore, the more important to note the service that Representative Dies has done in calling to public attention an old article by David J. Saposs, chief economist of the National Labor Relations Board, which is reprinted on the page opposite this today. Of course this service does not lie in any attribution of communistic sympathies to Mr. Saposs. He denies that he has such sympathies and there is no reason to doubt a denial with which Chairman Madden of the N. L. R. B. is apparently fully satisfied.

The issue is not whether Mr. Saposs is inclined toward communism or other totalitarian doctrines to which, as an American citizen, he has complete right to subscribe if so inclined. The issue is whether Mr. Saposs, as one who talks revolutionary jargon with easy familiarity and apparent approval, is the sort of executive qualified to fill a post of great responsibility in the presumably impartial Labor Relations Board.

A close reading of the Saposs article on the page opposite is recommended. Its author claims, and Mr. Madden supports the viewpoint, that various flat statements contained therein—"bourgeois democracy is a sham," for instance—are not the opinion of the writer, but merely the accurate reporting of opinions expressed at the Vienna conference which Mr. Saposs attended in 1931.

While this defense is tenable it may be asserted that nine readers out of ten, noting the Saposs declaration that "capitalism cannot be stabilized," would regard this and similar flat statements as the writer's own opinion. And they would then be wholly justified in asking what service the advocate of such a viewpoint is performing for an agency whose whole excuse for being is the claim that it can be effective in stabilizing capitalism.

There is already a widespread public belief that the Wagner labor relations act was not impartial social legislation and that the N. L. R. B., established under this law, is doing more to foment than to ameliorate industrial strife. The character of the Saposs article, to say nothing of the ultra-radical nature of the magazine in which it was published seven years ago, will inevitably be taken as confirmation of those criticisms.

This is unfortunate. It is unfortunate because the Wagner act was, in essentials, wholly desirable legislation, because the N. L. R. B. has done much excellent work and because a very large part of the personnel, including Mr. Saposs, is professionally competent to handle the important administrative task assigned to it.

That task will not be well done, however, so long as there are justified suspicions of the sincerity of the board, as an agency for better relations between employers and employed. And suspicions of sincerity are justified by articles, even old articles, by Government executives such as the one we reproduce today. Whether as reporter or commentator, Mr. Saposs has shown far too much interest in the collapse of capitalism to be regarded as the satisfactory agent of a capitalistic government. And the service of Representative Dies lies in bringing that fact to public attention.

Mr. Saposs would probably regard Tom Girdler as wholly disqualified for a position with the N. L. R. B. Mr. Girdler would be at least equally justified in regarding Mr. Saposs as totally disqualified. The need of the N. L. R. B. is for an administrative staff above reproach from either right or left. And if the board is wise it will give serious consideration to the question of whether that is now the case.

Communism everywhere brings fascism as its natural and normal reaction. Communist sympathizers breed Fascist sympathizers. Indifference to communism means indifference to fascism. The case of Mr. Saposs is relatively unimportant. But the problem which it helps to illustrate is a most vital matter to which Representative Dies has done well to address himself.

Skaters Rejoice

Many residents of Washington will include the ice palace opened here yesterday among their reasons for thanksgiving. It was both curious and lamentable that Washington should have waited so many years for a luxury long since enjoyed by virtually every other American city of its size.

Time was, of course, when skating could flourish only in latitudes far enough north to be sure of consecutive freezing weather in the winter months. But mechanical refrigeration long ago changed that and thereby augmented the skating season everywhere. The sport is now more or less independent of weather and has been brought within reach of everyone. Today, in any city blessed with one or more good indoor rinks, skaters may find opportunities for consistent practice and thus for the acquisition of the skill which is essential to full enjoyment of the sport.

There is every reason to expect that this new enterprise will have the success it deserves. And there is further reason to suppose that this is only a beginning—that one of these days Washington will have other and larger rinks, and will perhaps be represented in one of the professional hockey leagues.

Talks After Munich

The visit to Paris of Neville Chamberlain and Lord Halifax emphasizes the close bonds of friendship that unite Great Britain and France today. Indeed, it is generally assumed that one result of the current conversations between French and British statesmen will be a stiffening and tightening of the Franco-British alliance.

Such action may be inevitable under existing circumstances. But it is difficult to reconcile it with that policy of appeasement and democratic-totalitarian co-operation for peace inaugurated at Munich in September. A strengthening of the Franco-British alliance at this time would seem to indicate at least a measure of doubt in the minds of the British and French leaders regarding the ultimate success of that policy. They seem to feel it necessary to reinsure their nations against the possibility of failure.

In other words, Great Britain and France are determined to take no chances. Both Chamberlain and Daladier are too deeply committed to the Munich program and all it stands for to make a complete about-face. That would be tantamount to signing their political death warrants. At the same time they realize that the policy of appeasement is making heavy weather.

The events of the last few weeks in the Third Reich have had an extremely bad reception in democratic countries. Hitler has demonstrated that victory will not make him magnanimous. This fact has shocked the British and the French. But the outcry of righteous indignation, particularly in Great Britain, against the calculated Nazi persecutions, has embittered the German government. Relations between Germany and Great Britain are worse today than they were before Munich.

Significantly enough, this development has not been followed by any Nazi attacks on the French. The protests in France against the current reign of terror in the Third Reich have gone unheeded across the Rhine. This may mean that Germany no longer takes France seriously. And it may have something to do with the desire by Germany to sign a pact of nonaggression with France similar to that which Hitler signed with Chamberlain at Munich.

For Germany such a pact would have distinct advantages. It would be tantamount to a formal abrogation of the Franco-Soviet and the Franco-Polish alliances. These pacts happen to be in a state of desuetude today. But as long as they are on the books they remain potential barriers to German hegemony throughout eastern Europe.

Can France benefit by such a pact? Already Hitler has on several occasions announced that the Third Reich has no territorial ambitions vis-a-vis France, that it is content to see Alsace-Lorraine remain under the tricolor. But if such statements are to be taken at their face value what need is there for a formal treaty embodying precisely the same pledge? And if such promises are not binding what assurance is there that a treaty will be any more so?

Indeed, if there is any one conclusion to be drawn from the events of the last few years it is that treaties have no restraining force for those countries that set national interest above international morality. It would seem, therefore, that M. Daladier is simply buying a pig in a poke if he anticipates that Hitler's written assurance of peace, plus his spoken word, will together constitute a truly binding commitment.

Concerning Fog

From the Christian Science Monitor.

The weather man calls it the meeting place between a moisture-laden tropical front and a cold, dry polar front. Most people just call it fog. Of all the elements that now and then disrupt the even tenor of our complex ways of mechanized motion, it is safe to say fog is still the most defiant, the most puzzling phenomenon inventors have tried to solve. We climb the highest mountains and ford the deepest streams; we can make a whisper heard around the world; we can even vault the clouds, but we can't see through them. When a cloud comes to rest upon the earth, traffic signals blink and headlights grope in vain.

While State troopers in New England were shooing drivers off the highways one night recently, and pedestrians pondered the Londoner's traditional knack of finding his way from one lamp post to the next, doubtless both drivers and walkers were wondering, too, how long it would be before natural science would find a means to head off these ethereal collisions on the tropical-polar fronts. Modern research has tamed almost all the forces of nature. All but that tantalizing, moisture-laden wraith which—as Carl Sandburg once said—still "comes on little cat feet," and snarls up traffic like a ball of yarn.

Letters to the Editor

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the Editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

The Martial Spirit

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just read Mr. C. M. Dodson's warlike letter in The Post of November 22, under the caption "Let's Go!" In it he says, "Let's go in again and not accept any peace for Germany, regardless of how she shouts 'Kamerad.' Let's tear her limb from limb. She worships force, let's give it to her."

Would Mr. Dodson kindly tell us how the United States could reach Germany today, in case of war between us, so we could "Tear her limb from limb"?

Mr. Dodson, doubtless, has such a profound knowledge of military situations in the world today that the information he possesses would not only be valuable to me but also to our military and naval authorities. Of course, he must know just how to get there, as he wishes to go along with the expedition as a fighter and do some of the 'limb-tearing' himself. With Mr. Dodson "the spirit is willing" along the 'limb-tearing' line, but I am afraid his knowledge of geography "is weak."

CHARLES FISK TANSILL.

A Poser

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read a letter written to you by 'Wantmore Truth" which purported to be an answer to a letter written by "Missouri Minded," who would like to know why our President gets itchy under the collar over the treatment of Jews in Germany while the atrocities committed against human beings in Russia, Ethiopia, Spain and China cause our President not the slightest irritation.

"Wantmore Truth" in attempting to answer this went on to say in Germany financial and property rights were infringed, while in Ethiopia, Spain, etc., merely human rights were violated. I ask, what is more important than human rights? Wouldn't one rather lose his financial standing and property and retain his human rights than to gain the world and lose all rights?

I do not think "Missouri Minded" has been answered and am frank to admit it is beyond me. Is there anyone, with the exception of our President, who can answer it?

INDIGNANT.
Washington, Nov. 22.

Asylum For Jews

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It appears that Capt. Victor A. Cazalet, member of the British Parliament, has partly found the solution to the refugees problem in his proposal that a million Jews be given refuge in Northern Rhodesia, Africa.

The Jew is entitled to a country, and the world powers should by international agreement set aside a fertile and habitable tract of land in Africa, or since the Jew is an Asiatic and might prefer to live in Asia. Palestine might be enlarged sufficiently to adequately support the estimated 15,000,000 of world Jewry. The Jew would be happier in his own country, and the most of them, especially in Great Britain and the United States, have sufficient property to re-establish themselves in their new homes. Those that are indigent could be aided by the countries from whence they came or by a fund established by all the countries that are parties to the international agreement.

Blossoms And Babies

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Aren't Washington people a little bit overwrought concerning the Japanese cherry trees that must be uprooted to make place for the Jefferson Memorial? As an advertised drawing card to entice visitors here in the spring they have their value; but are they prettier than our own native apple trees in bloom, especially if the apple blossoms had the reflective privileges of the Tidal Basin?

The cherry blossoms have no perfume and are not even a prelude to fertility. They have been given a special setting in Washington, and their beauty is greatly enchanced by their surroundings. As to the sentiments connected with the cherry trees, they seem but an imitation as to fruit, and a deception as to friendship.

Next spring if I shall see the trees in bloom as I saw them last, with their blossoms swinging in the breeze, and great showers of their petals flying in the wind, this will be my thought—

Such dainty cherry blossoms!
Their petals skyward fly,
Like souls of Chinese babies,
That were bombed in old Shanghai.

Mass Education

Mr. Welles, through his broadcast and the subsequent publicity has made an important contribution to mass education. There should be no restriction of that or any other form of broadcast from which the public may learn wholesome lessons. As a people I believe we have the ability to recognize and to analyze demagoguery from whatever source or angle presented, but it is inherent in our institutions that there be no attempt to stifle free expression of thought by saint or sinner. We need no protection from our "errors of judgment," but we must exercise eternal vigilance lest force within or without capitalize on our reactions by initiating restrictions on our freedom of judgment.

European Volcano

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Before the spectacular rise of Adolf Hitler, the German people had had the opportunity to work out themselves the problem of governing themselves as a republic with the moral and financial support of the great powers. But continual strife of this mortified painter and paperhanger, who had a positive disregard for liberty of press, liberty of worship and in general the ideas of modern democracies, provided Europe with a volcano most eruptive.

As far back as 1923 has he had the persecution of a race in its entirety in his mind. "Die Juden," mind you, and only the Jews were declared responsible for the downfall of the once so mighty empire. Never in peace-time history has anyone persecuted a race in its entirety as it is now being done in Germany.

Washington, Nov. 12.

A Major Dilemma

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a home owner, a citizen, an attorney and a legionnaire, I subscribe to what you say in your editorial of November 18, "A Major Dilemma."

I cannot say that I have the answer, but you might consider the worth-whileness of a national contest with a cash prize for the best solution, the American Bar Association to be the judges. Even if no workable plan were submitted, a lot of people would start to think and that would be helpful.

It seems to me it is a real opportunity for your paper to render a great national service.

H. J. Le VESCONTE.
Washington, Nov. 18.

Pedestrian Control

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is surprising the number of citizens' associations favoring pedestrian traffic control greatly exceeds the number of associations opposed to the proposed regulation. Organizations favoring control are apparently dominated either by members who are motor vehicle operators or members who are ignorant of the fact the regulation is designed to increase motor vehicle monopoly of the city's highways under the guise of a measure intended to protect pedestrians.

Do citizens realize the regulation would deprive them of exercising their own judgment as to when and where it is safe to cross the streets? The proposal means that if a person afoot crossed the street on a red, instead of a green, signal a policeman would be in duty bound to nab the pedestrian, thrust him unceremoniously into a patrol wagon and cart him off to the nearest police station where he would be held in a cell until his hearing in court, if the unfortunate did not have sufficient funds to post collateral?

Pedestrians are so accustomed to crossing the street when the crossing is good, regardless of the color of the signals, it is doubtful whether the custom could be successfully abolished. Motorists suffer agonizing impatience when required to slow up or stop. They make a mad scramble to beat the traffic lights and the street car coming to a stop to take on passengers. Motorists little realize in their selfish absorption to get somewhere in an unnecessary hurry the annoyance they cause by their failure to give pedestrians a break when they are entitled to it, especially at uncontrolled intersections.

LEWIS L. YOUNG.

On Americophobia

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Reasoning historically, Americans have good reason to feel that the bilious, anti-American eruption of Herr Heine in your issue of November 19 reflects a traditional German sentiment of "Americophobia."

For, throughout the centuries, beginning with the inception of our national existence, when hordes of German Hessians invaded our shores to defeat the cause of American independence, down through the sinking of the Lusitania and the World War, to the present day, German junkerism consistently displayed a biased, anti-American spirit of hostility, uncalled for, unsolicited and unmerited.

Our hospitality has been mistaken for dummheit (stupidity), our liberality and frankness exploited for purposes of slander, insult and abuse.

Since civilized conception of freedom of the press and speech may not be sensibily expanded to include security to those who seek to sever our national unity and peace by the spread of libel, violence and riot, the American Nation is justified to expect that the Kuhns and the Heines either be silenced or removed from American communities.

Official Sadism

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Hitler has boasted that nothing happens in Germany without his and the Nazi leaders' approval. How long will the civilized world keep up relations with a country ruled by sadistic criminals? Already they start smearing our country, calling us a nation of gangsters, organizing private armies, spreading hatred. The spy trial should open our eyes. The former country of poets and thinkers has become a country of robbery and unculture, not worthy of being called civilized any longer.

Old Shops

COL. BASIL MERRIWETHER JONES was a trifle querulous. With his beribboned eyeglasses uncertainly poised on his squilline nose, or deliberately removed to point his remarks, he laid down the law in no uncertain terms.

"Yes, sir! As I have frequently remarked, this present age is the unfriendliest the world has ever known. You don't have to travel far to find that out. Why, only this morning, I was window-shopping on F street and my poor old legs got tired. Was there a shop where I could go in, rest my legs in a chair, or sit on a revolving stool, and have a pleasant conversation with the proprietor? Not one! And you know it.

"Why, sir, in the old days, I knew most of the shopkeepers in town and they were glad to pass the time of day with me, even though I made no purchase. Those were the days when every corner apothecary shop carried enormous bottles in each window, one with a blue liquid in it and the other with a red. At night, with bright lights back of them, they looked very pretty; and, from time to time during the day, and in the evening, these drug stores were the neighborhood clubs. And you knew where and when to find John Brown or Billy Smith. But, today!"——

And here the Colonel lost his speech. After seeking strength and refreshment from a tall glass, he resumed.

"Yes, sir! Those were the days when, if the druggist knew you, you could saunter back of the prescription screen, help yourself to a drink, with lemon and sugar on the side; leave a dime on the counter and carelessly wander out to have a pleasant chat. Some drug stores even provided arm chairs for the frequenters.

"Don't tell me I'm getting old and crochetty. I'm not! I'm old, and rheumatic, and my eyes are not as good as they used to be; but I'm not crochetty! No, sir! It's the other things that have changed; not me. The drug stores of today wouldn't let you have a nip unless you were dying. You can get anything else in them from hot dogs and hamburger sandwiches to clocks, watches and terrible fiction; but when you want drugs or liquor you must have a prescription. Some of them serve meals, too, and it won't be long before they will specialize in formal dinners.

"That will be an easy time for Mrs. Van Bumpstead. All she will have to do will be to issue invitations to dinner at 8 at the Cozy Inn Drug Store—and the store will rent formal attire on the side.

"Now, of course, the times change—and some folks change with them—but at least an old fogy like me may be allowed to look back and say: 'The horse-and-buggy days were not so bad.'

"For example: When I was getting ready to marry the late, lamented Arabella—may the Lord rest her blessed soul in peace!—did we go poking about the vast furniture stores the young people now must ransack? Not a bit of it! Some time prior to the wedding, my father placed an order with old man Kirby—his shop was on Eighth street near E—for the complete furnishing of the house. And it was up to Kirby to do the job handsomely—which he always did.

"I remember his sign. It read: 'Cabinet Making and Upholstery.' Just that. But, inside, it was a busy workshop and museum. At the back he had a loft where mahogany, rosewood, walnut, cherry, and other woods of various kinds and dimensions lay until thoroughly seasoned. In the main building you could see all varieties of chairs, sofas, bedsteads, tables and cabinets in the various stages of building. There the atmosphere was redolent with oils and varnish; and there the walls were hung with every variety and shape and size of planes, and gouges, and chisels, or what-nots, that his artists and artisans required to make the elegantly carved furniture upon which his fame as a cabinetmaker rested. And that furniture was built for a lifetime, and more. I have most of what he made for me now."

The colonel paused for a sip from the tall glass. Then he looked at me sadly and went on:

"I tell you, Wade, the times have changed more than I have. You are not as old as I am, but even you can remember when the shoemaker made boots and shoes to order and kept the models of your feet on his shelves. Yes, sir! And the shoes he made were made right. But, who makes shoes now? You buy a pair of hand-me-downs after trying on all the possible misfits in the store and—well, God bless my soul! It's time for me to meet my daughter. She's going to select a hat for me—I'm not even consulted about her hats—but she insists that she alone can select the proper hat for me. Well, so long, I've got to hurry now."

WADE TENCH.

The Jefferson Memorial

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the controversy over the cherry trees now being propelled in Washington by the trade winds of hysteria, there are some solemn broodings left to men and women, who, in the excitement of the movement, attempt to take a detached view of this matter.

In the whirl of things here, I am left to wonder why loud voices in the District clamorously deny the recognition that is due Thomas Jefferson and I therefore ask the plain, blunt question: Why should not a few Japanese cherry trees yield their place in order that due recognition in the Capital of the Nation may be paid that immortal figure, the father of the Declaration of Independence and the author of the Statute of Religious Freedom?

What a world and what a whirl of things! Some time, I prophesy, those who denounce what is being attempted will stand before the beautiful shrine of Jefferson and wonder and regret.

Fair Enough

Mankind, The Scourge

SO, AT LAST, they totally obliterated the Jews from the face of the earth. The last few hundred thousand were taken to sea in old merchant boats, packed in cages and locked up tight, and when the rusty flotilla reached the appointed spot, far down in the South Atlantic, the crews and sailors opened the cocks, abandoned ship and made for the vessels of the international navy, which took them aboard and opened fire with guns.

PEGLER

It was like shooting barnyard ducks. In less than an hour it was done. The mopping-up was simple but thorough. Picket boats went among the wreckage with sharpshooters in their bows to pick off the few half-conscious floaters who had been blown free by the explosions and had grasped fragments of furniture, doors and booms. There was not one Jew left on earth, not one, and the remaining peoples of the world sighed with relief and said, "Now we shall have peace and progress and no more greed, lying, cheating, conspiracy or theft."

THE PROPERTY of the Jews was distributed according to promise, and there was now no reason why the people should fail to prosper and get along as friends.

Yet there were alarms, and complete trust and co-operation were lacking. The Japanese attacked the Poles to rescue an oppressed minority on the Sudeten precedent and Mussolini pounced on Great Britain's lifeline, because, even though they were indubitably Aryans, the British were arrogant, cunning and acquisitive and honor was not in them.

"The Englishman," the little Italian soldiers wrote on the blackboards in their schools, "is the scourge of the earth and must be destroyed."

THESE MOVES pitched the world into a general war in which it was difficult for any individual to distinguish friend from foe. The French fought the Germans with the slogan that there could never be permanent peace as long as any German lived and verified the slogan to themselves by quotations from Hitler's book to the effect that France must be destroyed.

The Americans held off a while, but finally pitched in against the Japanese, and the jumble became so confused that a bomber could unload his bombs almost anywhere outside his own country and find justification in some evil and menacing trait of the people living there.

Not only that, but within the warring countries individual and group hatred grew. There were still greed, lying, cheating, treachery and theft. Men swindled one another, circulated evil rumors, conspired for power, failed to pay their bills, seduced maidens, robbed and stole. God had seemed to have the measure of their moral frailty, but they had always told themselves that it was the Jews alone to whom the Ten Commandments were addressed.

WITH THE JEWS gone, they thought the Ten Commandments would become superfluous if not even a little insulting—a sort of insinuation that even they were not above the sort of conduct for which the Jews, of course, were peculiar and notorious.

The Africans were wiped out early. In Asia starvation and disease destroyed millions, but the Western nations were no better off. They could feed themselves better and knew more of sanitation, but their weapons were much more deadly.

Still the world fought on long after the last Jew had gurgled beneath the waves, until just two small bands were left, the freckle-faced people and the nonfreckled, each claiming to be pure and to possess exclusively the virtues of honesty, honor and clean blood and each sworn to exterminate the other as the only guarantee of peace, progress and decency on earth.

IT ENDED with just two survivors, an old man and an old woman, together in a hut. He was one-eighth freckled—that is to say, he had a few small freckles. She was of the pure, nonfreckled strain.

So one night she slugged him with an ax as he slept and fell dead of the poison he had put in her soup that evening. And the horses and asses romped in the fields, never again to be beaten or overburdened; deer walked in the open, unafraid of being shot by men; rabbits and birds took courage, cities moldered and the world was purified of cruelty, dishonesty, treachery and greed.

'Frankenstein' Has a Daughter

Hollywood, Nov. 23 (AP).—Boris Karloff was working in the picture, "Son of Frankenstein," when news came that his wife had given birth to a daughter in Hollywood Hospital on his fifty-first birthday.

Karloff drove to the hospital in the gruesome make-up he uses in the picture. His appearance in the maternity ward caused temporary alarm, but the infant daughter, brought to the mother's bedside, turned to Karloff—and yawned.

The Hopeful Note

At almost the precise moment that the horror began in Berlin, Alfred A. Knopf was giving a literary tea for a Yorkshire terrier. Foolishness in the midst of chaos may be a good thing, a temporary digression from panic and despair.

On one of the darkest days last week, we read in our paper that Gertrude Stein had just finished her own version of "Faust" ("it fascinates her and he has no soul. She steals all his thunder and she makes false electric lights. Everybody gathers around her and worships her, and he stays alone with his dog and is furious about it."); Macy's was advertising a hairnet for men; Gov. Heil announced that he planned to run the State of Wisconsin by the power of prayer; David O. Wilson, of Santa Monica, invented a false face to be attached to automobile bumpers which sticks out its tongue when the driver presses a button; dueling was legalized in the State of Texas, and medicine, pressing ever onward and upward, discovered that tooth decay comes from eating cereal.

Civilization, we thought with a trace of hope, may still be too young and innocent to die.

What Saposs Said

Chairman Dies of the House committee investigating un-American activities has charged David J. Saposs, chief economist for the National Labor Relations Board, with advocacy of forceful revolution. These charges are based primarily on an article contributed to the Labor Age by Mr. Saposs seven years ago.

Mr. Saposs replies that the article in question was "a descriptive and analytical" account of a Socialist Congress held in Vienna and in no way represents his personal viewpoint. J. Warren Madden, chairman of the NLRB, supports his associate and accuses Representative Dies of quoting excerpts from the Saposs article in a misleading manner.

Because of the underlying importance of the issue, to which an editorial is devoted on the page opposite, The Post herewith reproduces the controversial article in full.

A SMALL minority in the Fourth Congress of the Labor and Socialist International held in Vienna from July 4-August 1, led by the British Independent Labor Party took issue with the overwhelmingly majority. The differences were not so much over fundamental principles as over the mode of procedure. The minority demanded more positive, energetic and uncompromising action in the attempt of the socialists to cope with the present world ailments. Its spokesmen maintained that economic conditions are ripe for Socialism, and that the International should therefore direct its forces for the immediate overthrow of capitalism. Instead of taking this positive position the majority favors temporizing. This is a falacious attitude, the Socialist movement must tell the people that capitalism can not be stabilized and that the world can not be saved by capitalist devices.

The opposition further demanded that the International state definitely that its program of action means "a declaration of uncompromising war on capitalism." It wanted the International to emphasize the urgent need of the workers to rally around the "socialist movement in order to achieve International Socialism." Hence it is imperative that the International unequivocally reject the present "policy of toleration and of co-operation with capitalist parties, because such a policy "always results in maintaining the principles of the capitalist system."

As for democracy, the opposition also wants to safeguard it. But bourgeois democracy is a sham. When it is evident that Socialism is the only remedy it is not worth saving a democracy in which socialist parties only collaborate with capitalism. In this connection the opposition also called attention to the fact that Fascism has grown side by side with coalition governments in which socialists participated. Thus the dilatory procedure of the majority socialists is enabling the reactionary forces to entrench themselves. Consequently when the majority says it will resort to force only if obstructionist tactics are resorted to by the capitalists and the reactionary forces, it is only waiting until the harm is done before it acts. As conditions stand now, slow going democracy involves the workers in suffering and their leaders in shifty compromises. From a revolutionary point of view, democracy means meeting the situation and not running away from it by forming coalitions with bourgeois governments.

One of the chief spokesmen for the opposition ended by proclaiming, "that the only way out of the present situation is to raise the banner for a new social order, and if that is done Socialism will be gotten without a catastrophy."

In similar terms the minority attacked the attitude of the majority on war and disarmament. It asserted that the dangers of war were greater now than at any time since the peace treaties were signed. Moreover, it had no confidence in the League of Nations or the Geneva Disarmament Commission, since they are dominated by the imperialistic powers. What the international socialist movement must do is to appeal to the workers and not to governments. It must take the position that socialists can not support any war.

There must be no compromise with war any more than there must be compromise with capitalist parties in parliament. Socialists must always vote against military credits, and when they come in control of government they must set the example by disarming. If in the attempt to carry out such a program political action fails, then the workers must unhesitatingly resort to organized force. The International must take the position that if another war occurs the workers will destroy capitalism. With that end in view the worker must be prepared to stretch arms across the frontiers in case of war and definitely win power for themselves.

The Congress was unevenly divided in voting strength. On all divisions the majority overwhelmingly outvoted the opposition. All the old and outstanding leaders were on the side of the majority, whereas the minority leaders consisted of some of the well known newer and, par consequence, younger men in the movement. This left opposition in the Socialist International has just appeared and was not well organized. Also, because of the provision making it possible for delegations to resort to the unit rule it is difficult to estimate its exact strength. This factor is illustrated by the procedure of the American delegation. Although a militant minority presented its view in delegation meetings, the entire delegation is recorded as voting with the majority.

The difference between the majority and opposition is one that has agitated the radical movements since their advent. Hence in the debates the fundamental issue was between cautious and, slow vs. energetic and forceful procedure in order to remedy conditions and to attain socialism. The overwhelming majority counselled moderation and co-operation with the democratic and bourgeois liberal elements, working at the same time for a gradual introduction of socialism. To them the need of checkmating Fascism was the chief concern since democracy is the vehicle upon which socialism will gradually reach its aspired goal. The small minority, on the other hand, demanded militant action that would primarily wage battle on the enemy, capitalism, instead of using up too much energy in co-operating with the uncertain capitalist forces no matter how liberal and democratic they may be. And instead of only resisting the advance of Fascism through maneuvers, they would immediately wage battle on the entire front, since fascism is but a foil of capitalism.

It would seem that both elements favor aggressive action. The majority, however, emphasizes militancy in defense of gains already made by labor, as well as in defense of democracy and against fascism and dictatorship. In contrast to the defensive militancy of the majority, the minority stresses the need of an offensive against capitalism by initiating an immediate struggle for the rapid achievement of Socialism. It is for this reason that they are opposed to Socialists participating in coalition governments, in placing faith in the League of Nations, in agitating and petitioning against war, and in trusting liberal, capitalistic and democratic elements.

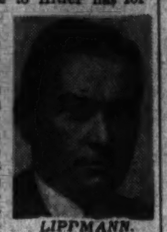
Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

On Opening Up A New World

THE MOVEMENT which began after Munich to appease Nazi Germany by delivering an African empire to Hitler has for the time being run upon insurmountable obstacles. After the demonstration of the past two weeks as to how the victorious Nazis mean to behave, it would now be morally impossible to obtain the consent of Parliament or of the French Chamber to a surrender of colonies. And it would be equally impossible to suggest that the Belgians or the Portuguese should make the sacrifices.



LIPPMANN.

But even before the current terrorism within the Reich, the opinion has been developing that the mere handing over of African colonies to Germany would create more problems than it can possibly solve. For there is no place in Africa where a Nazi empire can be established without complicating immeasurably the problem of British, French and even American defense. To return the former German colonies in Central Africa would mean that France, which now holds her African empire with small detachments of troops, would have to augment greatly her whole military system. It would mean that Great Britain, which can no longer count on the security of the Mediterranean highway to the East, would have to take far-reaching measure to make secure the other highway around the Cape of Good Hope. And it would mean that the United States, committed now as always to the defense of the hemisphere, would find Nazi Germany a naval power in the vicinity of South America.

Therefore, until there is a moral disarmament within Germany, the return of colonies would not be an appeasement but a strategic disaster requiring even greater military preparations than those which now burden mankind.

BUT WHILE IT is clear that the mere return of the former German colonies is not the solution of any problem, it is also clearer than ever that there is a colonial problem in which not only Germany but all of Europe are deeply concerned. The plight of the German Jews dramatizes the real problem. But it would be a grave misunderstanding of the problem to think that the only question is how to find a refuge for a tormented minority, or that even this problem can be solved by removing a half million Jews from the Reich. If any one doubts that this is not the problem, let him look to Poland, where the Poles are beginning to ask whether the great powers are going to assist Hitler by caring for his victims while they fail to provide an outlet for the surplus population of a nation that does not resort to such violence.

The question raised by the Poles goes to the heart of the real problem. It is at bottom the problem of European emigration, and to think about it all, we must fix clearly in mind its main elements. Between 1800 and the World War the population of Europe increased from 180 millions to 480 millions. During that period of a little more than a century about 60 million Europeans migrated to other continents, and of these about half migrated to the United States.

This great intercontinental migration was abruptly reduced in the post-war decade. Whereas a million Europeans had been emigrating each year before the war, the number was reduced to less than 300,000 a year. But these figures do not reveal the true picture. For many of the post-war emigrants from Europe have been from the United Kingdom to the British Dominions. The great pressure of surplus population is in central Europe. Thus Italy had an annual emigration of about 400,000 before the war; in 1930 there were only 60,000 Italian emigrants.

IT IS OBVIOUSLY no accident that the end of a century of free migration from Europe should have been followed immediately by a wave of revolutionary imperialism in the very region of Europe where the pressure of surplus population is the greatest and the post-war impoverishment the most acute. It is no accident, surely, that with the non-European world closed to European migration and in large part to European trade, there should have followed quickly a fierce movement toward empire and a ruthless spoliation of the more defenseless minorities.

Between 1924 and 1930 the doors to immigration had virtually been closed, not only in the United States but in the British Dominions and in South America. In less than a decade the Italians broke into Ethiopia, the Germans broke into central Europe, persecution and expropriation were adopted as national policies.

THE PROBLEM is utterly insoluble, except in a small number of individual cases, if it is looked upon as requiring no more than the finding of a haven of refuge for the immediate victims of the most calculated cruelty. Europe, even if it were normal, even if the Nazis were not Nazis, would have to be relieved of about a million human beings annually. For more than a century there has been a mass emigration from Europe in about that proportion, and unless there is a sudden change in the fertility of the white race, there can be no hope of peace in Europe unless mass emigration is once more possible.

But mass migration to already settled communities is entirely impossible. Such a movement of peoples can take place only into unsettled territory where an organized community life in the modern sense does not yet exist. For that reason the problem is a colonial problem: it is, in fact, the problem of developing the African Continent for European settlement.

THE TRUE COLONIAL question today is not how to partition Africa but how to organize its development as a place of settlement for Europeans. It is a great task. But rightly conceived, it is a task as inspiring as it is great, one to enlist the genius of the imperial nations, and to revive in the world that feeling of hope in the expansion of human energies which it has lost. The opening of a new continent to European migration will have to be undertaken in this century. Difficult as it looks, there is no other way to a genuine appeasement among and within the crowded nations of Europe.

In the seventeenth century a migration of this sort was organized by chartered companies under the patronage of royalty, and the colonists who moved overseas were men and women who had suffered in the Old World and were prepared to endure hardship in the New World. An organized migration of the same sort will have to be undertaken. If it is wisely planned and well managed and firmly disciplined the money invested in the undertaking will be repaid many times out of the riches that are waiting to be created, and the effort and trouble will be repaid in full measure out of the good will and the sense of increasing security that the prospect of a new world would give to Europe.

The Once Over

The Nazi Predicament

I.

Americans choose to be human—
They don't shove the aged around;
They can't see the pleasure of grinding
The underdog into the ground.
They won't rob the old and the helpless
Or confiscate treasure and land;
How strange are the ways of such people!

II.

They can't see the justice of slaying
A man and his wife and their child for having their own way of praying
Before a God gentle and mild.
They can't see the pleasure of burning
A church for the truth it has taught——
Won't someone explain to us quickly
The strangeness of this line of thought?

III.

They shrink from all inhumane slaughter
And wince at the things Nazis do
To women whose grandmothers happened
To love and to marry a Jew;
The stoning of priests quite offends them,
At pogroms they raise such a fuss! . . .
This strange attitude is perplexing;

IV.

They scorn to stir up racial hatreds,
And wouldn't drive clear off the earth
All men and all women and children
Because of an unapproved birth.
They can't understand widespread looting
By mobs Nazi rulers incite;
Won't someone explain this strange thinking?
The attitude doesn't seem right.

V.

They seem to be stirred by unfairness;
Injustice they do not applaud;
They can't see the bayonet solving
The question of Man and his God;
When Nazis delight in the Terror
That lays every human code low,
Americans think it improper—
Won't some one explain why it's so?

VI.

The world, so it seems, isn't with us
In choosing the savages' way;
It seems to think civilization
Is worth much respect in this day;
When Nazis treat humans like cattle
And leer at a people in pain,
The world doesn't lend its approval—
Why is this? Won't someone explain?

VII.

We constantly hear folks condemning
The law of the jungle and beast,
But why this should be so a Nazi
Cannot understand in the least;
Some folks say all men should be equal
And worship, unhampered, their God;
Our envoy we've asked to explain this

The Latent Red Menace

By Mark Sullivan

Also Odious To U. S.

SEVERAL PRESENT activities of the Administration are designed for defense against Nazi-Fascism. That is, they are designed against Nazi-Fascism coming from abroad. Our expansion in armament is designed to defend the United States, and also the whole American continent, against any future threat that might arise from the Nazi-Fascist group of nations—Germany, Japan and Italy. No one anticipates that any of these nations, singly or in combination, would attack the United States within any foreseeable time. But conceivably they might attack a South or Central American country—either attack it in a military sense, or seek to impose their will on it by other means.

SULLIVAN

The Nazi-Fascist nations are in alliance. As an alliance they are stronger than any other alliance of nations. All three—Germany, Japan and Italy—are engaged in territorial expansion. Preparedness by the United States against danger to Latin-America is clearly called for.

IN ADDITION to military preparedness, the United States is engaged in measures for defense against the spread of Nazi-Fascism as an idea. The Nazi-Fascist nations are actively spreading their principle of society and government in several Latin-American countries, by propaganda, by trade, by various devices of infiltration. Against this, we are strengthening the ties between ourselves and the Latin-American nations, for preservation of the democratic form of government and society which we devised a 150 years ago and which every Latin-American nation later adopted.

We are taking these steps against Nazi-Fascism for the reason that Nazi-Fascism is on the march. We are taking no similar measures against Communism, because Communism is not, at this time, on the march—that is, not in any military sense. Any expectation the Soviet Union may have had to expand by the methods of military force or territorial annexation is for the present vain. Russia is bottled up by the Nazi-Fascist nations.

BUT NAZI-FASCISM and Communism are each something more than military forces. Primarily they are ideas. And as ideas, Communism is as much a threat to America as Nazi-Fascism. It would be unfortunate if, in our measures of military defense against Nazi-Fascism, we should overlook the necessity for defense of another kind, against Communism. Of the two threats, Nazi-Fascism as an idea and Communism as an idea, the latter is rather the greater to the United States.

The two, Nazi-Fascism and Communism, are equally odious to America. Indeed the two, much as they hate each other, are largely identical. A distinguished American speaks of Nazi-Fascism and Communism as "blood-brothers." Actually the relation between them is that of parent and child.

Communism came first. It established itself in Russia in 1917. Immediately it sought to establish itself in other countries. (Among other efforts, the Communist heads in Russia sent money and agents to the United States for the purpose of inciting destruction of our form of government and society, including what the Communist heads dreamed of as a "black uprising" in the South.)

IN NO COUNTRY outside Russia did Communism succeed in establishing itself. In some countries it did succeed to the stage of creating the chaos and paralysis which are the preparation for Communism. But at this stage, events took an unexpected turn. In Italy, Mussolini set up an alternative which he called Fascism. In Germany, Hitler set up an alternative practically identical with Fascism but called Nazism.

Nazi-Fascism is the direct consequence of Communism. It practices the same technique as Communism, adopts the same forms. The principal difference is that while Communism denies the right of individuals to own property, Nazi-Fascism preserves it. But today the Nazi-Fascist right to own property is trimmed down to where it amounts to little. Other than this distinction, Nazi-Fascism and Communism are much the same. Both practice the authoritarian form of government, both practice mass persecution, mass execution. Both persecute religion. As sometimes happens, the offspring Nazi-Fascism carries the parent's methods to greater extremes. But everything that Germany does, it learned from Russia.

WHEN COMMUNISM started in Russia, before its methods and consequences became apparent, some in America saw it most fatuously as a step toward economic Utopia. For 20 years some American teachers in colleges, writers, intellectuals and others carried on propaganda for Communism. The movement still exists and is powerful. It is present in some colleges and schools, some churches, some labor organizations. The Communist philosophy of society is present in some quarters of our Government held by persons who either think they can bring about the so-called and utterly illusory economic equality of Communism without the attendant violence and persecution or who don't care if the violence and persecution come.

Against this danger of Communism the United States needs defense as vigorous as that which we are undertaking against Nazi-Fascism.

A Franco Victory And Latin America

SINCE MUNICH the people of the United States have become intensely conscious of the ties that bind us to the other nations of this hemisphere. There is real alarm over the possibility that the tidal wave of aggression that swept over Austria and Czecho-Slovakia this year will some day reach New World shores.

The feeling has grown, therefore, that we and the other countries of the New World begin at once to build a common dike to keep out the raging waters from overseas. This is the concept of hemispherical defense expounded by President Roosevelt in a recent press conference at the White House. And there is no doubt that at Lima next month this concept will come in for considerable discussion.

WHETHER any concrete plan of inter-American solidarity against outside aggression emerges from the Lima parley or not, it is certain that the United States, for its part, will increase its military, naval and air preparedness. The real lesson of Munich is being learned here. If you sup with the devil, you must have a long spoon.

But military preparations are not and cannot be enough. Our Navy and our Army are not our first and our second lines of defense; they are actually our last lines of defense. They come into operation only after all means of preventing war have been exhausted and only when the safety of the Nation is directly threatened.

It is essential, therefore, that to military and naval preparations must be added preparations of a different kind.

THE MISTAKE we have made in the past was to assume that events occurring at points distant from this hemisphere were of no concern to us.

We know, or should know, better now. We know, or should know, that the chain of events leading to our present state of jitters as reflected in the rearmament program had links as far removed in time and space as Japan's Manchurian adventure of 1931 and the Munich settlement of 1938. Clearly we cannot afford to ignore any development likely to increase our insecurity. Our margin of safety has been whittled down to the danger point.

OUR ALARM over the possible repercussions of Munich in this hemisphere have also sharpened our awareness of long-present dangers to which we have given only half-hearted attention hitherto.

For instance, there is the question of Fascist and Nazi propaganda in Latin America. We are beginning to realize that unless counteracted, this propaganda may lead to fatal divisions in the less stable nations to our south, and that, in turn, may give the aggressors a chance to apply to those nations the technique applied with success in Austria and Czecho-Slovakia and attempted in Spain.

TODAY GERMANY and Italy must perforce operate in Latin America from alien bases. The source of the propaganda, certainly of radio propaganda, is openly and admittedly German or Italian. But that very circumstance tends to reduce its effectiveness to a greater or lesser degree. The propaganda bears a foreign tag.

Should the insurgents win in Spain, Hitler and Mussolini would be in a position to exploit the Iberian peninsula as an exceedingly effective base for anti-United States and pro-Fascist operations in Latin America. Thus that inter-American unity which we now seek to establish may be menaced by developments across the sea.

THE MUNICH SETTLEMENT makes it peremptory for us, therefore, to re-examine our whole Spanish policy. If there was any danger, as some believed, of Spain becoming an outpost of Moscow, that danger has diminished to the vanishing point. The developments of the past few months have isolated Russia, so far as the rest of the European continent is concerned.

There is a far greater danger of Spain becoming the extension of the Rome-Berlin axis. Such a development we might have regarded with impunity in the past. Can we do so now?

THE FACT that cannot be ignored is that there are potentially in almost every Latin-American nation elements that, now as in the past, will seek to ride into power on an anti-United States program. In former days such elements could depend on a considerable body of sentiment hostile to the "Colossus of the North" to aid them in the achievement of their ambitions. In the future they may look for material and moral support to the Fascist powers whose hostility to the United States is reflected in almost every issue of the regimented German and Italian press. Only Fascism, in the event of a Spanish Nationalist victory, would take the form of Pan-Hispanism or Pan-Iberianism.

THE TIME has come, therefore, to re-examine the Spanish problem in the light of the changed European and world situation. Today, through our embargo legislation, we are the unwitting allies of Hitler and Mussolini in Spain. To continue that role in view of what its potential consequences might be is hardly compatible with our present interests. We must do everything possible to keep the New World free of the ideological struggle which bids fair to make a shambles of the Old.

HARRIS TWEEDS
Hand-woven on the Isle of Harris
$60

It has been said that the wardrobe of any well-dressed Britisher is never without a country suit of Harris Tweed. Seeing these, the reason becomes obvious. Hand-loomed and hand-woven on the Isle of Harris, the fabric calls to mind visions of heather-swept Scottish countryside . . . while the comfort and ease of the suit are eloquent testimony to the painstaking needlework employed in its making. We sincerely recommend them to any gentleman who does not intend to spend his winter indoors, toasting before a radiator.

Mary Chase Howard Makes Debut At Tea Dance at Sulgrave Club

Captain's Daughter Wears Tulle and Gold Lace
Thousand Guests Attend the Party
But There Is Room for All

By Hope Ridings Miller.
The Post Society Editor.

ONE OF THE BIGGEST, probably the prettiest, and certainly one of the most important debuts of the season accented the pre-Thanksgiving calendar yesterday afternoon when Miss Mary Chase Howard, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Herbert Seymour Howard, made her bow at a tea dance at the Sulgrave Club.

Stepping out in a cloud of pink tulle, and gold lace that matched her hair, the bud blossomed into society at an event that drew almost a thousand guests. But in contrast to most big teas, where the crush closes out the most pleasant partying aspects, yesterday's event was managed so well that you were hardly conscious of the huge crowd.

Instead of receiving at the top of the stairway, as is usually the procedure at the Sulgrave Club, Mrs. Howard and her daughter greeted guests at one end of the ballroom. White standards, looped with satin ribbon, marked the path through the two rooms on one side of the ballroom, and on to the bower of chrysanthemums and roses that framed the debutante and her mother.

Three large screens, completely covered with blossoms formed the background for the pair, Mrs. Howard appearing very much like a debutante herself and not so very different from the way she looked—so said some of her friends—on the day she made her bow to Washington society. Yesterday was an anniversary of that day, and many among the guests recalled details in connection with the party at which Mrs. Howard, then Mary McCauley and a belle of the season, was formally presented.

Bevy of Buds Assist Debutante

For yesterday's event, Mrs. Howard had chosen a frock of dark red velvet, made on simple lines and trimmed with bands of sable around the short sleeves. A string of pearls, white gloves and a corsage of white orchids and lilies of the valley completed her costume. The debutante, who is known as Maisie to her friends, wore a frock that must have been designed especially for her. Yards and yards of tulle were gathered into the full skirt; and the pink and gold lace bodice was fashioned on fitted lines with a swetheart neckline and short sleeves puffed at the shoulder. Setting off the ensemble was an old-fashioned bouquet of roses, gardenias and freesias.

While an orchestra played in the ballroom, guests moved on from there to the dining room, where a group of debs and post-debs were fluttering about, all by way of assisting the debutante. Very much the center of admiring eyes was Miss Jean Butterworth, of San Francisco, Calif., who is a house guest of Miss Howard and who was gowned in sky-blue lace with a full skirt and fitted bodice. Others assisting included Miss Ann Wilkinson, wearing a ruby velvet frock; Miss Agnes Magruder, in blue brocaded satin; Miss Elise Hill, Miss Marion Kirk, in bright red velvet; Miss Patricia Morris, one of the most attractive buds in the bevy, wearing a light blue taffeta frock with a hooped skirt, and Miss Alice Barry. Miss Adelaide Chatfield-Taylor, who also was scheduled to assist, was delayed in leaving college in time to get here for the party. She arrived a couple of hours later.

Many From Navy Set Among the Guests

The tea table was a picture worth remembering. Centered by a huge bouquet of pink roses, flanked with tall white tapers, it was laden with a choice selection of dainties. Four assistant hostesses at a time poured tea and coffee, as the crowd clustered around to be served. Among those alternating at the coffee and tea urns were Mrs. William Leahy, wearing a smart black ensemble; Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, who wore a handsome teal blue plumed hat with a crepe frock to match; Mrs. Wilson Brown, Mrs. C. A. R. Coleby, Mrs. Henry Williams; Miss Eloise Sargent; Mrs. Richard Wilmer, Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, whose black frock was set off with a tiny bright red velvet hat, very fetching; Mrs. Emory Land, who with her husband, Admiral Land, recently returned from a trip to South America; Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Mrs. Theodore Wilkinson, Mrs. Nathan Wyeth, Mrs. Wilson Lee, Mrs. William Flather, Miss Anne Randolph, Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, and Mrs. McClintock Ellis, of Princeton, N. J., and Lady Lewis—both of whom were Mary McCauley's attendants when she became a bride.

The crowd had a noticeable "service accent," as would be expected since the debutante's father is a high-ranking Navy officer; but cave-dwelling Washington, representatives of which have known the debutante's parents for years, made up the largest group of guests.

To mention at random a few I saw there were Mrs. Stanley Reed, Commander and Mrs. John H. Magruder, Admiral Emory S. Land, Capt. and Mrs. Emmet C. Gudger, whose debutante daughter, Miss Elinor Gudger, arrived from Mount Holyoke College early this morning; Miss Frances Andrews, daughter of Vice Admiral and Mrs. Adolphus Andrews, who recently arrived in Washington with her parents and will be here through the Christmas holidays; Mrs. George Maurice Morris, who will present her daughter, Patricia, to society this afternoon; Mrs. Hamilton Bryan, Mrs. Robert H. Dunlap, Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol, the Naval Attache of the French Embassy, Commander Pierre Benech, and Mme. Benech; Miss Josephine Patten, Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Edward W. Sturdevant and their daughter, Miss Mary Alice Sturdevant, who is home from Bryn Mawr for the holidays.

Also, the Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy and Donna Bianca Cugia, Miss Elizabeth Howry, Mrs. Henry D. Flood, Mrs. Effingham Townsend, with her debutante daughter, Miss Peggy Townsend; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem, Miss Mary Randolph, Ralph Snowden Hill, Mrs. Hiram Bingham, Mrs. Harry Hickey, Baroness von Belew, Miss Emily Davis, Wolcott Waggaman, Robert Whitman, of New York; Miss Carolyn Chantry, Miss Stellita Stapleton, Miss Doris Becker, Miss Elizabeth Meyers, Miss Christine Gawne, Miss Nancy Ordway, William Pettengill and dozens and dozens of others.

Mrs. Swanson To Entertain at Army-Navy Game

Those who will be guests of Mrs. Claude A. Swanson at the Army-Navy game on Saturday include Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Judge and Mrs. D. Lawrence Groner, Capt. and Mrs. John R. Beardall, and Douglas Hall.

Mrs. Malin Craig, wife of the Chief of Staff of the Army, and Mrs. William D. Leahy, wife of Admiral Leahy, Chief of Naval Operations, will also have friends with them in their boxes.

Marlers to Go West Tomorrow

The Canadian Minister, Sir Herbert Marler, and Lady Marler, who spent a long, hot summer in Washington, will leave tomorrow for a vacation in California. They will not return until the first of the year.

Work on the recently signed trade treaty kept the Marlers in town during the warm weather.

Mrs. Lea Postpones Dinner Until Dec. 30

Mrs. Charles Lea, who was to have given a dinner December 21 for Miss Maisie Howard, has postponed the date to December 30. The party will take place at the Sulgrave Club.

The postponement was caused by the fact that the Princeton Triangle Club will present its show—"Once Over Lightly"—December 21.

Deb's Party Dec. 3

Mrs. R. Goodwin Rhett, jr., has issued invitations for a luncheon on December 3 at her home in honor of Miss Jane Eustis, debutante daughter of Mrs. H. Chotard Eustis.

Their Debuts Fell On the Same Day

Oberholzers To Visit Here

Dr. and Mrs. Winifred Overholser will have as their guests over Thanksgiving Dr. and Mrs. Emil Oberholzer, of Zurich, Switzerland. Dr. Oberholzer is one of the outstanding psychiatrists of that country and has recently come to New York to practice.

He will address members of the staff of St. Elizabeths Hospital tomorrow morning and will be guest of honor at a tea to be given on Saturday afternoon by Dr. Overholser, who is superintendent of the hospital, and Mrs. Overholser.

Owing to the similarity of their names and the fact that he is of Swiss descent, Dr. Overholser is going to see during his guests' stay whether or not they are cousins.

Cora Jahncke New Orleans Bride

A wedding of interest to Washington society took place last Tuesday evening in New Orleans, when Miss Cora Stanton Jahncke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Lee Jahncke, became the bride of William Henry Seaman, jr. The bride's father was formerly Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

The wedding took place in the Christ Church Cathedral in New Orleans, at 8 o'clock in the evening. The bride was gowned in white and her wedding veil was one worn by her maternal great-grandmother, Miss Ellen Hutchison, when she married Edwin M. Stanton, Secretary of War, in the Cabinet of President Lincoln.

The former Miss Jahncke was graduated from Newcomb College at New Orleans and is a member of Pi Beta Phi Sorority and a Junior League member. When her father was in the little Cabinet, she was sponsor for the U. S. S. New Orleans. Three years ago she was queen of the Mardi Gras in New Orleans.

Mary Bellamy Verner To Be Guest Here Today

Among those from out of town who will attend the Black and White ball on Saturday is Miss Mary Bellamy Verner, of Columbia, S. C. She will arrive in town today and will be entertained informally this evening by the Rev. Meade Bolton MacBryde and Thomas Rogers Drake. On Saturday afternoon she will see the football game between Catholic University and the University of South Carolina, of which she is a graduate.

Miss Verner, who is the daughter of Mrs. James Spencer Verner, of Columbia, and the late Mr. Verner, made her debut at the Assembly Hall in Columbia two seasons ago.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

TWIRLING OR STUMBLING over the ice, according to their degree of aptitude, or just looking on, many members of local society gathered yesterday at the new skating rink on Connecticut avenue for its opening.

Washingtonians are not expected to skate well, the Capital climate providing a perfect alibi, but there were several able performers yesterday aside from the talent which had been imported for the exhibition. Among them we saw Mrs. Nathan Wyeth, in a black skirt and jacket with a yellow blouse; Mary Cootes, with a jade green sweater over her black dress, circling the rink with Gale McLean, and James Gibson, who remarked that it was much more healthy than cocktail parties and a lot more fun.

AN ABLE PAIR of waltzers were Mr. and Mrs. John Borton, the latter wearing a bright yellow jacket and brief black skirt. Mr. Borton, who goes in for every possible variety of athletics, is treasurer of the newly formed Washington Ice Club, and an officer of the Ski Club. Mrs. Donald Hiss, secretary of the club, looked efficient with a huge black notebook under her arm, though she did not skate. She was accompanied by Elsie Ekengren, who made a few tentative twirls about the rink.

Mrs. Dean Acheson and Mrs. Arthur Clephane, who are on the board of governors, arrived early and stayed late. Mrs. Clephane is a skater of championship caliber, and took part in the exhibitions. Perhaps the most enthusiastic person there was Suzanne Davis King, who came all the way from her home in Richmond for an afternoon of skating. She lived in Boston until her marriage, and is former women's national champion.

Skating costumes yesterday ranged all the way from an afternoon dress with a large rhinestone clip to the very attractive brief dresses of the exhibition skaters. Dorothy Snell, of Washington, former runner-up for the title, was particularly lovely in a powder blue outfit with a flaring skirt.

ONLOOKERS included Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz, wife of the Belgian Ambassador, who was accompanied by her daughter, Betty. The countess wore an olive green two-piece suit and a brown sports hat. Barbara Donald, William Blum, Mr. Clephane, Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding, accompanied by Mrs. Edward Burling and the latter's sister, Anne Perin, Mary Wilson skating with her brother, Charles, debutante Nancy Hoskinson, were others who skated a bit themselves or admired the exhibition.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mitchell, managers of the rink, received many admiring comments on the ability of their daughter, Nannie, who while much younger than the fancy skaters who performed, is almost as good.

LADY RAVENSDALE, who has been visiting Mrs. Otto Kahn in New York, will spend Sunday in Washington en route to Middleburg for a hunting stay with Mr. and Mrs. William Langley. She is the oldest daughter of Lord Curzon, one time viceroy of India, who married the sister of Joseph Leiter.

MRS. BENJAMIN THAW has dropped her lessons in sculpture for the nonce and has gone to Essex, Conn., where she recently bought a house. She will spend the next six weeks doing it over. She was accompanied by Mrs. Elliott Comstock, of Essex, who has been visiting Mrs. George T. Pettingill.

PARTY NOTES: Mrs. McCeney Werlich will entertain at a small cocktail party tomorrow for her brother, Robert Hinckley, who is visiting her . . . Mrs. Marion Warburg will givea similar affair on Saturday.

Miss Townsend Honor Guest at Debutante Party

Miss Loeb Is Engaged To Dr. Morton Kaufman

Mr. and Mrs. Myer J. Leob have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Janice Leob, to Dr. Morton S. Kaufman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Kaufman, of Chicago. The bride-elect is a graduate of George Washington University. Dr. Kaufman was graduated from the University of Michigan and the University of Louisville Medical School and is now a practicing physician in Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Leob will entertain in honor of their daughter and her fiance Sunday evening at their home on Blagden avenue, from 8 until 11 o'clock.

Richard Burton Coming

Richard Burton, American college professor and critic, will be the guest of Mrs. Frederic Ernest Farrington, regent of the Chevy Chase Junior College, at her home on the campus, arriving tomorrow. Monday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock he will address the school on "People in the Literary Spotlight."

Thanksgiving Quiet for Most Of Cabinet

Only 2 Entertaining
Hulls Leave Today
To Sail for Peru

Eating turkey will be chiefly a family affair in most Cabinet households today. Only the Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring and the Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings are entertaining tonight. Secretary and Mrs. Woodring will gather in a few of their Kansas friends for an informal buffet supper, and the Attorney General and Mrs. Cummings will give a dinner, having among their guests Mr. and Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo, and Miss Emily Lovell, of New York and Greenwich, Conn., who recently came to Washington for a visit.

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull will have a quiet Thanksgiving dinner in their apartment at the Carlton. They will leave later for New York, sailing from there on the Santa Clara for the Pan-American Conference in Peru. The Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., will celebrate Thanksgiving at their farm in Fishkill, N. Y. In New York City for Thanksgiving dinner with their respective families are Postmaster General James A. Farley and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins.

The Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Claude A. Swanson and the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace will have quiet dinners in their homes. The Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Harold Ickes will have with them for the day the latter's sister, Miss Ann Dolman, and a guest from Cleveland, and the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper will entertain at a family Thanksgiving dinner in their home.

Dorothy Siems Sets Bridal Date

Miss Dorothy Shelby Siems, daughter of Princess Irbain-Khan Kaplanoff, of New York and Southampton, has completed plans for her marriage to James Abercrombie de Peyster, son of the Countess Bohdan de Castellane and of Frederic Ashton de Peyster, both of New York, and nephew of Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, of Bethesda.

The ceremony will take place December 2 in the St. James Protestant Episcopal Church in New York. Mrs. Crosby Tuttle Smith, of New York, will serve as matron of honor for her sister, and the other bridal attendants will be Mrs. Eric A. von Raits, sister of the bridegroom-elect; Mrs. Hans George Spitzer, the former Princess Daria Obolensky; Miss Margaret Yates and Miss Madeleine Marvin-Smith.

Frederick Ashton de Peyster, jr., will be best man for his brother. The ushers are Eric A. von Raits and James Todd, brothers-in-law of Mr. de Peyster; Crosby Tuttle Smith, George de Peyster, William Bell Watkins, of Berryville, Va., and William Tingue, of New York.

Elizabeth Enochs Will 'Cover' Pan-American Talks

Because she speaks Spanish fluently, Mrs. John M. Enochs, also known as Elizabeth Sherley Enochs, is going down to Lima to "cover" the Pan-American parley. She will be the only woman newspaper correspondent on deck when the steamship Santa Clara sails tomorrow.

While she is in Lima, Mrs. Enochs will be the guest of her friend, Senora de Maurtua, widow of Dr. Victor Maurtua, who once served as a sort of traveling ambassador for Peru and was his country's first Ambassador to Brazil. Mrs. Enochs, during her stay in Iima, will also do some work for the Children's Bureau, with which she is now associated.

Battles Are Hosts On Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. P. Elmo Battle entertained on their first wedding anniversary at a cocktail party, last evening in their home at 3700 Massachusetts avenue. Assisting Mrs. Battle were her mother, Mrs. Theodore Stoner and her sister, Mrs. T. A. M. Craven, wife of the Federal Communications commissioner.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Carl G. Stoner, Mr. and Mrs. George Eugene Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Emmet Shea, Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Greenwood, Mr. and Mrs. W. Page Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel J. Hogan, Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Fitzpatrick, Mrs. Hilda Delano Hayes, Mrs. W. W. Graham, Mrs. Ida B. Brown, the Misses Agnes and Lilian Richardy, Miss Margaret Golden, Albert L. Jones, Lawrence Mahoney, Robert Dedmon, and a host of other friends.

Mrs. Woodson to Give Tea for Miss Henning

Mrs. Eugene R. Woodson and her daughter, Mrs. Lambert Jones, will entertain at a tea for Miss Barbara Henning, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur S. Henning, December 4, at Mrs. Woodson's residence, 3345 Klingle road.

Miss Henning will be presented this afternoon at a tea to be given by her parents.

Wilkinsons Give Daughter Dance in Their Virginia Home

Dinners for Younger Set Precede Affair
Debutante Wears Gown of White Net
Commander and Mrs. Magruder Entertain

The vegetable came into its own as a decorative motif at the gay dance given last evening by Capt. and Mrs. Theodore Wilkinson in honor of their debutante daughter, Miss Ann Wilkinson. Pumpkins, peppers, red and green, and other colorful edibles were piled high on mantelpieces and tables at Hockley, the red brick, white-pillared home of the family just across the river in Virginia.

It was largely a young people's party, Miss Wilkinson having been presented to older friends of the family at a tea last month. A number of gay dinners for members of the younger set who are home from school and college preceded the dance, which lasted until the small hours of the morning.

Mrs. Chapin Fetes Three Debs

The pretty blonde hostess attended the dinner given by Mrs. Frederic Chapin, her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Selden Chapin, and her granddaughter, Miss Marian Kirk, home from Bryn Mawr for Thanksgiving. Sharing honors with Miss Wilkinson were Miss Adelaide Chatfield-Taylor, daughter of the Assistant Treasury Secretary and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, and also a student at Bryn Mawr, and Miss Maisie Howard, who made her bow to society yesterday afternoon at a large reception at the Sulgrave Club.

Miss Wilkinson wore a full-skirted gown of white net, with a glittering bodice of gold sequins. She received with her parents, and her younger sister, Joan, in front of the fireplace in the wide hall of Hockley. Mrs. Wilkinson had chosen a cream-colored satin gown, simply made, for the occasion.

Evergreen branches festooned around the lights and entwined on the balustrade of the stairway were other decorations. Sidney's orchestra played, and a lavish supper was served at 1 o'clock.

Staying with Miss Wilkinson for the dance were Miss Patricia Pike, of New York, with whom she studied in Florence, Italy; Guy Scull, of Boston, and Edward Whitman, of Baltimore.

Miss Kirk has with her over the holidays Miss Julia Martin, of New York, who also attended the dance. There were numerous other out-of-town guests who added to the gayety of the occasion, including Irving Howbert 2d, of Colorado Springs, and Brinton Young, of Radnor, Pa., classmates at Yale of Richard H. Wilmer, jr. Charles Carroll Glover 3d also brought down several of his Yale friends for the party.

Miss Magruder Dinner Hostess

Commander and Mrs. John Magruder entertained at dinner for their debutante daughter, Miss Agnes Magruder, before the dance. Their guests included Miss Nancy Brereton, who wore a blue taffeta frock with a dark blue velvet sash, and a corsage of orchids; Miss Mary Louise Marsh, Miss Jane Rust, who will make her bow tomorrow at a tea dance at the 1925 F Street Club; Sylvia Alexander and Peggy Townsend, who wore a strapless taffeta frock in various shades of pink, lavender and deep purple. Mrs. Wallach Merriam, Edward Gardner, Griffith Warfield, Armand Berard, of the French Embassy; Lieut. Comdr. Richard van Bergen, Robert Whitman, of New York; Lieut. Stuart Blue and John Magruder 3d, home from Amherst for the holidays, completed the party.

Another Bryn Mawr student, Miss Mary Alice Sturdevant, brought a party of guests to the ball. With her was a classmate, Miss Bonnie Young of Omaha, Miss Anne Underwood, Miss Rita Nash, Mallory Nash and Douglas Hall.

Pretty Miss Mary Alice White, who will be presented by her parents Saturday afternoon, December 3, flew down from her studies at Vassar, arriving just in time for dinner. She wore a stunning Hattie Carnegie model of white tulle with a sequin bodice.

Others seen dancing in the high-ceilinged rooms of Hockley were dark-haired Miss Emily Davis, in smart white satin and an enormous red poppy at the neckline; Miss Christine Gawne, in flowered taffeta, and her younger brother, James Gawne; Perry Lippitt, Miss Caroline Hart, debutante daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Thomas C. Hart; Miss Ruth Dove, Miss Colly Corbin, and many others, a little over a hundred in all.

Older friends of Capt. and Mrs. Wilkinson present included Mrs. Merriam, Mrs. Frederic Chapin and Mr. and Mrs. William Flather, jr.

Miss Sheppard To Make Debut

Another important name was added to the list of debutantes for the season yesterday when Senator and Mrs. Morris Sheppard completed plans to present to society their daughter, Miss Lucile Sheppard, on Friday, December 30.

The party, a small dinner dance, will take place at the Mayflower Hotel.

Miss Sheppard, one of the most attractive buds this year, is a student at Wellesley College but will join in the parties during the holidays. Last summer Miss Sheppard spent much time in Europe, later joining her parents here for a brief stay.

Debutantes to Aid St. Gertrude's Tea On December 5

A number of debutantes and sub-debs will assist the ladies of St. Gertrude's Guild at their annual bridge tea at the Wardman Park December 5, for the benefit of St. Gertrude's School of Arts and Crafts.

Miss Sylvia Hoban Alexander, chairman of the group, will have as her aides Senorita Beatriz Recinos, daughter of the Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos; Mlle. Marie Bianchi, daughter of the Minister of Portugal and Mme. de Bianchi; the Misses Emer, Deirdre and Maeve Brennan, daughters of the Irish Minister and Mrs. Robert Brennan; Miss Julie Cahill, the Misses Margaret and Claire Cotter, Miss Aubrey Conan, Miss Mary Ellen Carter, Miss Nancy Callahan, Miss Ann Buchanan, Miss Mary Jo Buchanan, the Misses Martha, Anne and Geraldine Garrity, Miss Margaret Mary Giegengack, Miss Helen Hanley, Miss Lois Ward and Miss Suzanne Slingluff.

They will assist at the various booths, where handmade articles suitable for Christmas gifts will be on sale, and at the food booth. Proceeds from the tea, sponsored by the Postmaster General and Mrs. James A. Farley, other officials and their wives, social and civic leaders, will go toward the work being done at St. Gertrude's for backward girls.

Frank Shah to Wed Helene Ferriter

Mr. and Mrs. James Wells Ferriter announce the engagement of their daughter, Helene, to Frank Shah, son of Mr. and Mrs. I. Shah, of Washington. The wedding will take place in January.

The bride-elect is a graduate of Georgetown Visitation Convent and attended Dunbarton College of Holy Cross Academy. Mr. Shah attended George Washington University.

Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Smith To Visit the Herricks

Mr. and Mrs. John O. Herrick will have as their guests this week-end Mrs. Herrick's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. George Sanborn Smith, of Evanston, Ill., who will arrive Saturday afternoon.

On Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Herrick will entertain at a small cocktail party for their guests from 5 to 7 o'clock.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Should College Boy Continue to Court Girl Whose Social Background Is Less Fortunate Than His?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young college student of 20. I have a good social standing and many nice friends. Several months ago I met a girl of 17 with whom I believe myself in love, but certain circumstances have arisen which make me wonder whether or not she would make me a good wife. First, she misrepresented her family to me and then began a series of small falsehoods, all which I overlooked. I tried to make myself forget her family and think only of her.

Recently, however, her father, who is a habitual drunkard, turned on me and for no apparent reason has acted very harshly. Do you think I should forget position and continue to go with the girl in the hope of matters straightening themselves out? Or do you think I should try to forget her? If the latter seems most advisable, what method would you suggest that I follow in tactfully breaking off my relationship with her? Sincerely, WORRIED.

DEAR WORRIED: You are wading in waters beyond your depth, concealing many a treacherous pitfall beneath, in becoming emotionally involved with a girl whose background, philosophy of life and social outlook are so alien to yours. I daresay you haven't an intellectual interest in common; that the nature of the mutual attraction is purely physical, of the sort that is known as infatuation; and that it will not survive a second summer.

If basic harmony of temperament existed; if either was spiritually kin to the other, the girl would not have felt a continuous necessity to sustain the relationship on a series of petty falsehoods, nor would you have felt a necessity to perpetuate the fraud by overlooking such unworthy deceits. With unerring instinct, you would have divined the pathetic or lamentable factors in her background or reasoning which inspired that clumsy dissembling, and with tact and courage would have sought to invest her with greater self-respect, a higher regard for the range and quality of your understanding and a realization that mutual honesty and mutual trust afford the only basis for an honorable and enduring love relationship.

Only by reacting in such wise to her falsifications could you have arrived at a sound approximation of her essential worth. If she is the right sort of person, capable of rising above environmental handicaps with the help of a sympathetic, out-stretched hand, she would have abandoned her shams with grateful alacrity. And if, on the other hand, she is the sort of person to whom petty prevaricating is second nature; to whom a lie appeals when the truth would serve better—and there are many such abroad in the land—you would have found that out, too, for she would have continued to misrepresent as a matter of habit.

However, under the circumstances, because you are floundering beyond your depths; because each of you is so young as to render the idea of marriage ridiculous, either now or for years to come; because it is a matter of record that her way of life, both literal and figurative, is alien to yours; and because her father has seen fit to treat you as an unwelcome and suspect intruder into his family circle, I think the only common sense thing for you to do is to discontinue the relationship.

As for breaking away in a tactful manner, I can only suggest that you tell her as much of the truth as the occasion demands. This includes, of course, the fact that marriage is out of the question, which means that you have no right to speak of marriage or to make serious love to her, because she is at least six years too young for marriage; and because you will not be in a position to marry until your education is finished and you are earning enough to finance a home. Tell her that her father probably is thinking of these things in displaying such fierce resentment of your courtship; and you are now convinced that any further attentions you might show her would only be the occasion of more unhappiness than happiness to both, and for that reason you are checking out.

Spiritual Guidance

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: May I suggest to "Distressed," your correspondent of November 20, that she seek spiritual guidance in the matter of dealing with her drinking husband? It seems to me this would be wiser than leaving without giving him another chance. Suppose, for instance, that she were to leave while he is away on this planned trip with a former drinking companion, and suppose he refused to take a drink while away, and came proudly home to show his wife what a good boy he had been, and found her gone!

If she remains at home and prays faithfully for her husband's reform, things should come out right for her. Only God can guide her aright. I refer her to the sixteenth chapter of St. John, where Christ's message to His disciples is recorded: "Whatsoever ye ask in my name He will give it you." He also said: "And I say not unto you that I will pray the Father for you; for the Father himself loveth you, because you have loved Me and have believed that I come from God."

If "Distressed's" heart is right, then much should be accomplished. I am always glad, Miss Haworth, when I see you advising persons along spiritual lines; for all of us need spiritual guidance above all else.

Interesting Talk Wins Friends

HOW LIKE Elsie—to start on a blind date without a single friendly phrase in her head!

At parties Elsie sits awkwardly silent in the midst of gay chatter. When she goes after a job, she annoys with floundering "er-er's." Like many people she trusts to luck to think of something to say. A sad mistake—when it's so easy to make your own luck by learning a store of gracious phrases.

You can put acquaintances at ease with some simple remark like "How exhilarating these fall days are!"

At a party you can become the center of a brightly talking group with these ice-breakers. "What do you think—" and "That reminds me—"

You flatter by asking for an opinion—whether it's about a new swing band or war threat in Europe. And if you say, "this music reminds me of the orchestra at our summer hotel," you'll start others gayly remembering and talking too—about orchestras, hotels, vacations.

On business calls use such path-smoothers as "May I see Mr. Jones? I'm applying for—" "Mr. Jones, I'm Helen Smith. I understand you've an opening——"

Newest Glove News—Finger Freedom

Finger free gloves mark a new era in structurally designed glove making. A youthful American industrial designer, Merry Hull, engineered and created these three-dimensioned gloves, above, of pigskin and stitched suede. They do not pull on, rather slip on for the fourchettes are walled to follow the contours of the fingers. There is extra length in the back of the finger to allow for even the most streamlined fingernails

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Nov. 23.

THIS IS the one day in the year when New York is really an American city. Thoughtful citizens of this bedlam make no pretense to civic Americanism in the rest of the year. As a matter of fact, there are probably at least 20 New Yorks, and if the town is ever chiseled up among the various nations it will look worse than Czecho-Slovakia.

But this is a day that by common consent is American in its celebration, and all the small nations in our borders eat the same ceremonial turkey, dressing and other fixings which have been the conventional gastronomic endurance contest down the years.

The small Germans of Yorkville and the young Irish in Hell's Kitchen and the young Spaniards around 110th street all suffer from precisely the same type of belly-ache—which is 100 per cent American. On their various feast days and national festivals they are all entitled to get sick on the delicacies of their native land, but Thanksgiving Day is the only feast I know here that makes the famous melting pot really melt.

One of the great tragedies of New York's existence is the fact that it has not really worked as a melting pot. The incoming national groups have not melted to this day, which makes us a strange collection of small countries reading their own language newspapers and listening to their own native politics in the languages they brought from home and have refused to discard.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: Dorothy Lamour has been a pleasing sight about the city for the last week, even though she broke the hearts of the boys by wearing a fur coat instead of a sarong. Incidentally, process servers have found that the best moment for slapping their cruel papers on a movie star is at one of the parties always given in their honor by the company for which they work. I hear that the beautiful Dorothy received this brutal treatment when she was being cordial to the press. It's almost enough to make movie stars swear off such gaudy orgies.

Young Merry Hull Designs New 'Finger Free' Glove Style

Model Is Termed Three-Dimensional
Fits Palm and Fingers Without Cramping
She Has Patented Her Invention

This is one of a series of articles on American design in women's fashions.

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

ONE HUNDRED and four years ago a Frenchman named Xavier Jouvin introduced a revolution in glove making. He standardized glove sizes by means of new dyes which meant that no longer did gloves have to be made to order for persons who could not afford this luxury.

MARSHALL ADAMS

That was back in the days when no one had either heard or cared about American designers. Within the past few months, an attractive American girl has made just as interesting strides in glove history as did Jouvin. Merry Hull, a slip of a blonde from the Middle West, is typical of the advancement being made in native design fields. She is in her early twenties, inventive of mind, and unhampered with Continental beliefs.

Merry Hull's invention is called a finger-free glove. She has worked out a three-dimensional glove which actually fits the palm and fingers without cramping. It is based around a U-turned wall that runs from the thumb all around the fingers and down the side. Its tips are made longer to keep the nails from pushing through. Freedom of action, greater wear and a degree of comfort hitherto unknown is the result.

Merry Hull's glove inspiration had just as casual an origin as most good basic designs of this type. After specializing in everything from fashion illustration to learning leather and shoe construction, she threw her youthful vigor into industrial design. At that time, she was still Gladys Whitcomb, sister to a widely known New York fashion illustrator, and still trying to carve out a name strictly on her own. Less than a year ago, she enrolled in a glove making school, just so she could make the nicest possible hand-sewn gloves for her sister. Rebellious over the hampering effect of most styles, she worked out her own basic construction, had it patented. (Gladys Whitcomb never sent that pair of gloves to her sister. They were held up too long in patent attorney offices.)

Just as the long suffering foot was encased for centuries in short pinched shoes, hands had been pinched to a point until Merry Hill mechanized her "finger frees." She has proven that youngsters, inexperienced in the wiles of Continental haute coutour, can exercise native common sense, precision of thought, imaginative candor, and yet remain feminine enough to be a typically charming American career girl.

Bachelor Cooks May Prepare Own Thanksgiving Dinners

By Alice Clayton.
The Post Food Editor.

WASHINGTON can boast a larger population of men who cook and plan their own menus than most cities of corresponding size. For the last few days, mysterious and somewhat timid calls have been coming into this food department from bashful males. They have asked for new and different ways of preparing their own Thanksgiving dinner this year. One young man boldly admitted that he has been cooking turkey day dinner for his six friends for the last four or five years. He adds that he wouldn't miss this chance for culinary self-expression for any number of invitations out.

For the benefit of this blithe young chef and for other cook-at homes-and-like-it, the following dishes have been culled from local chefs who make their livings by their scullery art. These ideas are strictly capital dishes, for they represent specialites de la maison of two Washington hotels.

Suppose you are a young man, anyway, young in heart. You haven't the facilities for preparing a large turkey dinner, but you have a chafing dish and a little knack of serving small buffet suppers to any queens taste. Invite a few friends over for a late Thanksgiving snack, which will consist of correctly cooled Sautern or Chablis wine, a superb Canape Marquis, served on toast, hot coffee, fresh fruits and small cakes.

This Marquis is named after its creator, Arthur Marquis, maitre d' hotel at the Pall Mall Room of the Raleigh Hotel. He has recently inaugurated this spicy dish as a tribute to his special Washington friends. Its tangy richness of ingredients make of it a whole supper, rather than a mere canape, as Marquis modestly terms it. Its tuna fish blend, spiked with anchovies and chives will linger in the minds of many a holiday guest after the mince pie is forgotten.

Canapa Marquis

1 hard-boiled egg
½ green pepper
1 peeled tomato
6 filets of anchovies
As much tuna fish as the weight of an egg and some chopped chives.

Chop all together. Take four pieces of toasted sandwich bread, place them in silver platted and cook with sweet butter until crisp. Place chopped ingredients flat on top of each piece of toast. Add a spoonful of Russian dressing, with several drops of Worcestershire sauuce. Serve very hot.

Emilio Crocl, another chef of imagination, has conjured up a rare and surprising recipe for Virginia turkey. His friends at the Ambassador Hotel swear by this recipe. The fowls' dressing of minced ham, shallots and celery may end the quest of any amateur chef, who thirsts for unusual turkey-day recipes. Here is Crocis' recipe and his menu surrounding the entree.

Thanksgiving Stag Dinner

Chilled orange cocktail
Celery Assorted pickles and olives
Clear consomme
Roast Virginia Turkey
Spicy dressing Cranberry sauce
Candied sweet potatoes
Hubbard squash Brussels sprouts
Jullienne cabbage and carrot salad
Hot biscuits, rolls and butter
Apple cider
Pumpkin pie Hot coffee

Croel's Turkey

Take a young turkey, draw, singe and clean well extracting all the pin feathers, having it washed and dried well. Cut lengthwise one veal filet. Chop raw ham, dice a few turkey livers, chop onions, celery, shallots and fry in bacon fat to a nice golden color. Moisten a small quantity of bread then add ingredients, salt, pepper, thyme and sage. Mix thoroughly. Stuff the Turkey with this dressing and place a large thin slice of fat meat over the breast (this prevents from drying and imparts a delicious flavor). Tie and fasten the legs securely. Place the turkey in a roasting pan, surround with leeks, bay leaves and parsley. Bake in an oven with slow, even fire, basting every 15 minutes with a little stock and cook for two hours or until well done. When done it should have a rich golden color. Serve on a large platter surrounded by celery and olives. The gravy from the turkey should be served with cranberry sauce.

Keep Youth By Dancing As You Exercise

Practice Lambeth Walk Everybody's Doing It Slims Mid-Section

By Ida Jean Kain.

EVEN THOUGH you go to a dance only once in a blue moon, you should be doing the latest dance steps and having the time of your life getting your exercise. If you are doing the foxtrot while everyone else is polishing off a tricky new tsep, you feel as dated as if you were doing the toddle—so you toddle on home.

That's no way to hang on to your youth! For the last couple of seasons the new steps have been so hectic that all but the "jitterbugs" took to cover, but this year the steps are easy. Yes, you can do them! I interviewed Mrs. Arthur Murray, dance authority, and found out exactly how to go about learning a new dance step as you do your exercise.

"Dancing does not make you thin, but it gives you a slim midsection," promises this authority, and she advocates dancing alone, not only for the exercise, but "because if you are a good dancer alone, you are a good dancer with a partner."

When you are dancing about the room all by yourself, hold the arms up in front, shoulder level, as if you were really dancing. This trains your arm muscles, makes you graceful and your arms beautiful.

Exercise for Poise

The main thing that makes you a heavy partner, however, is the failure to take a long enough backward step. Unless you reach back far enough with your foot, your partner's step is limited, which cramps his style and makes you feel like a ton of bricks.

Hold your arms up in front and take long backward steps, swinging from the hips. Make the steps as long as you can, reaching back with toes pointed. Keep taking these backward steps, reaching far back and keeping in the same straight line, toes leading.

A fine exercise for poise and one that makes you feel positively graceful is this:

Step back, crossing the left foot back of the right foot, and sway toward the right, arms stretched overhead. Then step back with the right foot crossed in back of the left, and sway to the left, arms stretched overhead. Bend acutely at the waist. When you can do this easily, Mrs. Murray says, your balance is good and you cannot possibly be awkward. And does it slim the waistline!

Everybody's Doing It

Everybody's doing the Lambeth Walk. Turn on the radio and practice it to music. There are several variations of the walk, but one of the favorites is a regular pattern of eight steps. Strut forward eight steps, swinging the arms and walking in jaunty cockney fashion. Now, if you had a partner you would link arms and walk around in a circle to the right for eight steps, quickly reverse the linked arms and walk in a circle to the left for four steps. Now strut forward again, side by side, for eight steps. Separate from your imaginary partner and take four steps in a small circle, closing the heels on the fourth step. Face each other, knees slightly bent, and slap the knees in rhythm to Do . . . in . . . the Lam . . . beth . . . Walk. You end in a spirit of abandon, pointing the thumbs over the shoulders in hitch-hiking fashion, and shout, "Oi!"

Orders of the Day

MRS. CHIRP—Now before any of the company gets here, I just want to say this much——

MR. CHIRP—Who all's coming?

MRS. CHIRP—Well, of course, the two grandmas—

JUNIOR—Will they bring me anything?

MRS. CHIRP—Well, for heaven's sake, don't ask them. And another thing, when Cousin Ella comes——.

BIG SISTER—Why do we have to have her?

MR. CHIRP—Is Clarence coming?

MRS. CHIRP—Of course. She couldn't very well leave him at home, could she? Now Junior, when Cousin Ella comes, I want you to walk in like a little man and shake hands and say, "How do you do, Cousin Ella."

JUNIOR—Will I have to be kissed?

MRS. CHIRP—Well, if she kisses you I want you to act nice about it——

MR. CHIRP—Who's going to talk to Clarence?

JUNIOR—I don't wanna be kissed!

MS. CHIRP—Well, I thought you could talk to him some and then Joe could help out——

JUNIOR—Mamma, why do I have to be kissed?

MRS. CHIRP—Well, simply because everybody does it. Watch out for that bowl of chrysanthemums——

MR. CHIRP—Well, I'm certainly glad Joe's coming.

MRS. CHIRP—That reminds me, John, whatever you do, I don't want you taking Joe down into the basement and giving him any of that hard cider. You know how mad Lutie got the last time——

BIG SISTER—I won't have to stay here after dinner, will I?

MRS. CHIRP—Of course. Why not? Your grandmother'll be here——

BIG SISTER—Well, all the kids are going over to Carolyn's.

MRS. CHIRP—Well, I dont see why you want to leave a nice home on Thanksgiving.—Junior! Where are you going?

JUNIOR—Billy's out there with his wagon.

MRS. CHIRP—Well, you stay right in this house then! You'll have all those Poppenheim children over here under root all day. It looks like a woman would have enough sense on a day like this——

MR. CHIRP—Where's Ella going to sit?

MRS. CHIRP—Well, as she hears best out of her right ear I thought I'd put her on your left side and then I'll put Joe down by me so he'll be as far away as possible if he should happen to—well, you know. Junior, where are you going?

JUNIOR—To the kitchen.

MRS. CHIRP—You stay out of the kitchen! Viola's grouchy enough as it is.

JUNIOR—I'm hungry.

MRS. CHIRP—Be still a minute and I'll get you an orange—No! No! Don't touch that fruit in the centerpiece!

BIG SISTER—Can't we have dinner a little early? The first show starts at 2:30——

MRS. CHIRP—You don't mean you're going off to a show and leave your grandmothers and your Cousin Ella and your Aunt Lutie and your Aunt Beulah—

BIG SISTER—Are we going to have to have Aunt Beulah, too?

MR. CHIRP—Where's Beulah going to sit?

MRS. CHIRP—Well, as she can hear best out of her left ear I thought I'd put her on your right——

MR. CHIRP—Say, do you mean I'm going to have to holler at both of 'em?

MRS. CHIRP—Well, I wanted to keep 'em as far away from Joe as possible.

MR. CHIRP—Why don't you put your mother on my right?

MRS. CHIRP — Then YOUR mother'd be mad. That's why I'm putting 'em both down the middle——

JUNIOR—Mamma, will they all kiss me?

MRS. CHIRP—I don't know. Anyway I hope you'll act like a little man. Oh yes, and John I wish you would remember not to mention drinking before Aunt Beulah—you know how she is . . . and whatever you do keep Clarence off of politics . . . and Joe away from the cider . . . and please don't say anything about Mabelle's divorce before Mother . . . and Junior, will you PLEASE get up off the floor and keep yourself clean at least until they get here . . . and Sister, I WISH you'd go upstair and take off some of that lipstick—you know what your Grandmother Chirp'll say . . . and please remember everybody not to take more than two of the icebox rolls—say, is that Ella and Clarence driving up now? . . . It is! Now Junior, remember what I told you!

New Ebony Blue To Bring Brunettes Into Their Own

BLONDES, who have long been the cynosure of all eyes, soon will be knocked out of the spotlight by brunettes. For, the new hair tone ebony blue (black) marks the crystalization of the dark hair trend, according to the prediction of Joseph Battel, president of the International Master Ladies' Hairdressers Association.

"For some time now the trend has been away from extreme blondes," announces Mr. Battell. "Gradually women in America have been recognizing the fact that many personalities are faded out with light hair, certainly the craze to be blonde at any cost is dying out. And rightly so, for dark hair gives importance and dignity to a woman, and is an accent to a personality, adding vitality and warmth."

As proof of his theory that black hair brings about a transition in personality, Mr. Battell pointed out Joan Bennett, who changed from a sweet child with blonde hair and a milky complexion to a more self-willed, resourceful woman

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Thursday, Nov. 24.

At one of brilliant receptions of the Capital's caviar season, a Colonel was complaining humorously that after 30 years of honorable service, including five front line campaigns in the World War, he was entitled to wear only one decoration.

* * * *

"Look at these young squirts!" he said, nodding at some lieutenants draped with gold braid and medals.

Mrs. Robbins . . . lavender

"At track meets, no doubt!" said a crusty general.

It's a pity that Secretary Wallace's two-price system wasn't given a tryout with Thanksgiving turkeys this year. If the holiday bird had been offered at 34c and 24c a pound, for example, it's a tolerably good bet that people in limousines would have exhausted the 24c birds before the underfed one-third could get to 'em with their wheelbarrows.

After the sunburn and tan of his vacations wears off, the White House pallor of President Roosevelt is quite noticeable, especially when you see him among his Cabinet and other aides who have time for golf these sunny, windy days. A man who loves the sun as much as Mr. Roosevelt ought to have a battery of sunlamps in his office and library.

PAJAMA PORTRAITS

ASS'T WARLORD.

By law, the complex problems of providing "pitchforks" with which a million American patriots would leap to the national defense in an emergency fall largely on the Assistant Secretary of War. Right now that means the broad, patient shoulders of Col. Louis Johnson, a native Virginian and lawyer, who handles these matters under Secretary Woodring.

In this role, he is a target for abuse from some who would like to edge into the national defense picture. As a former college boxer and wrestler and front-line captain whose 220 pounds are strategically distributed along 6 feet 2 of height, he is able to take it.

He is fond of reminding patriots that both England and Greece have much larger armies than ours, and that all our Army and Navy expense costs each American only $1 a month, even in a big year.

His manner is mild and temperate; he is hard to roil or stampede; he likes to quote the Bible: "A strong man well armed keepeth his palace in peace." Right now one of his pet projects is to equip each American infantryman with a light submachine gun that will squirt 25 times as much lead as the regulation rifle. And when he mentioned 9,280 planes the other day he gave the first clue to the American air fleet of the near future.

As a farm boy from the hinterland, I have been startled to encounter ladies here at evening parties with lavender hair . . . Out West hair is dark, light, medium, red or gray; but Mrs. Delano Robbins, who supervises interior decoration for our diplomats and consuls, introduced the exotic shade in the Capital, and several ladies have emulated her.

It isn't easy to keep your eyes off a lavender head of hair. (I don't know whether she uses lavender in the legations' color scheme.)

Perhaps the greatest stride democracy has made this hectic decade is the removal of the tall hedge which grew inside the tall iron-picket fence around the White House . . . Tourists used to crane their necks and climb on the stone base of the fence for a peek. The hedge surrounded the President's back yard with an aura of mystery. Now that it is gone, so is the mystery; without craning the tourist sees a pleasant rolling lawn, some handsome old trees and shrubs, a couple of knolls and a rather homelike tennis court.

NOTE TO AMBASSADOR SUVICH: If you see Mussolini when you go home you might tell him that Americans still think he is the most intelligent of the dictators, much too intelligent to import into Rome the dubious enlightenment of the savage chieftains beyond the Rhine.

CAPITAL CAVIAR: Maybe Tommy Corcoran's liaison with the White House could be sanctified by letting him move into Jimmy Roosevelt's office there semipermanently . . . 2 'Bandanna' Gangsters Seized Here

Miami Hunts Head Gang Chief Collegian Wed Week Ago 10 Crimes Admitted

A college graduate who robbed so his bride of a week would have luxuries was indicted as their leader last night by two youths arrested as members of the "blue bandanna gang" charged with robbing four stores of almost $500 in two nights.

The two youths held, 22 and 19, told police the name of their leader. He is being sought in Miami.

Police said last night the youths committed three holdups of liquor stores in 24 hours; that they held up seven business houses in two weeks. They also charged the youths with a long series of purse snatchings.

Getaway Car Seized

The young men were arrested by First Precinct Detectives William G. Shipman and J. E. Kane in a house in the 800 block East Capitol street.

During the time Shipman and Kane were arresting the pair, other detectives had a "plant" on the bandits' getaway car at Fifteenth and Douglas streets northeast. The car was abandoned when it stuck in soft mud.

The youths in custody told detectives their leader had left Washington shortly after the robbery of a store at North Capitol and Seaton streets Tuesday night. They indentified him as the armed robber, wearing the blue scarf, who robbed another place Tuesday and two the night before.

Wed in Maryland

He is only 21, a recent college graduate, who was married in Maryland last Thursday, they said.

Florida authorities have been notified that the youth is there and have been asked to arrest him.

Shipman said last night that the elder of the two suspects had admitted seven holdups, but that the other denied complicity in any of the crimes.

Chances Slim For More Relief Funds

Lewis Report Soon $900,000 Last Year Called Inadequate Hearings Next Month

By James D. Secrest,

Prospects for a supplemental District relief appropriation when Congress convenes are very slender, it was learned yesterday, as a report on the special investigation of unemployment in Washington was being prepared for submission to an advisory committee next week.

As the board of public welfare awaited the report before making any demands on the District Commissioners, an authoritative source disclosed that no additional funds will be recommended to the chairmen of the Senate and House subcommittees on District appropriations by the staff of investigators headed by Burdette G. Lewis.

Indications also are that no increase in the relief appropriation of $900,000, which welfare officials last year called wholly inadequate, will be recommended for the next fiscal year.

Surplus Now $139,000

One of these is that the District government's surplus for this year has dwindled to about $139,000. Last summer, when the 1939 tax act was being drafted, District officials made provision for a cushion of approximately $500,000 to take care of any supplemental relief appropriation that might be recommended as a result of the inquiry.

Another is the sharp reduction in the case relief load borne by the Public Assistance Division since last June. The October report disclosed that relief recipients had decreased by 36 per cent since June and by 44 per cent since January.

Welfare officials contend that this falling off was due largely to the limited appropriation and a consequent curtailment of the staff of case workers.

Public Welfare Director Elwood Street said last night that the Welfare Board will make no decision as to whether or not it will request a supplemental relief appropriation until after Lewis' report is made public.

Budget Hearings to Start

"Personally I feel that there is a great unmet need," he said.

The recommendations of Lewis may be supplemented by the views of the citizens' advisory committee headed by Ringgold Hart. This committee has indicated it will not make public either the Lewis report or its own recommendations until they are submitted to Congress.

As Chairman Collins of the House sub-committee on District appropriations plans to start executive hearings on the local budget early next month, the relief data may be bared before Congress actually convenes.

Lewis will be called before the sub-committee to explain and amplify his report.

Savage Case Storm Shakes Zoning Board

Neighbor Shouts He's Glad to Talk 4 Appeals Granted

The Board of Zoning Adjustment yesterday sat in on its stormiest session to date as arguments were presented to a petition of Mrs. Madeline M. Savage, wife of Sergt. W. J. Savage of the Eleventh Police Precinct, requesting a variance to construct a two-story rear addition to her home, 1402 Massachusetts avenue southeast.

Recently Police Court Judge Walter J. Casey placed a $25 fine for a violation of the building regulations and a similar fine for violation of the zoning regulations, after work had begun on the rear addition of the property. Judge Casey held the construction exceeded the permitted percentage of lot occupancy.

William B. Phalen, 116 Fourteenth street southeast, whose property adjoins the Savage dwelling, leaned over the crowded table and shaking his finger, shouted:

"When this case was up in Judge Casey's court I was not allowed to talk—thank God I can talk today."

Phalen told the board that the building contractor worked on the Armistice Day holiday and on Sunday to complete the job.

William H. McGrath, attorney for the contractor, took the office of the building inspector to task for "losing" a report which he said placed the responsibility for the work with that office.

At the same time, the Board of Zoning Adjustment announced decisions on previous cases. Four appeals heard last week were granted. These are:

Appeal of R. L. Elliott for permission to use alley lot in rear of 614 S street northwest, for the purpose of making or constructing automobile batteries.

Appeal of S. S. Snyder for variance to permit erection of a two-story addition to premises at 12 Fourth street southeast.

Appeal of Alley Dwelling Authority for permission to use alley lots in rear of 205 Third street southeast, for the storage and repair of oil burners.

The board denied appeal of Jacob Rosenbloom and Rachmiel Shoub for permission to establish a gasoline station at Second and Kennedy streets northwest (northeast corner). Three cases were deferred.

Besides the Savage case, the board heard testimony on four other cases. Decisions will be handed down next Wednesday.

Commission To Guide Work On Airport

To Draft Building Plans For CAA's Approval Safety Aides Named

A four-man commission yesterday was named by the Civil Aeronautics Authority to direct construction of the new $10,000,000 Gravelly Point Airport and to represent the Government departments engaged in the work.

At the same time the Air Safety Board, independent unit of the CAA, announced the appointment of officials in its organization.

The airport commission is composed of Col. F. C. Harrington, of the Army engineers, who will represent the Works Progress Administration; Col. R. S. Thomas, District Army Engineer; Fred E. Schneple or a representative named by Secretary of Interior Ickes to represent the Public Works Administration, and Col. Sumpter Smith, chairman of the Air Safety Board, representing the CAA.

Under the supervision of the commission final plans for the 730-acre terminal will be prepared for the approval of the CAA Airport Committee which is composed of Administrator Clinton M. Hester, Col. Smith, and Robert H. Hinckley, authority member.

The members of the staff of the Air Safety Board are W. S. McDuffee, of Fort Worth, Tex., airline executive and World War flier, who has been named executive officer; Louis R. Inwood, of Los Angeles, Calif., former Washington representative of many independent airline operators, assistant executive officer; and Darrell T. Lane, Salt Lake City, Utah, formerly attached to the Special Mexican Claims Commission, legal adviser.

The work of the board has been divided into three divisions each composed of two sections, it also was announced.

Robert D. Hoyt, former accident investigator for the Bureau of Air Commerce, has been named chief of the investigation section of the investigation division. Jesse W. Lankford, World War flier who was attached to the Bureau of Air Commerce for many years, has been appointed chief of the analysis section of the recommendations division, and the chief of its technical section will be Roland Rohlfs, of Buffalo, N. Y., former airline official.

Frank Miller, of Los Angeles, former associate editor of Western Flying magazine, has been named chief of the information and statistical section of the information and publication division. The liason section of the division will be headed by W. S. Stapler, of Macon, Ga.

Sprinkler System On Loose Brings Firemen on Run

Four engine companies, a rescue squad, two trucks and two chiefs charged with screaming sirens to Fourteenth steet and Constitution avenue last night. They found hundreds of curious onlookers but no fire.

After considerable probing about the Department of Commerce Building, the firemen discovered a sprinkler head had become detached from the automatic fire prevention system, setting off an alarm.

The engines, rescue squad, trucks and chiefs returned to their stations while newspapers and police headquarters assured alarmed Federal workers nothing had burned.

Christmas Seal Campaign Begins

Beginning today the District of Columbia Tuberculosis Association will place on sale 6,000,000 Christmas seals in sheets of 100 at $1 a sheet. The association hopes to raise, through the sale of these seals between now and Christmas, $60,000 to fight tuberculosis in the District.

Dr. Luther L. Reichelderfer, vice president of the association, said last night, "it is hoped our penny seals for use on Christmas mails will be more popular than ever this season so that our goal of $60,000 may be attained and the work may be financed for the coming year."

Watchman's Skull Broken in Mystery

He was taken to Georgetown Hospital, where physicians said he suffered a fractured skull and bruises around his left eye. Friends said Yarbaugh had lived in Washington for 25 years, but has no immediate relatives in the city. He lives at 1411 Foxhall road northwest.

5 Women, Boy Pre-Holiday Traffic Victims

2 Coeds Hurt in Crash Mother, Son Injured One Hit on Car Island

Five women and one child were injured in traffic accidents in and near the District yesterday, one woman by a hit-and-run driver whose automobile plowed along a street car loading platform at Eighteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Two University of Maryland coeds, on their way home to western Maryland for Thanksgiving were hurt when their automobile crashed into a tree and overturned on the Wheaton-Four Corners road.

Mother, Son Hurt

Mrs. Maria Laug, of 35 Dresden street, Kensington, Md., and her 2-year-old son, Owen, were injured when their automobile overturned in Rock Creek Park on Connecticut avenue a mile and a half north of Chevy Chase Lake.

Mrs. Roberta Watrous, 34, of 5031 Reno road northwest, was struck down on a loading platform at Eighteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest by an automobile bearing Virginia tags, which failed to stop. At Georgetown Hospital she was said to have suffered head lacerations.

The coeds injured were Margaret Wolfinger, 20, of Hagerstown, and Milbrey Downing, 20, of Williamsport. At the Washington Sanitarium, in Takoma Park, the Wolfinger girl was said to have suffered a fractured pelvis. Miss Downing escaped with slight cuts.

Mr. and Mrs. David Wolfinger, parents of the Wolfinger girl, and Donald F. Powers, of Hancock, driver of the car, were unhurt. They were returning from College Park, after picking the girls up at Margaret Brent dormitory.

Car Pins Child

Members of the Bethesda rescue squad freed the Owen child, whose right arm was pinned beneath the overturned car. At George Washington University Hospital, he and his mother were said to be suffering from cuts and bruises.

A two-car collision on the East-West highway at the entrance to the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School resulted in injuries to Mrs. W. E. Offutt, 51, 4550 Chesapeake street northwest. At Georgetown Hospital attendents said she sustained a dislocated hip.

Mrs. Offutt was a passenger in a car driven by James G. Conroy, 1301 Longfellow street northwest. Driver of the other car was Richard E. Bridgman, jr., 123 Glenbrook road, Bethesda.

Revocation Of Club Liquor License Upheld

An order revoking the liquor license of the Melody Club, No. 1 Thomas Circle, was sustained by the District Commissioners, it was made known yesterday.

The order was previously placed against the club by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, but was appealed for action by the Commissioners. Meeting Tuesday the Commissioners upheld the action of the ABC board.

It was held that whisky drinks had been sold after Saturday midnight, which is against the regulations. The charge placed the time of the illegal sale at 12:30, 12:45, 1:30, 1:55 and 2:40 a. m., Sunday, October 2.

Officials recalled it was at this same site that the wrath of the prohibition officers was incurred during the prohibition era, by the proprietors of a former night club. The officers padlocked the club for one year.

Four Star Club Host to D. C. Motor Group

A. A. A. Body Praised Has 2d Anniversary Banquet Precedes Dance

The Four Star Club of the District American Automobile Association last night was host for employes of the Washington Motor Club at a dance in the National Press Club.

Members of the Four Star Club, made up of leading salesmen in the District organization, heard national and local leaders of the A. A. A. praise the activities of the Washington unit at a banquet held before the dance. The party marked the second anniversary of the Four Star Club.

Russell E. Singer, general manager of the A. A. A., complimented the Washington office for its work in developing a safety program in cooperation with the District schools.

J. Webb Snively, manager of travel and service, declared the membership in the Washington Motor Club had grown to more than 27,000, only 2,000 less than the 1929 peak. He predicted membership next year would rise to 30,000 in Washington and nearby communities.

Other guests of honor who spoke at the banquet were Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the motor club; Richard M. Ham, director of safety; J. D. Hess, jr., director of membership and Charles M. Jenkins, night sales supervisor. Joseph F. Mudd, assistant sales manager, was toastmaster.

100 Prehistoric Fossils of Warm-Blooded Animals Found in Rockies by Dr. Gazin

Some 100 tooth and bone fragments from warm-blooded animals that roamed the Rocky Mountain States over 60,000,000 years ago have been added to the Smithsonian Institution's division of paleontology.

The important accessions, gathered last summer in Utah by Dr. C. Lewis Gazin, assistant curator of the division, may help scientists trace the prehistoric ancestors of the sheep, dog and other common animals of the present. Announcement of the finds was made yesterday.

Largest specimens are two fragments from the lower jaw of a mammal which, although no larger than an average-sized sheep, was probably one of the largest warm-blooded creatures of its day.

Structure of the teeth, which are fairly well preserved, indicate that the animal was a vegetarian, not a meat eater. It lived, as did all of the other animals whose remains were found by Dr. Gazin, in the Paleocene era.

That means between 60,000,000 and 80,000,000 years ago, or "shortly" after the giant reptiles became extinct.

The Puereo horizon is the name applied to the first part of the Paleocene and the Torrejon is the next oldest. Or so it was thought until C. W. Gilmore, curator of paleontology, went out to Utah in 1937 and discovered animal remains of the same vintage as those brought back by Dr. Gazin.

It seems now that the creatures whose teeth and bones were found by Mr. Gilmore and Dr. Gazin were ante-Puerco and pre-Torrejon, so the latter has given the name "Dragon horizon" to their subperiod in geological time.

During this interval there lived, according to the testimony of these newly discovered fossils, a flesh-eating beast about the size of a collie dog, at least one species of insectivore and a representative of the condylartha, believed to be a link between the hooved and clawed animals of today.

These early mamals, Dr. Gazin believes, were about as stupid as the dinosaurs which preceded them. Incidentally, the formation explored by Dr. Gazin lies atop Cretaceous rocks in which the bones of a great dinosaur were found last year.

Smithsonian Institution officials are so pleased with the character and quantity of specimens found to date that another expedition probably will be sent to central Utah next summer.

Pitt Gridmen Win Tuition Battle; Debts Canceled

18 WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 24, 1938 X*

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

One of the charms of Army vs. Navy is that it matters not what kind of football teams they present. Navy could put seven bus boys and four trombone players on the field and Army could send out eleven men from the stables and tickets to the contest would still be at a premium.

POVICH.

The Army-Navy game as a spectacle long ago began to overshadow the Army-Navy game as a football contest. To go to the game between the two service colleges simply has come to be the thing to do. It is a part of the social calendar, like New Year's Eve. The only reason there will not be 200,000 fans in the Philadelphia Municipal Stadium on Saturday is that 104,000 is the capacity of the place.

Down at Durham, N. C., on the same afternoon, there will be a game—Pitt vs. Duke—that promises to eclipse Army vs. Navy as a competitive contest from here to there, but that game will draw only 45,000. There is a suspicion that either Pitt or Duke could lick the combined forces of Army and Navy, but the show, not the football game, is the thing to catch the conscience of the paying public.

Big Grid Show

There isn't a football show to compare with Army vs. Navy. By the time the opening whistle blows the customers have already received their money's worth. By the time the regiments of Midshipmen and Cadets have wheeled on and off the gridiron, and the Army mule and Navy goat have kicked up their annual fuss, the afternoon has reached its high spot. The football game is, in a sense, an anti-climax.

It's an important anti-climax, though. For Navy it can mean a rousing finish to a season that has not been a happy one. In a victory over Army, the Middies would find balm for all their wounds. Similarly, for Army, a triumph over the Midshipmen would be sweet. Beaten only by Notre Dame and Columbia thus far this season, a triumphant Army team could set down the campaign as one of its best.

Time was when the Army-Navy game could not be anticipated as a thrilling football battle. The fear of defeat was so great that the team in possession of a lead instantly went on the defensive and it made for a bad game. But in recent years, the teams have shown a willingness to gamble, particularly with the forward pass.

Army Is Favorite

Army will take the field a 9 to 5 favorite, but those appear to be false odds, if for no other reason than that the Middies defeated in Columbia a team that previously licked Army. The best comparison of the two teams can probably be drawn from their battles with Notre Dame.

Navy was licked by Notre Dame, 15-0, and Army lost to the Irish, 19-6. By reason of having scored against Notre Dame, the West Pointers appear to have an edge on the Middies. But after its one scoring foray in the first quarter, Army was not close to another touchdown against the Irish. Navy, however, was inside Notre Dame's 20-yard line five times, and once reached the 4-yard line.

If there is one player who emerges as the outstanding performer on Saturday afternoon, that individual is more apt to be the Army's Woodrow Wilson than anybody else. He is the chief threat, with his passes and ball-carrying and any laxity on Navy's part where Wilson is concerned may be fatal to Navy's hopes.

Against Notre Dame, Army was simply worn down by the Irish reserves. Wholesale substitutions by Coach Elmer Layden figured largely in that defeat of Army. Against Navy on Saturday, the West Pointers will not have that factor to contend with. Navy, lacking potent reserves, particularly in the line, will substitute only sparingly.

Lots of Spirit

There is, of course, a possibility that both Army and Navy will play their best football game of the season on Saturday. While they like to win every game on the schedule, they always hold something back for the service clash. Saturday is the day when they will use all of their tricks. Plays they have never attempted before this season will be unveiled at Philadelphia.

One thing is certain. The two head coaches need not be concerned with putting the mental pressure on their athletes tor Saturday's ball game. They need not lie awake of nights to devise means of needling incentive into their lads.

Commands to "Beat Army" and "Beat Navy" have been dinned into their ears from the moment the season began. The two squads that take the field for the opening whistle will be at a mental pitch that professional football coaches would pay vast sums to bring about.

The game that, to 104,000 fans, represents a week-end lark, is a thing of fury down there in the stadium's animated centerpiece. On no other football field is the spirit of alma mater so alive.

The winner may not emerge as a great football team. It rarely does. But it will have won a great victory.

Navy Ready For Battle Saturday

Rank on Passes To Leave Today Team in Shape Hansen on Varsity

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Nov. 23.—The Mazdas burned brightly tonight, glaring balefully down on an ambitious and quietly confident Navy eleven as it romped through its final strenuous workout before Saturday's traditional game with Army at Philadelphia.

Head Coach Hank Hardwick, checking carefully on the smallest detail of his men's work, kept them on the field until 20 minutes before mess call, and then, thrusting his hands deeply into his jacket announced the Middies would be ready for their ancient foe.

"I can't call the turn," he said, "and I'm not predicting a Navy victory, but I do know we're ready for them and it's going to be one tough ball game. Army will know, at least, that it's had a workout, and if they win they deserve all the credit they will receive. We have no alibis. The boys are going in to win, and judging by their play against Columbia, and the enthusiasm and the work I've seen on the field this week, they have at least an even chance. And that's all we want—an even chance.

Counts on Passes

"I'm hoping for a dry field, because, as everyone knows, we're counting on our aerial game to score, and a wet field and ball will be a serious handicap. If the weather is right I think we'll show the Army a trick or two, and if it's bad we'll have to let the breaks decide."

Today's enthusiasm was of quiet, grim kind. The Middies had plenty of zipper in their work, getting down under punts as if it meant a "velvet" mark in an engineering exam, and almost pulling arms out of sockets to grab passes. Hardwick put them through the usual routine of working against Army plays in scrimmage, then a rehearsal of their own offensive formations.

Hansen on Varsity

On the first team Hardwick had Pete Powell and Lou Burke at ends; Al Bergner and Ken Hysong, tackles; Tom McGrath and Herman Spector, guards; Al Wallace, center; Lem Cooke, quarterback; Ed Gillette and "Swede" Hansen, halfbacks, and "Bullet" Wood, fullback. Hansen, a reserve who filled in at guard in the early stages of the campaign, played a major role in the Columbia victory, stopping Sid Luckman's passes in the waning minutes of play.

Powell, one of the best ends ever to sport the Blue and Gold, and Bernger, a brilliant defensive tackle, have been mentioned for All-America honors, and Navy supporters look to them for their best performances Saturday. Powell, together with Wallace, Spector, Hysong and Cooke, will end their Academy football careers against Army, all graduating next June.

The squad will receive a rousing send-off tomorrow afternoon when it falls in in front of Bancroft Hall for departure ceremonies before shoving off for Philadelphia. Everybody from Rear Admiral Wilson Brown to Powell, team captain, will address the midshipmen.

Wilson High Beaten By Randolph-Macon Academy Team, 7-0

Winning Touchdown Comes in Third Period Visitors Bank on Unsuccessful Pass Attack Blocking Is Saving Feature of Wilson's Play

Special Dispatch to The Post.

The winning touchdown came in the middle of the third period and resulted from a 40-yard forward pass, Kronfeld to Frene, which ended on the visitors' 12-yard line. Woodrow Wilson stopped the Yellow Jackets' first rush at this point but Gue, fullback, tore through the visitors' line for 7 yards on the next scrimmage and a reverse play, Beckett to Dees, completed the intervening distance to the goal stripe. Williams kicked to convert an extra point.

Woodrow Wilson completed a forward pass, Long to B. Miller, early in the first quarter, to the Yellow Jackets' 33-yard line but lost the ball on downs. Gue and Kronfeld made 9 yards when Beckett punted on the third down and the visitors returned the kick. The Yellow Jackets advanced the ball 27 yards for two first downs, aided by a 5-yard penalty, to the visitors' 30, where Beckett lost the ball on a fumble, the game having carried over into the second period. Woodrow Wilson now opened with a barrage of unsuccessful passes, and exchanges of punts continued to the end of the first half.

The visitors continued an unsuccessful passing attack, with Bond at the starting end, throughout the second half, both teams exchanging kicks after failing to make the required yardage, except for the Yellow Jackets' touchdown in the third and a first down on gains through the Woodrow Wilson line by Beckett and Gue. Play during the second half was largely in the visitors' territory and twice they were forced to kick from their 4-yard line. They completed a second pass for nine yards, Donaldson to Leaphart, in the final quarter, out of a total of 25 attempts. In the second period the referee allowed an uncompleted 30-yard pass by Woodrow Wilson because of Yellow Jackets' interference.

The teams were evenly matched and Woodrow Wilson gave some fine exhibitions of successful blocking. Each eleven was penalized 15 yards for unnecessary roughness and the visitors lost 15 additional yards for offside playing.

Coast Teams Fight Today For Bowl Bid

Leaders Face Test Cornell Is Favored Vols Risk Record Grid Predictions

By Bill Boni.

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Nov. 23.—The country's college football teams play a "split week" as their grand finale tomorrow and Saturday, with important games in every sector ringing down the curtain on general activity. Except for a few scattered festivities in every bowl but the soup bowl, the season will be over.

The West's Rose Bowl defender depends on the outcome of one of tomorrow's three "Turkey Day" headliners, bringing together Southern California and neighboring U. C. L. A. before 85,000 at Los Angeles. Southern California needs to win this to tie California for the Pacific Coast Conference title—and from then on the Rose Bowl nomination, to be made before the Trojans tackle Notre Dame the following Saturday, will rest in the hands of the selection committee.

Two other battles share the Thanksgiving Day spotlight: Unbeaten and untied Tennessee's meeting with Kentucky, a definite jinx to the Volunteers in the past, and Cornell's traditional scrap with Pennsylvania, in which the big Red is favored to take down Ivy League honors. A crowd of 70,000 will see that one, with 20,000 at Tennessee-Kentucky.

Saturday, when Army and Navy will draw their customary full house of 102,000 to Philadelphia's Municipal Stadium, smaller crowds will see games of greater importance to national ranking and bowl bids. Duke officials are counting on 50,000, a new high for Southern

The contract begins next year and runs through 1943. While no terms were announced, it is believed Crowley's salary will be about $15,000 annually, an increase of about $2,500 over his present salary.

Mike Eslin Beaten In Opening Night Of Golden Gloves

Northeast Youngster Steals the Show, However Attacks Referee and Judge After Fight Nice Looking Novice Group in First Bouts

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Mike (Kayo) Eslin, pride of Fifth and K streets northeast, stole the show last night as the sixth annual Golden Gloves boxing tournament opened at Turner's Arena, even though he dropped a close three-round decision.

Michael The Mauler swung on Referee Ray Bowen and aimed an enthusiastic, but errant, kick in the pants at Johnny Bowen, seconding the Mauler's conquerer, Eddie Stoneham. Michael also verbosely questioned the quality of the decisions handed down—and he had something there. But the verdict in his case was eminently fair and just.

Mike gave his all, as usual, but it wasn't enough—as usual. He walked into Stoneham's busy fists time and again, taking a couple of stiff biffs on the chin in a vain effort to get over his vaunted "knockout punch." Stoneham did catch a couple, but not enough to stint his enthusiasm for socking Michael, and evidently the judges were unaware of this.

Eslin made a grand entree, parading around the arena to the recorded strains of Notre Dame's marching song. He was gaily arrayed in a pink satin boudoir robe, with his name and address (promoters please copy) inscribed on the back. He went out—not exactly in a blare of glory, but still fighting, which is all you can ask of a young apprentice in the profession.

That brief episode highlighted an evening of plain and fancy swinging by what old hands call the most promising recruit of novices ever entered in the tournament. Three technical knockouts featured the fisticuffing, but to their credit it must be said the losers stayed the limit of their human endurance.

Bad Decisions

There were a couple of bad decisions—judging by the volume of boos emanating from the bleachers, and it was reported that some of the boys were figuring on taking out a little burglary insurance to protect their interests. The most questionable decisions were Mike O'Brien's victory over George Nissen, and Bob Hockenberry's victory over Emmett Evans.

Lowman Watts, representing the Colmar Manor American Legion, won a close decision from Chester James, sporting the colors of Police Boys Club, No. 5, in a rousing bout. The stronger of the two, Watts carried the fight to his opponent throughout, and succeeded in landing a number of damaging rights in the first and last rounds.

He had James groggy in both sessions, but the latter rallied strongly near the finish and almost succeeded in overtaking his adversary. James, using a left hand to good advantage, won the second round by a handsome margin, but evidently forgot this weapon in the last.

Nissen outpointed O'Brien by a comfortable margin on The Post's scoresheet, but a couple of wild and decidedly lucky swings evidently swayed the judges. Nissen was the better boxer and scored the most and the cleanest punches.

Ball Is Promising

The National Guard showed a promising lad in Elmer Ball, featherweight, who disposed of Fred McNeil, of Police Club No. 4. Ball never gave his opponent a chance to get set and punched from bell to bell.

Frank McCaleb, of the A. E. and W. Terminal, showed to advantage

Henry Armstrong Is 2-1 Favorite

New York, Nov. 23 (U.P.).—Advance sale for Friday night's Henry Armstrong-Ceferino Garcia welterweight title fight reached the $100,000 mark today, Promoter Mike Jacobs admitted.

He said this advance indicated an ultimate gate of about $130,000 and a crowd of more than 20,000.

While there are plenty of cheaper seats still available, the demand for good locations is so great that ticket speculators are asking $25 each for choice ringsides, priced originally at $16.50.

In the heavy betting, Champion Armstrong was quoted generally the 2-1 favorite today.

Kelly Wins Title

Belfast, Ireland, Nov. 23 (U.P.).—Spider Kelly, of Ireland, wrested the British Empire featherweight championship from Benny Caplan, of London, tonight, taking a 15-round decision.

Two Crucial Pro Games Today

Two crucial games are on the schedule today in the National Football League. At Brooklyn, the Dodgers meet the New York Giants in a battle that will have a bearing on Eastern Division honors, and at Detroit, the Lions encounter the Chicago Bears.

A Brooklyn team badly battered by the Bears last week, will be fighting today to retain a chance to tie for the Eastern Division title. The Detroit Lions, by winning over the Bears today and defeating the Cleveland Rams next week, can tie the Green Bay Packers for the Western Division honors.

University Backs Down In Fight

'In Fairness to Boys' Must Pay in 1939 Frosh Jubilant But Feud Lingers

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Nov. 23.—The University of Pittsburgh's faculty committee on athletics, meeting late today with more than a score of the school's freshmen football players, agreed to cancel their tuition charges this year but warned they would have to pay next year.

A spokesman explained the move was a "retreat on the part of the university in fairness to the boys," who had rebelled against being forced to pay $150 tuition.

"If you feel that you signed a note for your tuition without understanding the meaning and intent of the note, please let me know," said a statement by John Weber, secretary-business manager of the university. "If you feel that you did not understand, your tuition will be canceled for the present year. Next year you will be expected to pay as do other students."

The freshmen admitted they signed notes for $150 tuition for a semester, but contended they understood this was mere formality. Then, they charged, they were being "dunned" for the money.

Chancellor John G. Bowman brought the controversy squarely into the open yesterday when, in his annual address to the students, he pledged continuance of the Bowman "code" which placed athletics on a "strictly amateur basis" a year ago. He told "unofficial football managers" to keep out of the university's athletic affairs.

Alumni Back Players

This was only an hour after he had rejected a proposal by Pitt's Varsity Letter Club, comprising 900 former athletes, for an "impartial" investigation of athletic affairs, the club announced.

Then the alumni council, governing body of the General Alumni Association, announced it would appoint an "impartial" committee to investigate "the entire athletic problem, including the freshmen tuition case."

Finally the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, Bowman disclosed, sent a committee headed by President Frank L. Duggan to him Monday to urge that Pitt continue to have winning football teams "for the good of Pittsburgh."

To the freshmen players, Bowman said:

"The university never has and never will stoop to sharp practice. In the event there is a reasonable doubt, I will accept your word and play fair."

Advising the players not to do anything "these unofficial managers ask you to do," Bowman said that by playing fair he meant a settlement "satisfactory to both sides" would be made.

Bowman reiterated his admiration for Head Coach John Bain Sutherland and said "a report current" that he was indifferent to football and did not appreciate Sutherland was "deliberate misrepresentation."

Sign Three Papers

The chancellor said Pitt would continue to have a winning football team, but that he would not stand for outsiders meddling, and added:

"I believe we can have a good team on an honest and open basis."

In a later explanation, Dr. Bowman asserted that the 22 freshmen signed three papers. He said one of these was a statement affirming they had never played for pay, the second was the note for tuition and the third a statement pledging that in the event they were unable to pay the tuition during the school year they would work it out at the university next summer.

Pitt's varsity, beaten only by Carnegie Tech, leaves here tomorrow for its season finale next Saturday with Duke at Durham, N. C. The players include a number of those on the team that defeated the University of Washington, 20 to 0, in the Rose Bowl game of 1937.

Soon after that victory W. Don Harrison resigned as director of athletics. Campus reports were that he had refused Sutherland's request for "spending" money for the players in Pasadena, and that Sutherland had provided the money from his own funds.

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer

Last Laugh

New York, Nov. 23.—The other night two men climbed through the ropes of the ring in Madison Square Garden and stood with the white lights beating down on their bared bodies. The crowd of spectators peered up at them with eyes of respect and a voice came booming over the microphone introducing them as Fred Apostoli and Young Corbett 3d, concluding with the announcement that they were meeting for the middleweight championship of the world.

VIDMER.

The crowd leaned forward with lips parted and eager anticipation. There is something that comes just before two men meet for a world's championship unlike any other emotion in the sphere of sports. And hadn't the announcer said these two were going to fight for the middleweight championship of the world?

But there was one little fellow with a shock of light curly hair who didn't lean forward. Instead he leaned back, stretched his legs out before him and assumed an attitude of mingled scorn and skepticism.

"Championship of the world, my eye," he sneered, for he knew the champion of the world and the lad he knew wasn't in there to defend his title.

Which takes us back to another night in another pugilistic palace and another crowd standing and cheering a sudden sensation. And on that night, too, the little fellow with the curly blond hair sat and sneered.

Lost Opportunity

That was a couple of years ago and the sudden sensation was Harry Balsamo. They were calling him another Ketchell as he climbed steadily up the middleweight ladder, hand-over-hand on a series of knockout victories. They said he was destined to win the championship, possibly become one of the greatest middleweights in the history of the ring.

But the little fellow with the curly blond hair sat back in his seat at the Hippodrome as the chattering, praise-singing crowd passed out, and sneered. He sneered back at those who paused beside him to pass a chuckling jibe in his direction.

For the little fellow with the curly blond hair was Hymie Caplin, a fight manager by trade, the handler of several champions by chance. He had been the manager of Al Singer, Ben Jeby, Lou Salica and all had won titles in the ring. But they laughed at him that night because he had passed up a chance to manage another champion—or rather a prospective champion. Hymie had turned down the opportunity to buy Harry Balsamo's contract only a short time before, and now Harry was surely headed for the heights.

"I got a better middleweight than Balsamo," Hymie sneered back as the jeers were hurled in his direction. "I got a guy who will knock that bum dizzy. What do I want with a bum like Balsamo?"

False Front

This sounded like someone whistling past the graveyard. And those who listened went out chuckling at Hymie's words. He was just pretending that he didn't mind missing out on Balsamo when he could have had him for a bargain, they thought. He was trying to vindicate his judgment of fighting men. This time, of course, he had guessed wrong about a prospect, but he was keeping up a front.

And those who waited long enough to ask who Hymie's middleweight was, laughed all the louder when he answered:

"Solly Kreiger."

Solly Kreiger indeed. That was funny. Why Solly Kreiger was just a preliminary boy and Balsamo was rising rapidly toward the throne. But Hymie kept repeating his assertion that Kreiger was the prospective champion, not Balsamo.

It wasn't long before the fight mob was forced to admit that the little fellow with the curly blond hair was at least half right—Balsamo wasn't going to be a champion. His string of sensational knockouts came to an end before he reached the top. He started getting beaten, and after a few short months the spotlight swung away, leaving him in the shadows.

It swung toward other middleweights and finally settled on Freddy Steele, who was seated securely on the throne. There he remained until suddenly and unexpectedly he was beaten by a comparative unknown named Al Hostak.

But meanwhile Hymie Caplin's hopes still were carried by Solly Kreiger. He wasn't anything sensational. Not like Balsamo had been, but he lasted longer and steadily he came forward. He fought his way out of the preliminary class and into the main events, and he was selected as Hostak's first opponent in defense of the title he had won from Steele.

Probably Hostak thought he was meeting a man who wouldn't be too tough; someone against whom he could add to his reputation before coming East and displaying his new royal robes. But Hostak never wore those robes before an Eastern audience. For Solly Kreiger beat him in their battle, and by direct descent became the middleweight champion of the world.

So when they lifted Freddy Apostoli's hand in the center of Madison Square Garden the other night, and because he had knocked out the aged Italian known as Young Corbett 3d, proclaimed him "the winner and new middleweight champion," the little fellow with the blond curly hair stretched out his legs and yawned. He knew the champion personally. He had known him for several years. In fact he had known he would someday be the champion when everybody else laughed—and talked about some long-since-forgotten fighter named Balsamo.

Colonials Face Mountaineers; Terps Meet W. and L.

10,000 Fans To See G. W. Grid Finale

Homecoming Game Kick-Off at 2:15 Sampson to Start Tonkavitch at Full

By Jack Munhall.

George Washington this afternoon will end its first football season under the new simon-pure athletic regime, and its success depends greatly on the Colonials' performance against the Mountaineers from West Virginia, who'll be acomin' to Papa Griffith's ball yard about 2:15.

Before some 10,000 home-coming fans the Colonials will seek retribution for three defeats in their last four games by running the Mountaineers back into the hills. West Virginia, although beaten six times this season, is regarded as one of the toughest defensive teams in this area and an impressive scoring parade by the Colonials would, in a large measure, compensate for their offensive feebleness of late.

Since G. W. auspiciously launched its season with successive triumphs over Furman, Colorado, Butler and Davis and Elkins things have gone from bad to worse—from Mississippi and Clemson to Bucknell. Against the Rebels, the Colonials played well for a half, but then collapsed and suffered a 25-to-0 trimming.

Touchdown Hungry

In the wake of this, their first defeat of the year, the Colonials grew dizzy watching Clemson's fleet backs circle their ends for four touchdowns and a 27-0 victory, and after defeating Kansas, dropped to a new low by failing to register a single first down against Bucknell last week.

Hence it is a touchdown famished band of Colonials who anticipate a Turkey-Day feast at the expense of West Virginia's long, lean Mountaineers.

And Coach Bill Reinhart has taken great caution that the Colonials will not starve for points. Disgusted with their inept showing against the Bisons, he has drilled them hard all week and in a final effort to instill a punch in the attack he promoted John Tonkavitch to regular fullback.

Tonkavitch, a sophomore, built along the general lines of a fireplug, will be one of two newcomers to the G. W. line-up. Wilbur Saeger, 220-pound junior tackle, won himself a starting role with a fine defensive game against Bucknell.

Sampson Starts

Reinhart, satisfied that Vic Samoson is still his best scoring threat, will start the fleet little senior at left halfback, where for three years he has won recognition as one of the East's better broken-field runners. With Sampson and Tonkavitch in the regular backfield will be Frank Merka at quarterback, and Murphy Booth at right half.

Bill Richardson, Sampson's understudy who was not used at all in the Bucknell game, is expected to see action whenever the Colonials are in a favorable position for a passing attack.

West Virginia, a keen disappointment to followers who had predicted the best team in the school's history, has defeated only Youngstown, Creighton and West Virginia Wesleyan, while losing to Michigan State, Western Reserve, Manhattan and Georgetown. It played a 6-6 tie with Washington and Lee.

But while the Mountaineers haven't been able to muster much of an offense neither have their opponents been able to make much headway against their rugged line, as the Georgetown game attests. The Hoyas were stumped for more than three quarters before, aided by a break and a long forward pass, they managed to push over a touchdown. Soon after Georgetown scored again on an intercepted pass, but that score would not have been made had not the Mountaineers gambled in an effort to tie the count.

Seven Colonials will play their last college game today. In this group are Sampson, Merka, Bob Faris, John Rebholz, Guy Renzaglia, Hal Schiering and Izzy Weinberg. All but Faris and Schiering are regulars.

Ace Terp Passer, Crack G. W. Kicker End Careers Today

Maryland Will Start Four Seniors

Line-up Is Revised Terps Are Confident Jim Meade Is Out Kick-Off at 2:30

Keyed to the same high pitch which enabled it to offer surprising resistance to a superior Georgetown team, Maryland University football squad today is confident of a victory over Washington and Lee in its season's finale at Baltimore Stadium. The kickoff is scheduled for 2:30 o'clock.

In order to allow four seniors to start the game for Maryland, Coach Frank Dobson will revise his lineup and send to the bench among others, Joe Murphy, fleet little sophomore halfback, whose brilliant running was a feature of the Georgetown game.

Murphy will be replaced by Rip Hewitt. Nick Budkoff, the team's No. 1 end, until forced to the sidelines with injuries, will start at leftend in place of Leo Mueller and Jim Forrester, reserve center, will supplant Bob Smith. Charlie Weidinger, fourth senior, will be at his customary quarterback position.

Jim Meade is Out

The only Maryland senior who will not see action is Jim Meade, its all-Southern halfback who has been out since the early weeks of the season with a broken ankle.

Maryland comes up to the game with only one day of practice since last Saturday when it held heavily-favored Georgetown to a 14-7 score. With most of the Terps fatigued by 60-minute performances against the Hoyas, Coach Dobson allowed them to rest until yesterday when a light signal drill and a plan of defense for General plays occupied the squad for about an hour.

Washington and Lee has enjoyed only a fair season to date, its best accomplishment being a 6-6 tie with West Virginia, but the Generals will rule a slight choice over the Terps who have won just one game in eight starts.

Despite the fact Washington and Lee has been billed as a sophomore squad, nine seniors will be playing their last collegiate games today. They are Bill Brown, Joe Oschie, Ray Craft, Don Dunlap, a Washington boy who attended Central High School, Charlie Lykes, Binie Harper, Dorsey Williams, Roy Hogan and Shack Parrish.

THANKSGIVING DAY

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA-U. C. L. A.—(85,000)—Both should be well primed and there's little to choose on comparative scores. But the choice is Southern Cal, beaten only by Alabama in its first game and Washington in its last, and shooting for that Rose Bowl bid.

TENNESSEE-KENTUCKY — (20,000)—The strongest hoodoo in the world can't erase those six straight Kentucky defeats since its two "breather victories." Tennessee.

PENNSYLVANIA-CORNELL— (70,000)—Against a Penn team that got away to a nice start, but bogged down badly several times, the choice must be Cornell.

ALABAMA-VANDERBILT — (25,000) — Alabama, on slightly superior punch.

TEXAS-TEXAS A. AND M.—(40,000)—A nice spot for the Longhorns' Dana Bible to spring some upset fireworks, but A. and M. gets the nod.

MANHATTAN-VILLANOVA — (20,000)—The Wildcats, who began a 19-game undefeated streak against Manhattan in 1936, should run it to 20.

BROWN-COLUMBIA — (25,000) — Sid Luckman, broken nose and all, plays his last game for the Lions. Columbia in a close one.

NEBRASKA-KANSAS STATE (26,000—Nebraska to finish a sorry season with a victory over unpredictable State.

ELSEWHERE—Christman and Missouri to top Kansas. Western Reserve to finish unbeaten and untied against Case, North Carolina over Virginia, Arkansas over Tulsa, Clemson, beaten only by Tennessee, over Furman; V. M. I. over Virginia Tech. George Washington by a shade over West Virginia, Niagara over Duquesne, W. and L. over Maryland, Colorado over Denver, Wake Forest over Davidson, Miami over Bucknell, Richmond over W. and M.

SATURDAY.

DUKE - PITTSBURGH—(50,000)—Duke undoubtedly has been building up to this all season. But the Blue Devils haven't faced anything like those ten Pitt seniors and one junior, Pitt.

SOUTHERN METHODIST - TEXAS CHRISTIAN—(23,000)—S. M. U. hasn't been beaten since its shellacking by Pitt, but then, T. C. U. hasn't been beaten at all and, on the word of Coach Dutch Meyer, hasn't even had to open up. Texas Christian.

ARMY-NAVY — (102,000) — On the strength of its line's fine showing against Princeton, and a headier attack led by "Huey" Long and Woodrow Wilson, Army.

OKLAHOMA A. AND M.-OKLAHOMA—(11,000)—Oklahoma.

TEXAS TECH-MARQUETTE—(10,000)—Tech to remain unbeaten and untied.

STANFORD-DARTMOUTH — (25,000)—Either way it will be Lo, the poor Indian—New Hampshire or Palo Alto variety. Because Dartmouth had expected to beat Cornell, and this will be an anticlimax. Stanford.

BOSTON COLLEGE - HOLY CROSS — (40,000)—Holy Cross, probably underrated more than any team in the country, to win what is always a bruise.

TULANE - LOUISIANA STATE—(42,000) Tulane.

ELSEWHERE—Fordham over N. Y. U., Georgia Tech over Georgia, Washington over Washington State, Oregon State over Oregon, Rice over Baylor, South Carolina over Catholic U., Mississippi (and Parker Hall) over Mississippi State, Utah over Idaho, Auburn over Florida.

Redskin Reserves May Start Against Pirates Here Sunday

Play in Richmond 'Sold' Coach on Them Shock Troops Add New Spirit Ray Flaherty Will Scout Giants in New York

Pleased with the fire and spirit of his reserves in last week's exhibition game at Richmond, Flaherty declared he was of a mind to give them a starting chance against the Pirates.

"Tillie Manton, Ernie Pinckert, Frank Filchock and George Karamatic showed more fire at Richmond than any backfield unit I've had all season," said Flaherty. "I'm willing to let them open Sunday's game for us.

"They had so much dash and pep that it was contagious and my regular backs caught the spirit when I sent them into the game. Maybe that's the answer to some of the Redskins' troubles this season."

If Flaherty does, indeed, start his shock troops, it will be the first time this season that Bill Hartman has not been in the Redskins' starting line-up. It has been the practice of the Redskins' coach to withhold Sammy Baugh from the opening line-up, but Hartman has not missed the starting whistle.

Following a morning workout at Griffith Stadium today, Flaherty will betake himself to New York by airplane to scout the Giants in their game with the Brooklyn Dodgers this afternoon. The Redskins' game with the Giants on December 4 at the Polo Grounds looms as the decisive battle of the Eastern division.

"But we aren't underestimating the Pirates," said Flaherty. "Winning this game Sunday is our chief concern. I know we'll be the favorites, but any team that has Whizzer White in its backfield is dangerous. I'll be satisfied to win that one by any kind of a score."

Howard's Bisons, Lincoln's Lions Will Clash Today

Bisons of Howard University will clash this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at Howard Stadium here with their ancient rivals, the Lincoln University Lions, of Oxford, Pa., the occasion being the thirty-fifth revival of grid contests between the outstanding colored institutions since 1895.

The Lions, under the direction of Coach Manuel Rivero, will be slightly favored to win, if the record of the teams is a criterion on which judgment of the merits of the teams might be based. But the Oxfordians have not done so well since Morgan stopped them, 20 to 0, a fortnight ago, while the Bisons have demonstrated progress as the season advanced.

The game promises to be hard-fought, its results dependent on the breaks as the action progresses. In the last three games the Bisons have exemplified much of the old-time Howard spirit which gave them the championship over a period of years. A crowd of 10,000 is expected.

Joe Savoldi Tops Mat Program With Golden Terror

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Ma Terror's boy, Golden, a 300-pound tyke who started early in life to annoy neighbors and torment children, drags his camouflaged bulk into Turner's Arena tonight to help Joe Savoldi manufacture what the promoter is pleased to call his "star bout" of the program. It should be a sizzling platter of action set before the fans, for the featured artists are supported by a colorful lot of ward-heelers in 30-minute assignments.

The Golden Terror embarked on his career of being obnoxious at a tender age, starting at the bottom by grabbing lollypops from babies and gradually working up to spreading tacks and broken glass in the street. He was one of those ungovernable kids who tie tin cans to dogs' tails, put thumbtacks on chairs, ring doorbells and throw stones at windows. He never got caught, and these nasty traits evidently clung to him through adolescence and into manhood.

Has Won Thrice

Thus, we find our boy Golden a villainous gent employed at the honest trade of wrestling—and doing well for himself. In Washington, for example, he has won three consecutive bouts in the ring, and a half-dozen impromptu brawls en route to and from the mat. His stuff isn't exactly cricket in all its phases, and while the fans are clamoring for somebody to kick the sawdust out of him the Terror has been getting away with the rough stuff.

Savoldi looks like the boy to stop the Terror and unmask him, for Joe is a rough hombre himself and loves to quarrel. The former Notre Dame fullback dropped a much disputed decision to Bronko Nagurski here two weeks ago, and in so doing served notice that he still is one of the game's toughest and most capable grapplers.

Dean on Program

The supporting card embraces a couple of matches that would ordinarily top any but a Thanksgiving night show, one with "Man Mountain" Dean pitted against Hank Methany. The other is in the female gender with Mae Meyer, of Minnesota, meeting Dolly Dalton, the Gawgia gal.

Fresh in from Hollywood where he was Clark Gable's only rival, Man Mountain is in the East strictly on business. As he so eloquently put it, "I ain't riskin' my movie stature for this game unless I get some good shots. I wanta meet the best—and get paid for it, or I'm gonna take me back to Hollywood for more movies. At least you can't get no cauliflower ear standing in front of a camera."

Jules Strongbow, who refereed the Terror's match with Frank Brown two weeks ago and was forced to get a little violent with him after it was over, meets Chief Chewaki in a 30-minute stand; and another half-hour engagement finds the aforementioned Brown working against Pete Peterson, a newcomer to the Arena.

Skate Rink Opening Is Big Success

2,200 on Ice Rink Is Jammed Gross Is $4,000 First Time Here

By Jack Munhall.

Ice skating came to Washington yesterday and if you doubt the immediate and tremendous response it struck among the natives, you should have been at the Chevy Chase Ice Palace for its opening.

From late afternoon when the District's first indoor rink, a 75 by 180 affair, was officially christened by 500 guests, including many socialites, until closing time last night more than 2,200 persons paid in excess of $4,000 for the sport so long denied them.

Flashing their shining blades to the swaying rhythm of waltz time flung out over the public address system these enthusiasts of the skim and glide sport jammed the rink to capacity and, at 10 o'clock in the evening, Norfield Kass, the owner, had quite a problem on his hands.

"My gosh," he exclaimed, "what am I going to do? I can't let any more on the rink and I can't turn 'em away."

"Look at 'em!" he cried, pointing to the crowd milling around an attendant at the top of the winding stairs that connect the rink with the bowling alleys beneath. "We can't sell tickets fast enough and the more people we let on the floor, the more squawks we get from those trying to skate."

But for all his excitement, Mr. Kass could scarcely restrain his joy at the success of his venture. Rubbing his hands briskly, he looked at the carefree throng.

Around and around the rectangular rink, guided by blue-uniformed attendants who kept them going the right way, swept the skaters, some in time with the music, others not.

But all were having a good time. There was a mother with her son hanging on one arm, a daughter on the other, moving along with short, awkward strides, the children sometimes stumbling ahead, then flying at arm's length in her wake.

There were beginners, too. You could tell them as they hesitantly put down one foot then the other, keeping their eyes on the ground like a schoolboy dancing his first dance. And there was an unusual number of experts, also, considering the lack of facilities here for the sport.

But few matched the performance given in the afternoon by Dorothy Snell, 16-year-old Montgomery-Blair student, who gave an exhibition of figure skating before the preview audience. Others who cut a fancy appearance at the afternoon opening were James Clement Dunn, of the State Department, and chairman of the newly formed ice club, and Mrs. James; Mrs. Donald Hiss, secretary of the club and her husband, the assistant solicitor of the Labor Department; John Borton, treasurer, and Mrs. Borton, and most of the organizers of the club.

The Ice Palace will be open every morning except Sunday, from 10 a. m. to 12:30 p. m.; in the afternoon, except Wednesdays, from 2:30 until 5, and at night from 8:30 until 11.

The Ice Palace is temporarily without a professional, but the management is negotiating for the services of a former internationally known figure skater, Norval Baptie, who now is with the Trocadero in Hollywood.

Red Wing Goalie Quits Hockey Game

Detroit, Nov. 23 (AP).—Refusing to play minor league hockey, Normie Smith, goalie of the Detroit Red Wings when they won two Stanley Cups, announced his retirement from the game today.

Before revealing his withdrawal from the sport Smith ignored the ultimatum of Manager Jack Adams, of the Detroit Club, that he report to the Pittsburgh Hornets of the International-American League in time for a game Thanksgiving night.

Congressional Club Boasts Major Share Of Golf Honors in District Competition

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Wiffy Cox, Helen Dettweiler and several amateurs, topped by Claude Rippy, garnered a major share of the links honors for Congressional Country Club for the second consecutive year, with Manor next in line.

Cox's tournament honor roll at Congressional shows an impressive list of champions, medalists and finalists, including the prize that clinched top honors, the Maryland State Golf Association team championship.

The River Road mentor came through with the District Open, a repeat triumph, and paced the P. G. A. qualifiers over the Five Farms course.

Helen Dettweiler's victories in the Maryland State Amateur, finalist performances in the Middle Atlantic and District and medal triumph in all three events, two with course records, boosted the club's record. Miss Dettweiler also was the Keeler Miller Memorial winner, and gross prize winner in a majority of local affairs. The club also boasts Mrs. Myron Davy, National Women's qualifier and Mrs. Arnold McNitt, Washington Post and Times cup champion.

Rippy's Chevy Chase Invitation victory heads the men's amateur list that includes medal performances in the District Amateur and Rolling Road Invitation by Billy Dettweiler and Earl McAleer, respectively, District amateur finalist, Frank Goodwin, and five berths on the Washington All-Star Simon-pure team. Cox was a member of the D. C. pro team, and Mrs. Fray, Miss Dettweiler and Mrs. Dowdall were members of the intercity women's squad.

However, Congressional's 38 record is not as outstanding as last year when Cox and Miss Dettweiler were equally as impressive, and Billy Shea won the District and Middle Atlantic championships.

Marion Brown's District and Middle Atlantic triumphs earn Manor Club consideration, while the Norbeck outfit also produced District Junior Champion Dick Meyer and the top-ranking amateur of the Capital, Bobby Brownell, who gained Nation-wide prominence in the National Amateur and was a standout locally for his Middle-Atlantic Amateur and Junior accomplishments, and National Amateur qualifying in addition to other feats.

Honors also go to Indian Spring, Kenwood, Beaver Dam, Columbia,

On Fishing

The winter "hot stove fishing league" is about to get under way; a little early without a doubt, because there is still a lot of good fishing to be had before it is time to lay aside the rod and tackle, but nevertheless time to get going if we expect to finish up before trout season opens on April 1.

ACKERMAN.

The early trout fishing brings to the fore a question that is asked many, many times, particularly when a late spring makes the fish chary of taking wet flies, and the best of us resort to the lowly worm in the hope of enticing a strike. And for the up-river perch before the sport stores have a stock of the Georgia red worms . . . where worms can be had without the back-breaking job of digging them . . . how can they be kept alive?

The answer to the second part is also the best we can give for the first part, if digging up half the garden for a dozen or two is out of the question, and that is . . . raise them, under suitable conditions.

Far simpler than it sounds, for all that is needed is a box or tub set in a moist corner of the yard, and filled with a clay loam mixed with one-fourth rotted leaves or straw. The only important precaution is to be sure it contains no sand . . . test by rubbing it between the fingers.

If the bed is started now, there will be an abundance of wrigglers for opening day, if you obtain the highly prized English or red worm, which reaches maturity in six months, but is large enough for use in from three to four. Most any sport store will tell you where they may be had, or will get them for you.

We have heard of practically everything being used as food, even to coffee grounds, but commercial growers use the cheapest vegetable shortening mixed with meal, and feed it about every two weeks. Only as much as the worms will take in four or five days, placed under a mulch of straw, which should be used in this climate to prevent freezing, and thawing.

Common or angle worms can be used, but as long as they are to be raised, why not do it right. These English worms are very reasonable, reproduce throughout the year, and will thrive under a wider variety of climate. They are far tougher, will live longer on a hook, and seem to have a greater attraction for fish.

The worm is the most attractive bait right after a heavy rain, for it is then the fish are feeding on them as they are washed from the banks. But it is only one of many foods for the denizen of the stream, found under the water, on the water and over the surface. To name a few . . . the caddis fly in the adult stage, which in the worm or underwater stage gives us the cinnamon sedge, the silver sedge and the grannom. The adult alder fly, the Mayfly, the stone fly, and the fish fly and their nymph stages, as well as the midge and the crane flies with a larval and pupal stage.

Grasshoppers, locusts, field mice, crayfish, and a dozen or more grubs and insects that are eagerly accepted in their proper season. It takes an observant angler to know, and find them, and it is probably because of this that a good stream fisherman may also be classed as a naturalist of sorts.

Due to the fact that continued intensive fishing has cleaned stream banks of food, as well as the waters of trout and bass, possibly the best plan is to get artificial bugs and lures that closely resemble the living prototype, and at the same time join the ranks of those who think the only sporting way to take any fresh water fish is with artificial lures.

Later on, if there is an opportunity, we will delve more thoroughly into the various forms and life cycles of the insects that are the main food of trout until their third year, as well as the various minnows that are a large part of the food of black bass, and the larger trout.

In salt water, every living thing, from the minute forms not apparent to the human eye up to the greatest of the game fishes, is food for some other marine inhabitant, the only requirement being the strength and ability of one to take the other.

Here, too, are worms of many kinds and sizes, but as anglers we are interested mainly in the so-called blood worm, not only because it is easily obtainable at all sport stores throughout the summer season, but for its eager acceptance by many fish. It ranks third in most of Chesapeake Bay country, as bait. Blue crabs and shrimp take precedence, even on the Maryland and Virginia beaches, where clams, squid and cut baits also are usually found better for bottom fishing, and artificial lures best for top-striking fish.

Charles F. Beaten Out Half Length

Accidental Shows Grey Nurse Fails $58.10 Shot Wins Races Run in Rain

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., Nov. 23.—Maryland-bred 2-year-olds occupied the top spot on an ordinary midweek program conducted through a mist here today and chief honors went to R. H. Heigh's Zenana, a sprightly daughter of Theatrical. With Apprentice Warren Yarberry doing the booting, Zenana drove to a half-length decision over Charles F., with H. M. Simpson's Accidental third.

Zenana produced a $9.60 payoff, with her closest rivals a pair of long-shots, Grey Nurse, at slightly better than even money, was the favorite of the crowd of 7,000, and she finished fourth. The winner was clocked in 1:15 over a dull track.

Grey Nurse hopped out of the gates as if she were going to make it a runaway. However, Accidental, an 80-1 shot, dogged her every step and forced her to use up her energy. Zenana, never far back, answered Yarberry's drive in the stretch to go to the front and then staved off Charles F., which had come from far back. Accidental, to the surprise of her backers, stuck to her guns long enough to force Grey Nurse out of the pay.

Bosonia, carrying 100 pounds, finally emerged from the maiden ranks in the first race. With Apprentice Danny West in the saddle the Bostonian filly took command soon after the break and was never seriously threatened although she was put to a drive in the closing stages. Big Bud was second and Turkish Brand was third in the field of a dozen non-winners. The winner, owned by C. K. Finch, paid a $6.20 mutuel.

Apprentice West rode his second straight winner in the second race, bringing Brilliant Rose, a field horse, to the wire with a bold closing rush to take the decision by a neck from Rosarian. The latter had the lead inside the sixteenth pole but Jockey DeCamillis appeared to have been caught napping and was unprepared for Brilliant Rose's bid. Pirate Lass, the pacemaker most of the way, was third. The winner paid $58.10.

There was a long delay before the third race was made official. Merry Gesture won but swerved in front of Robespierre, the second horse, at the sixteenth pole, forcing Jockey DeCamillis to take up. DeCamillis lodged a claim of foul against the winner but after much deliberation the stewards allowed the numbers to stand. Merry Gesture, racing for J. J. Watts, paid $14.70.

Postage Due, odds-on favorite in the fourth race, finished third in a field of ten. Victory went to Zostera, racing in the colors of Mrs. C. W. Williams, with Ocean Roll, owned by John A. Manfuso, second. Zostera paid a $23.60 mutuel.

Charlotte Hall Wins Finale

Charlotte Hall, Md., Nov. 23.—Charlotte Hall Military Academy closed its football season with a 7-to-0 victory over Woodward Prep on a very muddy field here this afternoon.

After recovering a blocked punt on the 10-yard line early in the first quarter, the Cadets rushed the ball over for a touchdown on the first play. Dent carrying the ball, crossed the goal line standing up. Crueger added the extra point on a drive through center. Charlotte Hall made only one other sustained drive but was held for downs on the Woodward 1-yard line. A Woodward uprising late in the final period terminated with the end of the game.

Cadet A. N. Berman, of Baltimore, Md., was elected captain of the 1938 Cadet football team at a special meeting of the entire squad held in the clubroom just before the game this afternoon.

Dear Al: Stay away, rain. It looks like a good show, and we certainly can go for that turkey later on. For the boys at the Corner Store, Lexington, Va., yes, Accolade, Master Lad and Mucho Gusto raced at Charles Town at one time or anotner. Steeplechase Jockey E. Ferry is taking five horses to Charles Town for Mrs. E. C. Bostwick, A. C. Bostwick and G. H. Bostwick. J. B. Bond claimed Last Chance out of Tuesday's seventh race. It was the fifth claim of the meeting, with $13,200 figuring in the transfers. Ronnie Nash may ride Clodion in today's stake. G. A. Cook, of Washington, has purchased Counora from J. V. Stewart at private terms. I'm told that a certain trainer and owner ribbed another horseman into claiming a plater the other day. After telling him that there were several claims in for the horse already, the "ribber" went to the claiming box and dropped in a blank which was not filled out. The other horseman, seeing this, then filled out a blank and slipped it into the box. After the race, he found that his was the only claim. The long delay in getting the "official" on yesterday's third race was partially due to the fact that it takes the stewards several minutes to get down from their perch on the roof. I agree with all Beninigites who believe Honey Cloud defeated Conquer last Saturday. It looks as if the judges just muffed the picture. BILL.

First race—Headin' Home is a sound $2,500 plater when in form and recent races indicate that he is ready for his best. Dropping down and nicely placed. Black Arrow has been outclassed running in better company but may do well at this level. Gurkha will go well if the track is fast.

Second race—Godspeed was second in New England mud in August with fair platers. Has a good chance at a price if fit. Vestale ran an even race in slightly better company last week and may be the one to beat. Free Hide has shown flashes of form and may do something with Ronnie Nash up.

Third race—Oreades has given a fair account of himself with better grade platers and is dropping down into a good spot here. Should like track and distance. Burner won his last at this distance at Laurel, but is moving up, and may be the one to beat. Billabong beat a mediocre field here the other day. Should show.

Fourth race—Key Man was a beaten favorite in a similar field last week and deserves plenty of consideration. Should win on best effort. Sir Mowlee has shown a decided preference for this oval, is not outclassed and has good chance. Foxshade is in form and will go well.

Fifth race—Busy K. gets the call in the big race with the prospect of a muddy strip. He was third to War Admiral in New England and will move way up in off going. Conquer raced Honey Cloud to a dead heat last outing and should be close at the wire. Mr. Canron is at his best and will be dangerous.

Sixth race—Palan was slow to find his stride last out, but goes a longer route today and should get up to whip this cheap field. Mad Frump will go well in mud, is a recent winner, and deserves consideration. Playmore is not outmatched and has been racing well.

Seventh race—Monument stands out as the class over these cheap ones. He turned in a good effort in better company recently and should have little trouble winning this. Seventh Inning looms as the chief contention after his third to Uvalde. Offender is in form and can make plenty of trouble.

Best bet—Palan.

Cavaliers Underdogs In Finale

Meet North Carolina 15,000 May Attend Murray Confident But So Is Wolf

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 23. — North Carolina's Tarheels, favored to win their sixth consecutive victory over the University of Virginia, will meet the Cavaliers here tomorrow for the forty-third time in the renewal of the South's oldest continuous football rivalry.

Virginia athletic officials estimated that a clear Thanksgiving Day would bring out a crowd of 15,000, a record breaker for the 22,000-capacity Scott Stadium.

Coach Frank Murray but his Cavalier squad through a final rehearsal of battle plans this afternoon and indications were that he would delve deep into the bag of tricks, which gave his Marquette teams national prominence, when he sends the best Virginia team since 1932 onto the field tomorrow.

Backfield is Better

Carolina's backfield power is rated superior to that of the Cavaliers with the first wave of high mobile Tarheel backs scheduled to include the "Three Georges," Watson, Stirnweiss, Radman and Jack Kraynick. Both teams boast strong lines, but the Tarheels have more capable reserve forwards. Virginia's most potent weapons this season have been passes and the running of Jim Gillette; its weakest pass defense.

Virginia, a former member of the Southern Conference, has whipped four loop members—William and Mary, Maryland, Washington and Lee and Virginia Tech, and tied V. M. I., a record which would give the locals second place in the circuit standings to Duke.

Probable lineups:

V. M. I. Favored Over V. P. I. Today

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., Nov. 23.—Strictly in the upset, anything-can-happen tradition of the Thanksgiving Day football series between V. M. I. and V. P. I., even the weather turned uncertain tonight as the vanguard of a crowd that may reach 20,000 poured into Roanoke for Virginia's military school classic.

V. M. I. will take the field at the 2:15 kickoff with the 1938 records definitely in the Keydets' favor. The question with Tech is whether the Gobblers can reach the emotional heights of former years and repeat upsets that have barred V. M. I. from victory since 1929.

The Lexington Keydets have driven through a formidable ten-game schedule so far with a commendable record of six won, one lost, and three tied, and in the campaigning have scored 157 points to the opposition's 34.

Probable starting lineups:

V. P. I.	Position.	V. M. I.
Pierce	L.E.	Brittingham
Pitts	L.T.	Walker
Worthington	L.G.	Gray
Wood	Center	Irby
Devlin	R.G.	Echols

Dissemination Of Racing News Is Held Lawful

St. Louis, Nov. 23 (AP).—The attorney-general's office and the Federal Communications Commission have held there is no Federal statute to prevent the dissemination of race horse information, United States District Attorney Harry C. Blanton announced today.

A Federal court grand jury had suggested to Blanton that distribution of such news to bookmakers by telephone and telegraph was unlawful under the Federal communications act. Blanton referred the suggestion to Washington.

The jury pointed out a section of the act provided that practices in connection with communications services must be just and reasonable to be lawful. The jury contended the practice of supplying racing information was unjust and, therefore, could be considered unlawful under the act.

Opinions from the attorney-general's office and the communications commission held the section cited by the jury would not apply to the situation, Blanton said.

BOSONIA sent to front in opening furlong, set pace throughout and was put to drive in midstretch to hold BIG BUD safe. The latter was rushed to contention and closed willingly under punishment. TURKISH BATH brought well, lacked early speed and hung after offering contention in closing stages. HOPE raced wide throughout, improved position steadily to stretch and hung. MILLINER pressed early pace and weakened gradually after a half. FLYING VIM closed some ground. PIRATE KING went evenly. ERION went in air at break.

BRILLIANT ROSE, off forwardly, was steadied along on outside to backstretch, improved position gradually to midstretch and came with bold rush to win going away. ROSARIAN followed close to pace of PIRATE LASS to midstretch, took command, but DeCamillis appeared to ride overconfidently. PIRATE LASS was sent to front at once, opened a good lead, but weakened suddenly in final three-sixteenths. CHIEF EVERGREEN moved up menacingly in stretch and hung. JEZREEL went forwardly to stretch and tired. LONG FACE closed well. EXHORT had speed for a half. CHANNING was through early.

MERRY GESTURE drew clear of ROBESPIERRE leaving backstretch, swerved in front of latter in stretch and barely lasted under drive. ROBESPIERRE was rushed to contention at once, took brief lead, rallied when placed to drive, but had to be taken up when blocked and closed gamely thereafter. DeCamillis' claim of foul was not allowed. ROMAUNT, off poorly, was hard ridden and weakened in closing stages. STEAM ROLLER, off slowly, closed with rush. BANNER GIRL raced wide throughout. REELLY BLY was away in close quarters along rail and weakened early. EBONY BLUE had early speed.

Corn Climbs 1⅛ Cents in Holiday Rally

Wheat Is Steady
Exports Improve
Volume Is Low

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 23.—Leading a pre-Thanksgiving rally of the cereal markets today, corn climbed 1¼ cents a bushel and held most of the gain. Better shipping demand for corn, as well as improved export inquiry, furnished the chief stimulus. In addition, purchases of corn to arrive here failed to achieve more than meager volume.

Responding to corn price action, wheat developed considerable backbone and virtually overcame earlier losses, brought about by reported prospects of the biggest Argentine wheat crop in ten years.

At the close, Chicago corn futures were ⅝ to ⅞ cent higher compared with yesterday's finish: December, 47@47⅛; May, 51⅛@51¾. Wheat was ¾ cent off to ⅛ cent up; December, 62⅛@62⅝; May, 65⅝@65⅛. Oats were unchanged to ⅛ cent advance; rye, ⅛ to ⅜ cent down, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 2 cents.

Building Contracts Set 4-Year Peak

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—The F. W. Dodge Corp., compiler of data for the building industry, forecast today construction contracts in 37 States east of the Rocky Mountains in 1939 may approximate $3,500,000,000, the highest figure of the recovery from the extremely low building levels of 1933 and 1934.

The 1939 estimate would compare with an indicated total of $3,200,000,000 this year and the actual total of $2,900,000,000 in 1937. The total went as low as $1,255,708,000 in 1933, partly accounted for by cheaper construction costs then. Repair and maintenance work are not included in the figures.

Cotton Futures Close Lower

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—Final December liquidation prior to first notice day on Friday dominated the cotton market today. March sold off from 8.52 to 8.44 and closed at 8.46, with final prices 6 to 7 points net lower.

The market opened narrowly as spot house buying of December absorbed liquidating orders. Business in other months was largely exchanging from December forward. The fact that the December price early in the day had gone a few points above yesterday's average quotation for spot cotton in the ten designated Southern markets seemed to restrict further buying, however. After the first active demand had been filled, prices slowly eased to the day's lows in the last hour.

Procter & Gamble Plans $1,000,000 Plant

Cincinnati, Nov. 23 (AP).—The Procter & Gamble Co. announced today acquisition of a 10-acre site at Quincy, Mass., and plans for the erection of a factory there to cost upward of $1,000,000.

Employment will be provided for "several hundred people," a statement issued by the firm said. Deep-water improvements are contemplated to facilitate handling of raw materials and finished products.

Associated Gas Output

New York, Nov. 23.—For the week ended November 11, Associated Gas & Electric System reports net electric output of 95,689,696 units. This is an increase of 3,461,218 units or 3.8 per cent above production of 92,228,478 units a year ago. This is the highest weekly output ever reported for the system as now constituted and is the largest percentage increase in more than a year.

Farm Buying Power Nears 1937 Level

Up 2.1 in September
Income 9.7% Under '37
Benefit Payments Rise

New York, Nov. 23.—The price index of farm products, on the basis of 1929 as 100, rose from the recession's low of 63.0 in August to 65.1 in September, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. Although the price level was still 19.4 per cent lower than in September last year, when the index was 80.8, an increase of 12.0 per cent in the quantity of farm products marketed, offset to a considerable extent the drop in prices. Consequently, farm cash income from marketings in September was only 9.7 per cent smaller than in the corresponding month last year, declining to $737,000,000 from $816,000,000.

Farm income in September made a more favorable year-to-year comparsion than in a number of previous months this year. For the first nine months this year farm income from marketings totaled $5,044,000,000, as against $5,820,000,000 last year, a decrease of 13.3 per cent.

Government benefit payments to the farmers in September amounted to $27,000,000 as against only $5,000,000 in the same month last year. This increase in benefit payments offset part of the decrease in income from marketings. Consequently the farmers' total cash income in September amounted to $763,000,000 this year as compared with $821,000,000 last year, a decrease of only 6.9 per cent.

This decrease in total farm income was nearly offset by the lower level of prices paid by farmers for the goods which they bought. Such prices in September averaged 6.2 per cent lower than in the same month last year. The farmers' purchasing power was consequently less than 1 per cent smaller than a year ago. This was a considerably better showing than in previous months of this year. This is shown by the fact that the farmers' purchasing power in the first nine months was 7.3 per cent smaller than a year ago.

Trading Is Heavier in Irregular Session
Metal Shares Strength Features Day
Pre-Holiday Activity Is Heartening

New York, Nov. 23.—While irregularity continued in the stock market today, there developed a degree of firmness in the pre-holiday trading that was reassuring to the bullish forces. Periods of weakness were not prolonged and there appeared to be no unusual pressure to sell. Consequently there was a moderate rise in the list, the composite average showing a minor gain of 0.13 point. Trading was a bit more active than on the previous day, a total of 1,003,370 shares changing hands on the big board.

Firmness of stocks went along with a more satisfactory foreign exchange market, the pound taking care of itself until just at the close when it dropped away ⅛ cent. In recent days it appears that our securities have vibrated in accordance with sterling. There were additional purchases of gold in the London market for shipment here, the total being $2,200,000 but on the whole the condition of the foreign exchange market was far better than on Tuesday.

Metals a Feature

Featuring the stock list was the strength of the metals, which reacted immediately to the reinstatement of restriction on production of copper imposed by the international copper cartel. Output by January is to be held at 110 per cent of basic quotas. All limitations to production previously had been removed but now that the shortage of spot copper has been removed, the cartel has replaced the restriction.

Prices for scrap copper were raised here and there was a firmer tone for the metal in all markets and the response in metal stocks on the exchange was immediate. Anaconda led the list with a rise of 1⅛. Next most active member of the group was Kennecott, up 1¾, while Nickel gained fractionally. Both American Smelting and United States smelting were up more than a point.

Aviation Shares Irregular

Interest in the aviation stocks was maintained, but at a slower pace than recently, and there were signs of irregularity in the group. Boeing's litigation to collect on planes ordered by one of the big operating companies led to some selling in this issue and it closed down 1⅛. Most active of the group was Aviation Corporation, which was unchanged, as was Curtis Wright. Transcontinental & Western Air was up nearly a point and Sperry added a small fraction. Followers of this volatile group of stocks are now waiting for an official announcement of the Government's plans for defense.

Officials of virtually all the manufacturing units in the industry were working with Government officials today on the program and were drafting a report for President Roosevelt. After three days of these informal meetings Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson announced a unanimous agreement and willingness on the part of the manufacturers to co-operate immediately in any Government defense program. The question at the moment is what the program will involve.

Rails Indicate Increases

Rail issues were more prominent on the tape but held at about their former levels. Cheering news was seen in the preliminary reports of carloadings of individual roads which indicate there will be another gain shown when the final compilation is announced Friday. Even more favorable was the mid-week report of the power industry, which showed that electric output last week reached a new high for more than a year, with improvement especially noted in the New England, Southern and Pacific Coast areas.

Commodities were featured by jumps of about a cent a bushel in corn on indications of better shipping demand for this cereal. It closed up ⅜ to ⅞ cent a bushel. Wheat was little changed, closing off ¼ to ⅛ cent. Cotton was affected by liquidation of December contracts preparatory to notice day Friday. The close was down 5 to 7 points.

Bond Trading Quiet

Listed bond trading remained quiet and price tendencies irregular in the preholiday session. Interest was manifested in a few of the speculative issues that represent special situations. Local tractions were higher and some of the medium priced rails also reflected inquiry, but the great bulk of issues merely drifted idly, with gains and losses about equally numerous. Foreign dollar obligations sold down. Turnover in all issues was $6,940,000.

In the local traction group B. M. T. and Interborough bonds developed strength, but Manhattan Railway and Third Avenue issues were soft. B. M. T. 4½s were especially active and almost reached the previous high of the year. Nickel Plate bonds and some of the Lehigh Valley issues moved forward, but other intermediate priced rails were quiet. Cheap default carrier bonds were in mild demand. Holding company bonds were neglected and industrial convertibles also were dull.

Treasuries Idle

United States Treasury bonds were idle in their previous range, with all interests still intent on awaiting the terms of the December financing. Best grade corporate bonds hardly varied, as investment operations seldom are active just before a holiday.

There were few issues in the foreign dollar department that escaped the downward tendency. Argentine bonds receded and most Latin-American default bonds likewise turned soft. German issues were uncertain, while Italian and Japanese bonds dipped. Australians and Canadians were firm.

Steel Output Declines to 61.5 Per Cent

Buyers Are Cautious
Prices Hold Steady
Drops Point in Week

New York, Nov. 23.—The usual year-end cautiousness of steel buyers is seemingly beginning to manifest itself. New orders are holding up fairly well, but November will not show important gains over October, says Iron Age today in its weekly survey of the steel industry.

"Price announcements for the first quarter are logically to be expected within the next week or two, but there is no intimation as to whether any mill will attempt an advance. Opinion in the trade seems to be divided as to the advisability of such action, notwithstanding the desire of all producers for a better return.

"Ingot production at mid-week is estimated at 61.5 per cent, down one point from last week. Some of the recent upward trend in ingot production was due to a rush of specifications from the automobile industry, which, gauging its assemblies to retail sales, had apparently underestimated the public interest in the new cars. Now that shipments of cars are beginning to catch up, the pressure from this source may not be quite so insistent, although further large specifications are expected before the end of the year.

Gain Expected in 1939

"While there is room for doubt as to whether steel production will make much, if any, further gain this year, trade opinion is fairly confident of a considerable improvement in 1939 over the present year. The 1938 total of open hearth and bessemer ingots probably will be about 28,500,000 tons; estimates of 1939 production place the minimum at about 40,000,000 tons. The award of three battleships assures the use of 33,000 tons of plain steel and 42,000 tons of armor plate, some of which will be required next year, and the award of six cargo ships will add upward of 25,000 tons of steel to next year's shipbuilding needs.

"Tin plate production has not yet been stimulated by the recent reduction of $7 a ton, but can companies are releasing larger quantities of rolled plate from mill warehouses.

"Steel scrap prices at Pittsburgh and Chicago have moved up, raising the Iron Age composite price to $15, a new high for the year, but there are signs of a slightly easier situation at Chicago, which may indicate a checking of the rise for the present at least."

Int'l Cartel to Cut Copper Production

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—The decision of the International Copper Cartel at London to reimpose restrictions on production had a steadying effect today on what had been a shaky domestic copper market. Scrap copper, lowered ⅛ of a cent a pound, yesterday for the third time in a week, was marked up ⅛ of a cent to 9⅛ cents a pound, the equivalent of 10⅜ cents on a refined basis.

Copper men were free in predictions that the action of the the moment at least, changed the trend of thought in trade circles which was rapidly crystallizing in favor of a reduction in the price of domestic electrolytic copper, which has been quoted 11⅛ cents since October 14.

Exchange May Change Rules

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 2.—Plans for a radical modification of listing requirements to encourage a larger number of American industrial companies to seek listing privileges were announced by the New York Stock Exchange today.

The exchange board of governors adopted recommendations of a special committee calling for a cut in listing fees and a more "flexible" method of appraisal of applicants seeking to list securities on the "big board."

"Under the new listing policies," said the exchange's announcement "the controlling test of acceptability will be quality, but the standing of a company in its particular field, the character of the market for its products, its relative stability and position in its industry and whether or not it is engaged in an expanding industry with prospects of maintaining its position."

The exchange made it clear it had no intention of lowering its standards so that loopholes would be created for unsound securities. It was stressed that the aim was to remove "deterrents" or technical considerations which in the past had operated to disbar many worthy companies from listing privileges.

Nickel Plate Road Reports for October

Cleveland, Nov. 23 (AP).—Nickel Plate Railroad listed today its October net income at $288,542, compared with $121,949 in October, 1937. The road's ten months' operations have resulted in a $1,635,400 deficit, compared with $2,130,977 profit the same period last year. Pere Marquette, another of the former Van Sweringen lines, reported October net income of $238,237, against $256,357 in October, 1937. For the ten months a $2,476,154 deficit, compared with $1,625,483 profit in the comparable period last year.

Soap Pays 104 Levies

Trenton, Nov. 23.—An ordinary cake of facial soap is taxed by 104 hidden levies taking a toll of 10.3 per cent of the purchase price, the Emergency Consumers Tax Council of New Jesery reports. These hidden taxes, the council says, result from levies on the tallow producer, perfume maker, chemicals manufacturer, wrapper factory, soap company, transporation agencies, soap wholesaler and the retail store.

Holiday Closings

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—The Nation's security and commodity exchanges will remain closed Thanksgiving Day. Leading livestock centers, which often disregard holidays affecting other markets, will also close. Canadian and European markets will operate as usual.

Roper Foresees Sharp Rise in U. S. Income

WPA Rolls Decline
Other Bright Spots Cited

A sharp increase in the indicated national income, along with continued business gains, and the first decline in the Works Progress rolls in many weeks were reported simultaneously yesterday.

"Continuing a moderate but steady rise for the four weeks from October 8 to November 5," WPA Administrator Hopkins said, "WPA rolls reached a total of 3,262,689 and then declined to 3,257,437, or 5,232 during the week ended November 12."

At the same time Secretary of Commerce Roper estimated that the national income payments for this year may reach $65,000,000,000, as compared with $69,000,000,000 last year. President Roosevelt earlier had estimated a $61,000,000,000 income, but Roper yesterday said this would be the most prosperous year since 1930, with the exception of 1937. National income payments include the amounts paid in wages, rents, dividends, etc., throughout the country.

Corn Loans Provided

The Commodity Credit Corporation, to bolster and stabilize prices, allocated $100,000,000 for loans on the 1938 corn crop. Loans will range from 43 to 57 cents a bushel.

The Treasury reported that improving business conditions in October brought excise tax collections on gasoline and electric energy higher than the revenue for the same month of last year.

And the Commerce Department said there had been a sharp increase in American exports of petroleum and gasoline, due in part to the world armament race. In the first nine months of this year shipments of natural gasoline increased 74 per cent over the similar 1937 period, and exports of crude petroleum went up 23 per cent.

Almost a billion dollars' worth of construction is actually under way in the public works recovery program, Administrator Ickes said. Of the projects already started, officials said 3,222, costing $787,980,000 were in the non-Federal classification, while 1,039, to cost $199,999,206 were undertaken by Federal departments and agencies.

One-half of WPA Funs Spent

More than one-half of the $1,500,000,000 Congress appropriated last June to carry WPA until March 1 next has been spent. Unless the business upturn takes up the slack the sharpness of the WPA reductions now forecast for the next three months may result in demands for an immediate deficiency appropriation from the next Congress.

Mr. Roosevelt in annual budget revision estimated that an additional $500,000,000 would be needed to carry relief from March 1 to the end of the current fiscal year June 30 next, and to date the Administration has agreed with the intent of Congress to make the present appropriations last until March 1.

When Congress earmarked $1,500,000,000 for WPA it had been expected that the rolls would average 2,800,000 monthly over the eight-month period provided for. But since July 1, when the funds became available, the rolls moved up until the pre-election peak was reached.

Increase Notable in South

Hopkins explained that the increase demand for WPA jobs in Southern rural regions resulting from lower income from crops accounted for the bulk of the increase from October 8 to November 5. The increase for the period outside the South for the period was only 1.6 per cent, he said.

WPA rolls in the District of Columbia included 12,583 persons on October 22, a decline of 150 in a week.

"A year ago we were in the midst of a recession in business activity with all principal indices pointing downward, resulting in concern over the outlook. Today, in bold contrast, the country is in a most favorable position to sustain an upward trend over a long term, of sufficient strength as not to be fundamentally affected by minor fluctuations."

Talk on Strike At Stockyards Set Saturday

Receipts About Normal
Squeals Only Sounds
Wallace Gets Appeal

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 23.—Government conciliators announced tonight representatives of the C. I. O. and the Union Stock Yards Co. had agreed to hold a conference Saturday morning in an effort to end a strike of livestock handlers that has suspended trade at Chicago's stock yards.

Robert Mythen said he and W. H. Rodgers, conciliators for the Department of Labor, arranged the meeting.

Both the C. I. O. Packing House Workers Organizing Committee and the yards management expected the status quo of paralyzed trade to be continued until Saturday, O. T. Henkle, the stockyards' general manager, said the Friday after Thanksgiving normally was a dull day in the stock yards, with no shipments expected at all this time.

Basic Wage Demanded

The Federal arbiters intervened at about the time directors of the Chicago Livestock Exchange, made up of brokers who buy and sell animals on the open market at the yards, telegraphed an appeal to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace to use his influence with President Roosevelt or Secretary Perkins in terminating the stalemate lest the "entire industry" suffer a "great loss."

There were no sales on the open market at the yards today—the third day of the dispute. Approximately 8,000 head of stock arrived by train and truck. But these were sent directly to the packing houses and the International Livestock Show, opening Saturday in the huge amphitheater.

The vast expanse of pens presented a desolate picture. The strange silence was relieved only by the squeals of several hundred pigs left in the enclosure. Commission men agreed to feed and water them but placed a ban on sales.

The Exchange—a nutral party in the controversy—suspended its rules to permit its broker members to buy from farmers and ship the animals directly to the packing plants here. This move would enable them to circumvent the strike-bound market channel, but such transactions would be limited.

James Rice, secretary of the A. F. of L. Livestock Handlers Union, announced the members were ready to return to work Friday. Herbert March, an organizer for the Packing House Workers Organizing Committee, declared, however, the C. I. O. union was ready to "tie up the entire packing industry here if necessary to support the strike."

Receipts About Normal

This was in apparent reference to the C. I. O. threat to call out 20,000 packing-house workers if an attempt were made to break the strike of more than500 livestock handlers.

Receipts at major livestock markets in the corn belt were about normal, indicating livestock men said, that farmers warned to withhold shipments to Chicago did not divert their marketing elsewhere. Prices at outside markets generally were steady to higher, with hogs rising 15 to 25 cents in some places and lambs up slightly.

Justice Black Urges South to Be Progressive

'Jim Crow' Laws Hit

By the Associated Press.

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 23.—Justice Hugo L. Black urged that governments give "first importance to promoting the welfare and happiness of human beings" tonight in accepting the Thomas Jefferson Medal of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

The Alabama justice was given the medal as "the Southerner who has done most to promote human welfare."

Quotes Jefferson

The justice touched upon the problems of the South after observing that "as you serve the people of the South you serve the Nation."

After recalling Jefferson's strong belief in wide ownership of land and in public education, Black said:

"He believed the means adopted by each generation should be adapted to its needs. He condemned as absurd the static condition that all methods of past ages are adequate for all future conditions, which conditions were both unknown and unknowable to the past age."

"Jim Crow" Condemned

Condemnation of the South's "Jim Crow" laws for separation of white and colored persons was voted without opposition by the conference at its concluding business session, which preceded Black's address.

Gov. Graves of Alabama said he was "surprised and shocked by the resolutions passed" here.

Senator Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, expressed concern over actions of the conference. In a statement from Florence, S. C., he said race relations resolutions created "an extremely dangerous situation" in the South.

Other resolutions indorsed by the conference advocated passage of Federal anti-lynching legislation and "full citizenship for all persons, regardless of race," abolition of poll taxes and equal educational opportunity for all children.

Another resolution asked appointment of a committee on the South, "similar to the Great Plains committee," to study "the Southern rural problems by existing agencies, including the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, as a general attack on Southern rural poverty with emphasis on better farming, diversification, community co-operatives, and improvemet of the status of farmers as purchasers and consumers"

The conference also suggested amendment of the farm tenant act "to provide Government-insured farm home ownership loans, or authorize the establishment of a Government corporation to float loans against farm mortgages."

Hague Attacked In C. I. O. Brief

Philadelphia, Nov. 23 (U.P.).—The Congress of Industrial Organizations today attacked the United States Circuit Court of Appeals and Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City in defense of a Federal court injunction requiring Jersey City officials to grant the C. I. O. and allied groups civil rights.

The brief, filed in answer to a request by Hague for a supersedeas over the Federal court order, denied Hague's assertion that relaxation of Jersey City vigilance would result in "riot and bloodshed" and attacked as illegal and "packed" the extraordinary five-judge court which heard the appeal.

S. C. Society to Dance

The South Carolina Society's first supper dance and reception of the season will be held at the Shoreham Hotel on December 2, at 9 p. m.

Snipe Hunt Leads Police to Duck; Shooter Flees

Shots rang out in Rock Creek Park again last night within hearing distance of policemen hunting the sniper and sent them scurrying on a new "snipe" hunt.

Policemen watched the duck in its death flurry, but did not retrieve it. The mysterious gunman escaped, without his Thanksgiving dinner.

Notre Dame Paper Would Condemn Jitterbugs to Gym

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 23 (A.P.).—Jitterbug dances drew editorial fire today from the Ave Maria, University of Notre Dame weekly, which declared such gyrations "ought to be confined to the gymnasium, where muscular and physical exhaustion is in order.

"They are definitely out of place in the ballroom, where esthetic and graceful movements of body follow the noble rhythms of music born of refined tastes, rather than the tom-tom fever of the jungles."

The university's religious bulletin, joining the attack, said "... the church is turning its broad mind and kindly eyes on the 'jitterbugs' of the hour and soundly condemning them."

Steel Scrap Prices Up

New York, Nov. 23 (A.P.).—Dow Jones & Co. said today in a Pittsburgh dispatch that No. 1 heavy melting steel scrap is now quoted $13.50-$14 a ton, an advance of 25 cents and another new high in the current forward movement. Detroit and Chicago also posted higher scrap prices, according to trade advices.

Woman Beaten, 2 Are Jailed 3 Hours Later

Detectives See Crime
Catch Pair in Chase
Special Court Held

Three hours after they allegedly beat and robbed a woman visitor at the Freer Art Gallery, two colored men were at the District Jail, held for the grand jury on robbery charges.

Their arraignment before Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran established a precedent for speed. Judge Curran, who had adjourned court for the day, returned to the bench to preside at the special preliminary hearing.

The suspects, Eugene H. White, 18, 918½ Desmond Court southwest, and Joseph W. Johnson, 18, 1127 Half street southwest were captured immediately after Mrs. Katille Fender, 40, Fort Worth, Tex., was struck in the face and her pocketbook snatched.

Park Policemen W. J. Hammond and R. J. King said they had observed the youths acting suspiciously around parked cars and witnessed the attack on the women.

They saw her hurled to the ground, and one of the youths snatch her pocketbook, containing about $28. A 69-year-old man, Herbert P. Carter, of Arlington, grappled with one of the assailants, but the latter broke away. The officers chased the youths three blocks and captured them in an alley.

Mrs. Fender was taken to Emergency Hospital and treated for a laceration of her lips.

After she received first aid and notified the policemen that she intended to leave for her home immediately, the special arraignment was ordered. Judge Curran returned to the bench and heard the case. He held the boys to the grand jury on robbery charges, and set bail at $2,000.

'Yankee Trading' In Reverse, Says Trade Pact Critic

Senator Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, said yesterday the new trade agreement with Great Britain was "based more on international politics than on economics."

He contended the agreement and the similar pact with Canada served industry better than agriculture.

"Is this 'Yankee trading' or are we trading the Yankee?" he inquired in a statement.

"The farmer is still selling his surplus in a world market which is a cheap market, and buying his goods in a high protected market for manufactured goods. The farmer is still selling cheap and buying dear."

D. C. Considers New York Bid On Circle Tunnel

The District Commissioners took under advisement yesterday a recommendation from Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, highway director, that they award the Thomas Circle underpass construction to a New York firm. The firm, James Stewart & Co., submitted the lowest bid for the work, an estimate of $433,748.80.

Capt. Whitehurst said work on the underpass, which will necessitate removal of 97 linden trees, will begin within two weeks. Under the contract the work must be completed in 300 calendar days.

Young trees will replace most of the old linden trees, Capt. Whitehurst said. Civic groups opposed the move to tear down the trees, and protested to the White House.

Traffic on Fourteenth street, Vermont avenue and M street will remain on the surface. Massachusetts avenue traffic will be directed into the tunnel.

Tomorrow First Christmas Shopping Day

Merchants Prepared
Early Start Advised
Wide Variety of Stock

If you want to begin your Christmas shopping with the "kick-off" of the season, tomorrow's the day to start, according to Edward D. Shaw, secretary of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association.

"Most Washington stores will launch their formal Christmas selling campaigns the day after Thanksgiving," he said, "although many already have decorated their show windows in advance."

Merchants are placing their full stock of Christmas merchandise on sale earlier than usual this year, Shaw said, because of the growing public habit of doing Christmas buying early.

"Until this week the general public has given little attention to preparation for Christmas season," Shaw said. "However, the merchants, the jobbers and the manufacturers have been preparing for this season for months.

"Today, through the amazingly efficient industrial machine which has been devolped in recent years, there is offered for sale at the Christmas season objects from the most widely scattered markets in the world.

"There are toys from the cottage workshops of quaint European villages, napery from Ireland or the Philippines, glassware from Czecho-Slovakia, precious stones from the Andes and trinkets from the Far East.

"These will be mingled with products of American manufacturers to give buyers a wide choice of gifts."

Widow Held on Bail
To Re-enact Scene

By the Associated Press.

White Plains, N. Y., Nov. 23.—Investigators hunted tonight for clews in a "face-in-a-dream" photograph of Eugene Y. Burckhalter, 47, snapped just before he went to his supposed suicidal death in a home-made lethal chamber his widow says she helped him set up.

The picture of the chemical firm executive was taken by Mrs. Marie Burckhalter, 44, as he stood near the garage at their Hastings-on-Hudson home where he later was found dead from carbon monoxide fumes.

"When we developed the film," said Assistant District Attorney Gallagher, "his face appeared absolutely blank, without a single emotion, like a face in a dream," and gave no indication he expected death immediately.

Gallagher said Mrs. Burckhalter, who is held in $10,000 bail on a first-degree manslaughter charge, explained she took the farewell photo "because I only had one more picture left on the film, and I wanted to use it up."

To Re-enact Scene

He said Mrs. Burckhalter admitted that as she took the photograph she knew the garage had been transformed into an "execution chamber" and that it was the last time she would see her husband alive.

Medical Examiner Squire was engaged in an analysis of the vital organs to ascertain whether Burckhalter had taken out or been administered an overdose of the so-called "hypnotic" medicine which his physician said he had been in the habit of taking as a sleep inducer.

Dr. Squire said a preliminary report showed the victim's blood contained a lethal measure of carbon monoxide and that he had been drinking and taking hypnotic medicine.

Police Chief John F. Donegan, of Hastings, said he would have Mrs. Burckhalter perform a step-by-step re-enactment as soon as she had recovered from a ten-hour grilling which ended at 1 a. m. today.

Arraignment Tuesday

Mrs. Burckhalter's widowed mother, Mrs. Marie Hite, of Oakland, Calif., declared it was "ridiculous" to accuse her daughter of manslaughter.

"Her husband had threatened to commit suicide on many occasions," the mother said.

Bedtime Story

A Quiet Thanksgiving

Take time this day for thoughtful pause;
None lives but has for thanks some cause.
— Old Mother Nature.

It was Thanksgiving morning. Not a ripple stirred the glassy surface of Paddy the Beaver's pond in the Green Forest. That is not a ripple stirred until Paddy, coming up from the under water entrance to his house, put his head out of water and then swam to the roof and climbed up. He was joined there a moment later by Mrs. Paddy. The ripples they had made ran shoreward and were lost at the edge and once more the pond was smooth so Paddy, looking down, saw himself upside down on the roof of his house which also was upside down. And a little way from him were twice the number of great brids that had come in the night before, but of these half the number also were upside down.

Once reflections had bothered Paddy the Beaver. He couldn't understand them. He understood them no better now but they no longer bothered him. He accepted them as he had learned to accept many other things that he knew were so even if he couldn't understand why they were so. It was enough to know that Honker the Goose and his flock were there. They had arrived the day before late in the afternoon so tired that as he watched them coming he thought that some of them would not be able to clear the tops of the trees. Long after the others had wearily settled on the pond a lone straggler had arrived and he did not clear the top of the last tree and came flopping down in a distressful manner. Somehow Paddy had known without being told that this straggler was not only very tired but had been hurt, and that it was really because of this that he had fallen so far behind. Those Geese had been gabbling to encourage each other as they flew, but when at last they were safely down on the water they were too tired to talk.

Presently one then another of the great brids began to stir. There was a stretching of wings, dressing of feathers, gentle paddling about. Honker swam over to Paddy's house. He and the Beaver were old friends. Ever since Paddy had made that pond Honker had stopped over there with his flock to rest.

"Have you had a good trip?" asked Paddy.

Honker shook his head. "It has been one of the worst journeys I ever have made," said he. "When we came in late yesterday afternoon some of the flock were so tired that I didn't know as they would be able to make it."

"I didn't know as they would either. I was watching and some just barely missed hitting the tops of the trees," replied Paddy.

"What made the journey harder than usual?" inquired Mrs. Paddy.

"We've had to keep moving almost since we started from our summer home in the Far North. We have had little chance to rest. Places where we used to rest and feel safe are no longer safe. The hunters with terrible guns have found them and were hiding there. We are fortunate that so many of us are alive and were able to reach here. You haven't seen any hunters around, have you?" Honker's voice held a sharp not of anxiety.

Paddy shook his head. "Not a hunter excepting four-legged ones," said he.

"I'm thankful for that," replied Honker with a little sigh of relief. "And I am thankful that we are here, I am thankful that we lost only two on the way here and that only one other was hurt by those terrible guns."

All that day Honker and his flock rested there on the pond of Paddy the Beaver in the Green Forest. It was Thanksgiving Day but, of course, this they did not know. Nevertheless, there was thanksgiving in their hearts for the peace and safety they had at last found. There were visitors, for the clamor of their voices as they came in the night before had been heard and understood by many. Lightfoot the Deer came a little earlier than usual to drink, and lingered to listen to the gabbling of the Geese. Buster Bear shuffled across the dam, and if in his small piggy eyes there was a gleam of desire as he looked at the great birds idly floating so near yet so safely he merely went on about his business. Reddy Fox openly appeared and good humoredly grinned at Honker when the latter refused an invitation to come ashore. So passed a day of rest and peace and true if unconscious thanksgiving.

Pay-as-You-Go Pension Plans Held Infeasible

Tax Burden Too Great Would Fall on Worker Someone Must Lose

A "pay-as-you-go" old age benefit system, advocated in some quarters as an alternative to the prevailing plan, would inevitably break down before many years had elapsed, experts said yesterday.

The reason, it was explained, is that pay roll tax rates eventually would rise so high that workers would rise in revolt against the plan and wreck it.

Something for Nothing

Under an old age benefit system you must give a lot of people something for nothing, or you must give thousands a "bargain" in annuities or life benefits, said the experts. The question is what kind of a plan will be most equitable for everybody and still give those retiring in early years an annuity which will mean something, they pointed out.

Under a reserve plan, whereby workers in the early years will have to pay taxes to a reserve account to help support the plan in later years, the burden is more equitably distributed, experts emphasize.

Under a "pay-as-you-go" arrangement workers in the early years still will get their annuities and will pay little or nothing for them. If taxes are levied on workers in the early years only at rates sufficient to pay benefits to those retiring in early years, the annuities paid to the latter will be virtually all gift. Then those coming along in later years will have to pay for the handsome donations which the plan made to their fathers and uncles.

The fault of the present plan which permits storekeepers and other self-employed persons to take advantage of old age compensation to get life annuities at a fraction of insurance company rates would be accentuated under a "pay-as-you-go" system, experts said.

Someone Must Pay

"In other words," one authority commented, "if you are going to give somebody something for nothing, somebody must foot the bill. Any old-age benefit that is handed as a gift to people reaching retirement age now or in later years must be paid for by their children."

Under a "pay-as-you-go" plan, it is said, the tax rate eventually would climb to 12 or 15 per cent for both employer and employe. This would mean a deduction from the salary check of from 6 to 7½ per cent, instead of 1 per cent, as at present.

Persons informed about old-age benefit systems say that the only way to avoid a public reaction which would wreck a "pay-as-you-go" plan would be to support the plan in large part by indirect general taxes, thus concealing or disguising this portion of the cost burden.

In fact, the present reserve plan gives a lot of people something for nothing. It is this feature which causes the loophole in the law which allows a merchant 55 years of age, whose wife is of the same age, to incorporate himself and buy with $2,280 in taxes a life annuity for the couple of $900 by the time they reach 65.

Example Conservative

This is a comparatively conservative example. Numerous others could be cited of how it is possible even now to get an annuity at approximately one-tenth what it would cost if bought from any insurance company.

A "pay as you go" arrangement, experts explain, would multiply the incentive to "rook" the plan. The opportunity to get annuties at ridiculously low cost is great enough now to cause experts to doubt whether old-age compensation ever could be made self-supporting by any schedule of taxes which the public could be induced to pay.

If it were not for this factor, the present schedule of taxes, which reaches a maximum of 6 per cent on January 1, 1949, would be more than ample to support the prevailing system of benefit payments, it is said.

To remove the incentive to take advantage of the plan it would be necessary to compute benefit payments on the basis of taxes paid. And if this were done, nobody would get something for nothing. That is, persons retiring in the early years would not get an annuity large enough to mean anything.

With the present tremendous popular clamor for old-age pensions, it is pointed out, thousands inevitably will get annuities that they do not adequately pay for. The question then is who ultimately will pay for it—and how.

Okla. High School 'Revolutionists' Refuse to Disband

Oklahoma City, Nov. 23 (AP).—High school leaders of a student group defied authorities tonight to disband their "C ? C" (Curiosity) Club, whose purpose they described a "bloodless revolution" for more liberal government.

Activities of the group of 24 boys and girls were disclosed today when school authorities investigated students who had been repeatedly absent from classes.

The order has a uniform of black shirts with the "C ? C" on them, black breeches and black boots.

Investigators said the group's main objective "appears to be the denunciation of control by home and parents, by school authorities and the laws of the State."

Cities Service Files Plan for Integration

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 23.—Cities Service Power & Light Co., a $428,000,000 public utility holding company, has filed a tentative plan of intergration for its electric and other utility properties with the Securities and Exchange Commission, it was learned tonight.

The company's action was in response to a request made some months ago by William O. Douglas, chairman of the commission that holding companies will submit by December 1 plans and programs for meeting the so-called "death sentence" clause of the public utility act of 1935.

Wheeler Calls 2-Price Plan 'Cockeyed'

Urges Wheat Export Attacks Navy Program Wants More Planes

By the Associated Press.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, described Secretary Wallace's proposed two-price farm program yesterday as "cockeyed." Wheeler urged, instead, an increase in agricultural exports.

Under Wallace's recently outlined program, farm surpluses would be sold to low-income groups at bargain prices. The Government would make good any losses suffered on such sales.

Wheeler, who said he is now working with Northwestern farm leaders on new agriculture legislation, told reporters:

"A two-price system for agriculture in the United States—to give one class one price and another class another price—would tend to stir up class hatred, and would result in all kinds of devices for cheating. It just wouldn't work."

Seeks New System

The Montanan said he thought a way could be found to increase agricultural exports without the payment of export subsidies. A group of Administration officials recently has been seeking methods of increasing wheat exports.

Wheeler said it would be possible to devise a two-price system under which the farmer would receive a domestic price for that portion of his commodities sold in this country and a world price for that portion sold abroad.

"That would give the farmer the benefit of the home market and the tariffs which are already on the statute books," he asserted.

"It has taken the farmers a long time to realize that they have been buncoed, and that a tariff is not effective on farm products when there is a surplus. When a surplus exists, the products have to be sold at a world price.

Attacks Naval Program

"If the farmers are going to get the benefit of the tariff, the Government has got to step into the picture and organize some system for sales at both a domestic and a world price."

Wheeler, ranking member of the Senate Agriculture Committee, said the existing farm control system has been ineffective. Although some parts of it might be incorporated in a new program, he added, "I think we will need a completely new system."

Discussing other problems before the coming Congress, he said he would support any proposal to give the United States an air force "equal to or ahead of any in the world."

Wheeler described the construction of big battleships by this country as "nonsensical" because, he said, they are "inefficient for a defensive war."

"But in view of the events taking place in Europe and Asia," he added, "I think the United States should build up its air force and its anti-aircraft equipment for defense purposes."

2 Men Bruised As Plane Falls On Lanham Farm

Two men escaped with cuts and bruises yesterday when their small biplane crashed into a plowed field at Lanham, Md., after narrowly missing the home of Herbert Harvey.

The plane went into a spin and nosedived into a field on the farm of John Howser. Failure of the gas feedline was blamed for the crash.

Bride, 14, Gets Father To Take Her Home

Los Angeles, Nov. 23 (AP).—Velma Robinson Greene, 14-year-old bride, convinced her father today she should return home to Tallula, Ill., to her eight brothers and sisters, and that her marriage to 60-year-old Jones Greene, wealthy Kentucky landowner, should be annulled.

The girl told her father Greene abused her and drank excessively on their honeymoon. The father, Edgar Robinson, admitted he had consented to the union, feeling his daughter would "be better off with Jones than with some of these young fellows who leave their wives right after the marriage."

There are approximately 400 members of the alumni group in Washington, among them a number of prominent Government officials.

A.M.A. Fights New Subpena As Too Broad

See 'Fishing Expedition' Demand Specific Order Previous Plea Upheld

The Government's second effort to obtain American Medical Association records for study by the extraordinary grand jury investigating violations of the Sherman anti-trust act was denounced as "a fishing expedition" before Justice Proctor yesterday.

Justice Proctor recently quashed two-thirds of the first subpena against the A. M. A. because it was so "sweeping that to require the A. M. A. to obey it would be oppressive and unreasonable. The same flaws are in the new subpena, Seth Richardson, A. M. A. counsel, argued yesterday.

Asks for Minutes

The new subpena commanded:

"Bring it with you:

"All . . . documentary communications and all reports or memoranda . . . containing statements with respect to any action or policy taken or adopted or considered or proposed to be taken or adopted by or on behalf of the A. M. A. or of any medical society or association affiliated with the A. M. A., or of any hospital, in opposition to group medical practice or to the provision of medical care on a periodic prepayment basis, drawn up, sent or received from January 1, 1935, to November 20, 1938, by five A. M. A. officials, its judicial council, its bureau of investigation and any other official whom the five named know to have sent or received such communications.

The subpena also required production of all minutes of any A. M. A. agency which referred to these subjects. The third section ordered produced any such papers which referred to Group Health Association, Inc., or to any of six other such agencies.

Specific Order Desired

Richardson told the court that to select the papers the A. M. A. would have to cull them from many thousands of documents filed in its headquarters. This, he said, made the order so broad that it was void. He urged that the Government be made to indicate more exactly what papers it wanted.

John Lewin, special assistant to the Attorney General, defended the subpena.

Meanwhile the grand jury ended its sixth week of hearings on G. H. A. charges that the A. M. A. and the District Medical Society conspired unlawfully in restraint of trade in its campaign against group medical practice.

Before the grand jury yesterday were Dr. C. C. Caylor, of Providence Hospital; Dr. John H. Lyons, of Emergency Hospital; Dr. Charles Stanley White, of George Washington University, and Dr. Leon Martel, of Georgetown University.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Dr. Hans Kindler conducts the National Symphony Orchestra Wednesday night in Constitution Hall, with Myrna Hess as soloist. Program: Prelude and Fugue in C minor (Bach), Pianoforte Concerto No. 3 in C minor (Beethoven), Symphony No. 2 in D major (Brahms).

Thanks to the imaginary companionship of Bach, Beethoven and Brahms, and to the actual presence of that noble-spirited artist, Myra Hess, patrons of the National Symphony Orchestra enjoyed an eminently satisfactory experience last evening in Constitution Hall. The satisfaction came from great music performed in all sincerity with no purpose ulterior to the service of art, and from great music performed in all sincerity with no purpose ulterior to the service of art, and from great music standing apart from association with anything of lesser stature than itself. It was a time of exaltation on the summits of contemplation.

First in the program was the massive organ prelude and fugue in C minor of Bach in a very effective orchestral arrangement by Edgar T. Paul, of Baltimore. Bach at the organ was a dreamer whose visions had a grandeur that transcended the power of the instrument to express, and for that reason orchestral transcriptions of his organ works are justifiable from every point of view. The essential structure of the composition is strengthened and the tonal colors are amplified in richness, while the spacial perspective is deepened. This was particularly noticeable in the dimensions and texture of the weighty and authoritative prelude.

Without a change of key the concert continued with the C minor pianoforte concerto Beethoven, which was read by Myra Hess in a veritable mood of inspiration. The distinguishing element in the playing of Miss Hess is spirituality. No one can fail to be impressed by this characteristic which is the core of her interpretative eloquence; it is a selfless quality which transmutes her technical skill into an almost unconscious reflex. While listening to her, one is primarily aware of her expressive poesy and only incidentally of her manner of performance.

The C minor concerto is one of Beethoven's self-portraits, the earliest of them all, for he was only 30 when he composed it. He was just emerging from the period when he was a willing disciple of Haydn and Mozart in the matter of musical form, and he was beginning to express his own individuality with confidence. Also he was starting those experiments in key relationships which were to result in so many unexpected and astonishing transitions.

In this concerto the most interesting technical point lies in the unusual key of E major used in the slow movement. Beethoven frequently placed C major and E major in juxtaposition, but in this case the E major tonality is a quite unusual neighbor between two C minor movements. Not only in the subtlety of the key scheme, but also in the imperious air of the first allegro, the impassioned serenity of the largo and the mordant brilliance of the final rondo, this concerto is pure Beethoven.

The concluding work on the program, directed by Hans Kindler with an enkindling earnestness, was the second symphony of Brahms. Always welcome because of its geniality and wholesome optimism, this symphony is one of the enduring masterpieces endowed with a vitality that will last as long as music is a part of our comunal life.

Bob Burns Says—

They say there ain't any man so onery but what some woman would marry him, so I suppose the reason some men remain bachelors is jest because they can't find a woman who will fit in with their self-centered ways.

A bunch of us pret near dropped over the other day at the golf club when an old bachelor told us he was gonna get married. He says, "You boys know I'd rather play golf than eat, don't you?" and we all said, "Yes," and he said, "Well, I finally found a woman who would rather play bridge than cook!"

Miss Mimi Worthington (Above)

"Two little girls from school" are Miss Julia Worthington and Miss Mimi Worthington, the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. George Y. Worthington. In spite of the heavy schedule they are carrying at Sweet Briar, where Julia is a senior and Mimi is in her second year, they will find time to be presented to society on December 28.

Miss Julia Worthington spent a year at the Sorbonne in Paris, where she studied on a scholarship won at Sweet Briar.

Miss Eleanor Roosevelt

(Front Cover)

Debutante over the White House is Miss Eleanor Roosevelt, the niece of the First Lady and the Boston-bred daughter of Mrs. John Cutter, of Dedham, Mass., and G. Hall Roosevelt, of Beacon Hill.

The cut-glass chandeliers in the East Room will sparkle down on the first debut party they have seen in 28 years when the President and Mrs. Roosevelt present her to Washington society—or rather, to national society—on December 27. Members of the Capital's younger set, however, will have a chance before that to glimpse a budding Roosevelt when she appears, squired by an army of White House aides, at the Black and White Ball Saturday evening at the Mayflower. Today she will bow to New England stalwarts at the Boston Country Club. Unmindful of her future fame, classmates at the Winsor School used to call her "Ellie."

In a recent interview she revealed that she had a universal attitude toward hobbies; among the many things she is interested in are riding her English bicycle, listening to phonograph records and collecting miniature bronze animals. She can ride, swim, dance and play tennis, but she doesn't like bridge.

Miss Maisie Howard

Preferring to be called Maisie, rather than Mary Chase, Miss Howard blossomed yesterday at a tea given by her parents, Capt. Herbert Seymour Howard, U. S. N., and Mrs. Howard. The date of her party, rightly enough, coincided with the day on which her mother and her mother's sisters, all curtsied to Washington society.

Among other parties on the calendar for this debutante is the dinner to be given by Mrs. Charles M. Lea at the opulent Sulgrave Club on December 21 and the ball to be given on January 2 by her uncle, Capt. John R. Edir, U. S. N.

Miss Howard has attended school all over the atlas. Beginning at Potomac School, she next studied in London when her father held the post of Naval Attache at the United States Embassy; then she entered Miss Madeira's and later enrolled at the Elmwood School in Ottawa.

Music is what interests Miss Barbara Henning, as well as her debut. She will be presented today at a tea by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur S. Henning. After that, she will be belle of the ball at a dance this evening.

Nevertheless in spite of all these festivities, she has a very serious eye on a singing career and plans to attend the Juillard School of Music. Already she has sung in amateur productions of "Sweethearts" and "The Student Prince." She is a graduate of Holton-Arms.

Miss Patricia Morris

Today is the day for Miss Patricia Morris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris. Her party will be a tea at the home of her parents, The Lindens, on Kalorama road. Then when Christmas rolls around, she will also be feted at a dinner and ball at the Sulgrave Club on December 23. She expects also to be among the group of Washington debutantes who will put in an appearance at the Bachelor's Cotillion on December 5.

Like many of her sister-buds, she is a student at Vassar and is taking parties and books right in her stride.

Miss Mildred McConnell

All roads in the hunt country lead to the North Wales Club at Warrenton, Va., and they will lead there more especially on December 29, when Miss Mildred McConnell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Earll McConnell, of Middleburg, makes her debut at a dance on that evening. Miss McConnell is a member of the Orange County Hunt and is a student at the Finch School in New York.

Several hundred members of the younger set turned out last Friday afternoon to attend the debut tea-dance of Miss Catherine Tilghman at the festive 1925 F Street Club. Miss Tilghman is the daughter of Mrs. Charles Tilghman. She was graduated from the Sacred Heart Convent and attends Manhattanville College in New York. There, as vice president of the dramatic club, she is showing a decided flair for the footlights and is ambitious some day to become another Katharine Cornell. Well . . . if there's anything in names, it certainly looks as if she were headed in the right direction.

Miss Martha Coker

Only "Cabinet" debutante of the season is Miss Martha Coker, the granddaughter of the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, and a senior at Coker College, founded by her paternal grandfather, James L. Coker, of Hartsville, S. C. In town to attend the debut of her friend, Miss Catherine Tilghman, on November 18, she has returned to her studies in Hartsville but will be back again to be presented to Washington society by Mrs. Roper on December 28. Miss Coker is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David R. Coker.

Miss Adelaide Chatfield-Taylor

Miss Adelaide Chatfield-Taylor, the daughter of the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, was one of the first debutantes of the year, blossoming early last June. However, she will join other Washington debutantes at parties being given now at Thanksgiving. During the Christmas holidays, she will be feted at a dinner on December 26. At her reception, the sun shone on Adelaide in a pale blue floor-length frock and on members of official Washington who flocked to the Chatfield-Taylors' to meet her. The event, which took place in a garden instead of a drawing room, marked one of the high points of a season which extended far into the summer.

Miss Chatfield-Taylor is a sophomore at Bryn Mawr.

Miss Agnes Magruder

Miss Agnes Magruder, because her father is a high-ranking Naval officer, never stays long in one place and not so far from now she will be off to China, where Commander John H. Magruder, U. S. N., will be in charge of the flagship Augusta. Her debut tea is scheduled for December 1 at the 1925 F Street Club. Commander and Mrs. Magruder, before coming to Washington, made their home in Newport, his previous post. As if she hadn't had enough traveling about, Miss Magruder and her mother spent last summer in Europe with Mrs. Hamilton V. Bryan and Miss Anne Bryan.

Miss Anne Underwood

Another Vassar girl who is debuting this year is Miss Anne Underwood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Underwood. She will bow on December 22 at a tea to be given at the home of her parents. One of her hobbies is her Manx kitten, Trilby.

Miss Mary Adams Manning

Back to town from Vassar for the Thanksgiving holidays has come Miss Mary Adams Manning, whose debut-day will be Saturday. The party will be a tea and will be given by her grandmother, Mrs. Beale R. Miss Sylvia Alexander (Above)

A member of one of Washington's oldest families, Miss Sylvia Hoban Alexander, who made her debut November 17, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Alexander. She is the great-great-granddaughter of James Hoban, who, as architect of the White House and a personal friend of George Washington, was one of the original pillars of Capital society. Appropriately enough, Miss Alexander took her bow surrounded by fine portraits, fine silver. She herself carries on tradition, for her mother, the former Miss Elise Hoban, was another Washington debutante. Miss Alexander was graduated from the Convent of the Sacred Heart last June.

Miss Nancy Lee Masten

A full schedule at Vassar, where she is a sophomore, claims Miss Nancy Lee Masten in her more serious moments. She is another of this year's crop of debs who is combining college and coming-out, a trend which is growing more and more widespread. Miss Masten will make her debut on December 30 at a tea to be given by Mrs. Landon P. Banfield, at the latter's home in Bethesda, Md. That evening Mrs. Masten will entertain at a buffet supper for her daughter and for those who will assist at the tea. Miss Elizabeth Meyers

Her mother, Mrs. Howard Meyers, and her aunt, Mrs. Arthur T. Mann, will entertain jointly at the tea on December 3 when Miss Elizabeth Meyers makes her debut. After the tea there will be a dinner-dance at the Chevy Chase Club. Although no definite date has yet been set, Mrs. Mann also plans to fete her niece at another party in January. Miss Meyers, who at present is very busy with Red Cross work, took the "Grand Tour" last summer, traveling up and down and across Europe as a prelude to her debutante season.

Miss Elinor Gudger

Miss Elinor Gudger, the daughter of Capt. Emmet C. Gudger, U. S. N., and Mrs. Gudger has been in the limelight before. Last August she officiated at the coming-out party of the Navy ship, Helena, which was launched at Kearny, N. Y., after she had tapped it with a bottle of champagne. Now she is due for her own coming-out party, a tea dance, scheduled for December 20. Tomorrow she will fete other debutantes at a luncheon at the Gudgers' quarters at the Navy Yard. Miss Gudger, who is a student at Mount Holyoke, is a granddaughter of the late Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana.

Miss Margaret Cotter

Miss Margaret Cotter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Cotter, is one of the "sister-teams" billed for the debutante season this year. Because she is tops among the Capital's leading horsewomen, her friends are accustomed to seeing her in riding clothes and are just beginning to grow used to her in the formal frocks she is donning as a deb. Participating in the show at Madison Square Garden several weeks ago, she brought a handful of blue ribbons back to town. She will be presented at a tea dance at the Mayflower on Januarv 2.

Miss Joan King

Another debut party during the Christmas holidays will be that of Miss Joan King, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Walter W. King, of McLean, Va. Miss King, who is a student at Sweet Briar, where she is majoring in chemistry, will make her debut on December 29. Before entering Sweet Briar she attended the Potomac School, the Madeira School and Georgetown Visitation Convent.

Miss Mary Alice White

Miss Mary Alice White, still another Vassar girl, arrived in town from school yesterday to join in on the debutante whirl-around for the Thanksgiving holidays. She will be presented at a tea on December 3 and will also be feted at a ball at the Sulgrave Club on December 22.

With her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Stanley White, she spends most of her summers on their estate near Leesburg, Va., where she is interested in riding and where she has three horses of her own and her own jumping ring. Last summer, however, before going down to Leesburg, she spent a brief time in Europe.

Miss Fontaine Fahnestock

Washington society which is accustomed to feting its debutantes in the autumn and early winter, last May received invitations for the presentation party of Miss Fontaine Fahnestock, daughter of Snowden Fahnestock and Mme. Under a marquee on the terrace, Hungarian Gypsy musicians from New York played from 11 o'clock until well into the morning. Miss Fahnestock, who at present is with her mother in Brussels, speaks several languages, and is interested in riding and tennis.

Miss Mary Boyden

"Slipping out," rather than making a formal bow, is Miss Mary Boyden, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Boyden, who make their home in Prince Georges County, Md. She will be feted at a luncheon here some time, come Christmas.

At the present, she is studying voice at Peabody Institute in Baltimore, and attending, between do-re-mi's, the various parties of the debutante set.

Miss Marjorie Sherley

Choosing the Thanksgiving holidays for her debut party, Miss Marjorie Sherley will be presented at a tea tomorrow by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Swagar Sherley. Both of Marjorie's sisters made their bows here, coming out also on November 25.

Miss Sherley, whose father served for 16 years as a member of Congress from Kentucky, is now studying at the Phillips Gallery Art School. She is a graduate of the Madeira School.

Miss Nancy Hoskinson

Miss Nancy Hoskinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hilleary Hoskinson, is another debutante who will wait until December to make her official appearance. She will bow at a tea at her parents' home on Observatory Circle on December 10. Then on either December 20 or 21 she will be feted at a dance. She is a graduate of Holton-Arms.

Miss Beatrice Talley
Miss Carolynn Talley

Two more sisters who are making their debuts together this year are the Misses Beatrice and Carolynn Talley, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Talley. They will be presented on December 21. Both are students at Vassar, where Carolynn is a senior and majoring in chemistry, while Beatrice is a sophomore and specializing in economics.

Miss Jane Eustis

Few debutantes, if any, will have a more glamorous setting for their formal bow than Miss Jane Eustis, who will be presented at the Mardi Gras in New Orleans. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Chotard Eustis, who formerly lived in the bayou city of wrought-iron balconies and old French families. Between now and the Mardi Gras she will be feted at a number of informal teas and luncheons to be given by her friends. She attended Holton-Arms and then went on to Vassar.

Miss Margaret Lewis Byrd

The triple-threat bud of the season is Miss Margaret Lewis Byrd, whose name alone is enough to assure her social fame. Not at one affair but at three will she "come out," thus setting a record for 1938-1939. She will curtsy at the Commonwealth Club in Richmond tomorrow and at the Bachelor's Cotillion in Baltimore on December 5. Before this dance at which the most exclusive debutantes win their spurs, she will be the guest of honor at a dinner to be given by Mrs. Alexander Gordon, of Baltimore. Her Washington presentation, under the aegis of Mrs. Henry Flood, will conclude her triumvirate of triumphs. Miss Byrd, a direct descendant of Princess Pocahontas and of Betty Washington Lewis, the sister of George Washington, is the daughter of Thomas Bolling Byrd, of Winchester, Va., and the late Mrs. Margaret Lewis Byrd. She is the niece of Rear Admiral Richard Byrd and of Senator Harry Byrd. A graduate of Gunston Hall, she has already been extensively feted in Winchester and Warrenton.

Hessler Studio.

Miss Margaret Townsend

Pretty and tallish is Miss Margaret Townsend, the debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Effingham Townsend. One of the most widely feted belles of the season, Miss Townsend will make her formal bow at a tea which will take place during Christmas week. The party will be given by her great-aunt, Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, the Grand Duchess of musical Washington

Underwood & Underwood.

Miss Lalla Harrison

Another debutante from the hunt country to join the younger set in Washington for this season is Miss Lalla Harrison, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. Powell Harrison, of Leesburg, Va., and granddaughter of the late Dr. Brice Worthington Goldsborough, of Maryland. She will be presented at the Bachelor's Cotillion, although already she has been feted informally in Leesburg. The Harrisons have closed their place in Virginia and will be in Washington for the winter.

Hessler Studio.

Miss Jacqueline Meredith

Miss Jacqueline Meredith, although she is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Payne Meredith, of Washington, will not have her formal bow here but will be presented to society at the Bachelor's Cotillion in Baltimore. She was graduated from the National Cathedral School in June. "Jacky's" hobbies run mostly to sports—riding, playing tennis and swimming.

Miss Wilkinson attended the Madeira School and last year studied at Petite Ecole in Florence, Italy. She is now taking a course in art at American University and also finding plenty of time to participate in the season's round of parties for the younger set.

Miss Roberta Quirk

Miss Roberta Quirk, another college-bred debutante (she's a freshman at Goucher in Baltimore and expects to major in history), will be presented at a tea dance at the Mayflower on December 23. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Quirk, of Chevy Chase.

She prepared for Goucher at the Convent of the Sacred Heart and at the Madeira School.

Though she may not make a formal debut at all, it is more than likely that Miss Elise Hill, daughter of Mrs. Hiram Bingham, will be on hand when the band strikes up and the stag line appears at the Bachelor's Cotillion on December 5. Her mother is the former Miss Suzanne Carroll, of Baltimore, and a descendant of the famous Charles Carroll, of Carrollton, Md., so that makes the Cotillion practically a prophecy. At any rate, to quote Mrs. Bingham, Elise will "come out mildly" and is being feted at a number of small parties, rather than at one large affair.

Miss Margaret Fontaine Craighill

Miss Margaret Fontaine Craighill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Bowdoin Craighill, will be deb-of-the-day on December 19 when she is presented at a tea dance at the Chevy Chase Club.
